India, Germany elevate strategic partnership with wide-ranging agreements

Chancellor Merz, who was accompanied by a high-level delegation including 23 leading German CEOs and industry leaders, made his first official visit to India and his first trip to Asia since assuming office, underlining the priority Germany places on India as a key strategic partner in the Indo-Pacific. The visit came at a landmark moment in bilateral relations, with India and Germany having completed 25 years of Strategic Partnership in 2025 and marking 75 years of diplomatic relations in 2026.

PM Modi welcomed the German Chancellor in Ahmedabad, where the two leaders paid floral tributes to Mahatma Gandhi at the Sabarmati Ashram and participated in the International Kite Festival, highlighting the cultural dimension of the visit. They also jointly addressed the India-Germany CEOs Forum, engaging with business leaders to encourage greater investment and industrial collaboration. Chancellor Merz is scheduled to visit Bengaluru, with engagements focused on technology and innovation. During restricted and delegation-level talks held on January 12, the two leaders reaffirmed shared democratic values, commitment to a rules-based international order and mutual respect as the foundation of the Strategic Partnership.

They reviewed progress in bilateral relations and exchanged views on regional and global developments.

Defence and security cooperation

The leaders agreed to further strengthen defence and security cooperation, welcoming progress made through institutionalised staff talks, service-level exchanges and joint exercises. They endorsed deeper military-to-military cooperation, including training, port calls and senior-level exchanges, and welcomed the establishment of a new Track 1.5 Foreign Policy and Security Dialogue.

India welcomed Germany's participation in major defence engagements, including Naval Exercise MILAN, the Indian Ocean Naval Symposium Conclave of Chiefs in February 2026, Air Combat Exercise TARANG SHAKTI later this year, and Germany's decision to deploy a Liaison Officer to the Information Fusion Centre-Indian Ocean Region.

Both sides also welcomed the signing of a Joint Declaration of Intent to develop a Defence Industrial Cooperation Roadmap, aimed at promoting long-term collaboration through co-development, co-production and technology partnerships. The leaders reiterated their strong condemnation of terrorism in all its forms, including cross-border terrorism, and pledged to enhance cooperation in counter-terrorism, including through UN mechanisms.

Trade, economy and technology

Highlighting strong economic ties, the leaders noted that bilateral trade in goods and services surpassed USD 50 billion in 2024, accounting for over a quarter of India's trade with the European Union. They reaffirmed support for concluding the India-EU Free Trade Agreement, describing it as a key outcome of the upcoming EU-India Summit and a catalyst for unlocking further economic potential.

Several agreements and declarations were signed to boost cooperation in semiconductors, critical minerals, telecommunications, digitalisation, artificial intelligence and innovation. The leaders welcomed plans to establish institutional dialogue across the semiconductor value chain and deepen collaboration in research and development.

Green and sustainable development

Both leaders reviewed progress under the Green and Sustainable Development Partnership (GSDP), noting that nearly 5 billion of Germany's 10 billion commitment up to 2030 has already been utilised or earmarked for projects in renewable energy, green mobility, climate-resilient infrastructure and sustainable urban development. They welcomed new funding commitments and the launch of joint working groups on battery storage, solar manufacturing and wind energy.

The leaders also emphasised cooperation on green hydrogen, including alignment between India's National Green Hydrogen Mission and Germany's National Hydrogen Strategy, and welcomed a major green ammonia offtake agreement between Indian and German companies.

Two former PNB officials sentenced in Rs 4 crore fraud case

New Delhi, Jan 12: A CBI court has convicted and sentenced two former Punjab National Bank (PNB) officials in connection with a Rs 4 crore fraud at the bank's Jor Bagh branch in New Delhi.

Kulvinder Kaur Johar, ex-chief manager and branch head, and Ranjiv Suneja, ex-senior manager, were each sentenced to three years of rigorous imprisonment and fined Rs 75,000. PNB's former panel advocate, Narendra Singh Parihar, received two-and-a-half years' imprisonment with a Rs 50,000 fine. The sentencing was pronounced on January 9. The case, registered by the CBI on July 11, 2013, involved a conspiracy to fraudulently secure a cash credit facility of Rs 4 crore using forged property and KYC documents. The loan proceeds were diverted for purposes other than those sanctioned.

According to the investigation, Sanjeev Dixit, proprietor of M/s Shankar Metals, colluded with the PNB officials and advocate Parihar to fraudulently obtain the cash credit. The funds were siphoned off through fake bank accounts of fictitious firms, the CBI said.

Following trial, the court convicted Johar, Suneja, and Parihar, while private individuals Rahul Sharma and Rajeev Sharma were acquitted. The prime accused, Sanjeev Dixit, has been declared a proclaimed offender and remains at large.

Elderly man dies after firecracker factory blast in South 24 Parganas

Kolkata, Jan 11: One of the four individuals critically injured in a powerful explosion at a firecracker manufacturing unit in West Bengal's South 24 Parganas district has died, police confirmed on Sunday. The deceased, identified as 70-year-old Gouhari Ganguly, passed away around 1.30 am while undergoing treatment at MR Bangur Hospital in Kolkata. Ganguly had suffered nearly 80 per cent burn injuries in the incident. A senior Kolkata Police official stated that Ganguly was among those most severely injured and could not survive despite medical intervention. The remaining three victims — Gour Gangopadhyay, Kishan Mandal and Rahul Mandal — continue to be in critical condition, doctors said. The explosion took place on Saturday at Haral village in the Champahati area under the jurisdiction of Baruipur Police Station. According to police sources, investigations are ongoing, and the owner of the firecracker unit has reportedly gone into hiding.

Following the blast, the Fire Department was alerted, and at least one fire engine was immediately dispatched to control the blaze. Additional Superintendent of Police of Baruipur Police District, Rupantar Sengupta, said authorities are probing the exact cause of the explosion.

Local residents reported hearing a loud blast from the unit, where several workers were engaged in manufacturing firecrackers at the time. The force of the explosion was so intense that a portion of the structure collapsed, and a large nearby tree caught fire. Police personnel rushed to the scene after being informed and arranged for the injured to be taken to Baruipur Super Speciality Hospital. They were later shifted to MR Bangur Hospital for advanced treatment.

Former CBI officer's wife duped of Rs 2.58 cr in fake stock market scam

Hyderabad, Jan 12: In a shocking case of cyber fraud, the wife of former CBI Joint Director and retired IPS officer VV Lakshmi Narayana was allegedly cheated of Rs 2.58 crore by online scammers posing as stock market investment experts.

The fraud reportedly took place between December 24, 2025 and January 5. The victim, Urmila, a resident of Banjara Hills, approached Hyderabad cybercrime police after realising that the investment platform she was using was a sophisticated scam. According to police, the fraud involved a carefully planned strategy of social engineering and psychological manipulation. In November, Urmila received a WhatsApp message promising unusually high returns through stock market trading and was subsequently added to a group titled "Stock Market Profit Guide Exchange 20".

PBEL City celebrates Pongal with rural Tamil traditions

PBEL City at Peeramcheruvu came alive with the vibrant spirit of rural Tamil Nadu as the Tamil diaspora celebrated Pongal with traditional fervour and gaiety. More than 2,000 families participated in the two-day festivities, recreating the atmosphere of village Pongal celebrations away from their native places.

The celebrations featured Kho-Kho competitions, colourful cultural programmes, a village fair experience, a bull-cart display and a traditional Tamil-style Pongal feast, drawing enthusiastic participation from residents of all age groups.

Priyanka Reghuraman, Secretary of the Tamil Association, said the event was not just a festival celebration but also a platform to strengthen community bonding and pass on Tamil culture and traditions to the younger generation.

Residents of PBEL City have been celebrating Pongal in a traditional Tamil style for the past five years. One of the organisers, Prasanna Ganesh, said that due to work commitments and school schedules, many families are unable to visit their native villages. "To keep our cultural roots alive, we decided to bring the essence of village Pongal celebrations and fairs into our residential community," he said.

Congress-expelled MLA Rahul Mamkootathil arrested in third sexual assault case

Palakkad, Jan 11: Congress-expelled MLA Rahul Mamkootathil was arrested late on Saturday night in connection with a sexual assault case registered in Palakkad, police sources said on Sunday.

According to Kerala Police, Mamkootathil was taken into custody from a hotel in Palakkad around which is already probing two similar cases against Mamkootathil, has also been entrusted with the investigation of the latest case, sources told.

Mamkootathil was reportedly staying at a hotel in Palakkad when he was detained and subsequently brought to Pathanamthitta for further proceedings. Earlier, the Kerala High Court had granted him interim protection from arrest in the first case, which involves allegations of rape and forcing a woman to undergo an abortion. In the second case, a sessions court in Thiruvananthapuram had granted him anticipatory bail. Following the serious allegations, the Congress party expelled Mamkootathil from its ranks. Investigations in all the cases are currently underway.

Grazing on the Margins: Why Pastoralists and Rangelands Deserve a Place at the Centre

Imagine a form of livelihood that requires no factories, no irrigation, and no massive infrastructure. It contributes to food security, biodiversity, renewable economies and even climate resilience. It's deeply ecological, quietly productive, and astonishingly widespread. Now imagine it being ignored for over a century.

Across India, close to 10-12 million people and their animals traverse mountains, plains, and deserts, doing what they've done for generations – moving with the rhythms of the seasons in search of grass, water, and opportunities to market their goods. These are pastoralists – managers of one of India's most misunderstood livelihood system and keepers of over 40% of the country's livestock genetic diversity. And yet, for all their contributions, both they and the grazing lands they depend on remain invisible in national policy making and discourse. Misunderstanding pastoralism and grasslands

To be fair, pastoralism can feel like a bit of a mystery. The whole business of people and livestock moving around, refusing to settle down into neat categories , does not sit easily with our understanding of “modern” production systems. Pastoralism ought to have made way for agriculture and then closed shop. Is evolutionary logic appropriate to assess whether pastoralism survives or not? But regardless of whether it survives, we pretend it doesn't exist. Neither pastoralists nor the rangelands where they graze their animals are quantified, understood or even properly enumerated. As for rangelands, they are most often labelled as “wastelands” – a term that suggests not only neglect but a policy green light for takeover by industry, agriculture, or, more recently carbon-sequestering tree plantations. All this, despite the fact that these ecosystems are home to some of India's rarest biodiversity and form the ecological backbone of our dryland ecosystems.

The roots of this problem go deep. Colonial-era foresters, trained in the temperate woods of Europe, looked out at India's scrublands and savannas and saw absence — of trees, of timber and of the potential for revenue. In came the plantations and out went the herders. The British administrative mindset, with its love of neat borders and settled cultivation, was flummoxed by pastoral mobility, which seemed outdated, inefficient and unproductive. Never mind that pastoralists had evolved precisely the kind of adaptive, mobile systems that one would now call climate-adaptive. Their centuries-old knowledge of landscapes, forage and weather patterns was dismissed as backward. The irony is that these systems, derided for their unpredictability, are now being hailed, at least by researchers and civil society organisations, as ‘models of resilience’ in a world of climate chaos. Pastoral mobility, it turns out, is not a bug or a glitch but an integral feature of this extensive production system. It allows herders to track changes in weather and navigate across landscapes that fluctuate wildly in productivity. Where settled agriculture falters under erratic rainfall, pastoralists make do by being on the move. It's not aimless wandering, it's a finely calibrated migration.

Despite this, pastoralists find themselves hemmed in on all sides. Common lands have shrunk and commercial crop agriculture has taken over. Forests have turned into conservation fortresses that shut out the people who once helped maintain them. And now, in the name of climate mitigation, one of our many pledges include greening 26 million hectares, much of which will likely come from open ecosystems wrongly assumed to be barren or “wastelands”. The prevailing logic seems to be: if it doesn't have trees, plant some. But many of these grasslands are naturally treeless ecosystems. Introducing trees can not only damage these fragile ecologies but also displace the pastoralists who rely on them. Economies and ecology in plain sight All this while, the pastoral economy continues to feed us, largely unrecognised and under-appreciated. By the estimates of our team of researchers at the Centre for Pastoralism, the annual value of just the sheep and goat economy in India is Rs 589 billion. Pastoralism, at large, could be valued closer to Rs 1,650 billion – more than India's national education budget and nearly 3% of the agricultural GDP. This includes meat, milk, wool, pashmina, and dung (yes, dung!), all of which flow through informal value chains that rarely make it to NITI Aayog reports or Ministry of Agriculture briefings.

EditTrump: When 'Ego-Mania' Trumps Rationality

US President Donald Trump is bent on wrecking the global system, just as he is wrecking the US political system. He has become all powerful internally and he wants to be all powerful externally, too. Internally, the constitutional checks and balances system is not working; externally, his depredations remain unchecked. Despite the rise of China and the revival of Russia as a power, the US is once again becoming unilateralist on the global stage under Trump. He has arbitrarily imposed tariffs on all countries in flagrant violation of WTO rules. He is using tariffs as a weapon to extract not only trade and investment concessions from others but also political ones. This is the case with India, on which he has imposed an additional 25% penalty tariffs for buying Russian discounted oil. Trump is rejecting multilateralism. Sure, his predecessors also did that, but he is doing it more scornfully. Earlier, he had walked out of the Paris Climate Change Agreement, the WHO, UNESCO and the UN Human Rights Commission, among other bodies. He has now decided to quit 66 international organisations, including many UN-related ones, the important ones being related to climate change such as the UNFCCC and the IPCC, as well as trade and economic development-related ones such as UNCTAD and the ECOSOC. Trump disparages renewable energy. He dismisses as a hoax the very idea of climate change, disregarding totally the serious concerns of the international community about the phenomenon. This also reflects US unilateralism on a very sensitive issue. Behind this are the interests of the US oil industry, which are strong backers of Trump and the Republican Party. This explains Trump's enthusiastic reference to the slogan "Drill baby Drill" in his inaugural address in January 2024, pressure on Europe (and India, too) to buy American LNG, sanctions on the Russian oil industry, and, more dramatically, his most recent adventure of attacking Venezuela and abducting President Nicolas Maduro with the expressed intention of taking control of Venezuelan oil reserves, which are the world's biggest. Trump wants to become the dominant oil power in the world. He has made the legally bizarre claim that America owns Venezuelan oil because the infrastructure was developed by American companies in the first instance. Venezuelan oil, according to him, will be shipped to and marketed internationally by the US. The proceeds will be spent as decided by Trump himself, with Venezuela spending what is allocated to it to buy only American products. The aggression against Venezuela is the 'Trump Corollary' to the US revived Monroe Doctrine spelt out in the National Security Strategy 2025. The US Secretary of State, Marco Rubio, has questioned why Venezuela should sell its oil to China - which bought 50% of the country's oil last year - Russia and Iran, forgetting that the United States used to be the main buyer of Venezuelan oil but following sanctions, China became the main destination in the last decade. (Venezuela owes about $10 billion to China after the latter became the largest lender under late President Hugo Chavez). Trump's unilateralism was also dramatically reflected in his recent interview with The New York Times, where, in the background of his attack on Venezuela violating international law, he said most presumptuously, "I don't need international law." When asked if there were any limits on his powers on the world stage, he said, "My own morality. My own mind." That means a business morality and an inconsistent mind. As part of his power play, he intends to let the New Start Treaty expire, closing the chapter on US-Russia agreements to end the arms race. With his announcement of an Iron Dome for the entire US and a $1.5 trillion defence budget for 2027, a new arms race and strategic instability could well be the result. That Trump, with his aggression against Venezuela and the kidnapping of its President - as well as his determination to acquire Greenland by force if necessary - should still feel entitled to the Nobel Peace Prize and accuse Norway for making a big mistake in not awarding it to him, shows how totally unconcerned he is about how others judge him. He says he will accept Venezuelan Opposition Leader Maria Machado's bizarre offer to hand over to him her Peace Prize for 2025. The Norwegian Nobel Institute has ruled this out as the prize cannot be transferred to others, though the prize money can. Trump again asserted that he had solved eight conflicts (including repeating his claim to have stopped the India-Pakistan conflict) and should therefore be eligible theoretically for eight Nobel Peace Prizes! It continues to rankle him that Obama obtained the Nobel Peace Prize undeservedly. Trump continues to talk down at Modi and India patronisingly, and even offensively, quite unmindful of the damage he is doing to India-US ties. He has made the absurd claim that knowing that he was unhappy, Modi tried to (console him) "make him happy" by stopping the purchase of Russian oil and asked "Sir, may I see you", as if a deferential subordinate was wanting to see his boss. The MEA spokesperson has countered this by clarifying that both leaders address each other with mutual respect as per diplomatic norms. The arch-warmonger, Senator Lindsey Graham, standing alongside Trump in Air Force One, congratulated him for green lighting the new Russia Sanctions Bill that would impose 500% tariffs on those countries that buy Russian oil such as Brazil, India and China, and elicited the remark from the US President that it was easy to impose tariffs on India. This casual way of dealing with what has become a very sensitive issue between the two countries shows how unbothered he is about the reaction in India and also implies a readiness to increase tariffs on India if required.

Folk festival of change of seasons: Lohri and the arrival of the new season

PRIYANKA SAURABH

India's folk traditions are not just festivals; they are living expressions of society's collective memory, understanding of nature, and philosophy of life. These traditions may change over time, but at their core, they preserve the relationship between humans and nature. Lohri, celebrated in North India, is one such folk festival, symbolizing the departure of winter and the arrival of spring. This festival not only announces the change of seasons but also announces a changing chapter in life's outlook—where warmth follows chill, light follows darkness, and new energy follows stagnation. The festival of Lohri celebrates the cycle of nature, where every pause yields movement, and every difficulty yields possibility. This festival reminds us that life isn't just a struggle, but the relief and hope that come after struggle are just as real. This is why society has made it not just a one-day celebration, but a festival of collective emotion. Lohri's origins are deeply rooted in agricultural life. When a farmer in North India sees greenery in his fields after sowing the Rabi crops, he is filled with hope. The lush crops of wheat, mustard, and gram signal prosperity in the times to come. Lohri celebrates that hope. This festival honors the farmer's hard work, patience, and faith in nature. Gathering around a fire and offering sesame seeds, jaggery, peanuts, and rewadi is not merely a religious ritual, but a collective expression of gratitude to nature. Here, fire symbolizes purification—a resolve to burn away the cold, hardship, disappointment, and failures of the past and move forward. In folk life, fire not only provides warmth, it also fosters unity. People standing around a fire on a cold night warm not only their bodies but also their minds. Folk tales and folk songs play a special role in the Lohri tradition. The story of Dulla Bhatti transforms Lohri from a mere seasonal festival to a symbol of social consciousness. Dulla Bhatti's character underscores the value of standing up against injustice, protecting the weak, and respecting women. This folk tale demonstrates that folk culture is not only a medium of entertainment but also a source of moral education. The Lohri festival teaches the village community the lesson of collectivism. Rich and poor, young and old, men and women—all stand together around the fire. It is a moment of equality, where social distinctions melt away for a moment. Folk songs have a collective voice; the protagonist is not alone—the entire community participates in them. Lohri is also a cultural occasion for children. When children listen to folk songs from elders, learn stories, and participate in traditions, they not only celebrate but also connect with their roots. This is the greatest power of folk traditions—they maintain communication between generations. But over time, the nature of festivals has also changed. Urbanization, consumerism, and a culture of ostentation have impacted folk festivals. Today, in many places, Lohri is becoming a personal performance rather than a collective event. Loud music replaces traditional folk songs, ostentation replaces simplicity, and unnecessary expenditure replaces a natural-oriented celebration. This weakens the essence of the festival. This change isn't bad in itself, but the problem arises when meaning is lost. If festivals are reduced to mere photos, videos, and social media content, they cease to be folk culture. The soul of folk festivals resides in participation, simplicity, and collective memory, not in commercial decorations. Today, festivals like Lohri need to be celebrated with environmental sensitivity and social inclusion. In an era of increasing pollution and resource scarcity, it's crucial to avoid unnecessary fuel, plastic, and noise. The simplicity of folk festivals is their greatest beauty. Additionally, these festivals can be used as a means of learning for children. They should be taught that Lohri is not just a festival of fire and song, but a celebration of the farmer's labor, the cycles of nature, and community life. When children understand the meaning of traditions, they not only observe them but also carry them forward. The arrival of spring marks not just a change of season, but a rebirth of hope. The longer days after cold and long nights also energize people mentally. Nature returns to color, flowers bloom, and life finds pace. Lohri celebrates this change—it teaches us that life is not static; after every darkness comes light. In today's stressful and uncertain times, folk festivals take on even greater significance. They give us a chance to pause, gather, and share collective joy. At a time when life is increasingly driven by competition and isolation, such folk festivals remind us of community life. Ultimately, Lohri teaches us that tradition survives when it communicates with the times—remaining relevant in new contexts while upholding its values. Simplicity, collectivism, respect for nature, and a positive outlook on life—if these sentiments persist, every Lohri can become not just a festival but a source of new energy for society. The Lohri bonfire not only burns away the cold, it also dispels despair, loneliness, and inertia. This is why this folk festival is as relevant today as it was centuries ago. This folk celebration of the changing seasons reminds us that change is inevitable in life, and every change brings with it the possibility of a new beginning.

Anatomy of a Political Raid: From Lalu to Mamata

Has Mamata Banerjee done something “absolutely unforgivable” by raiding the raiders of the Enforcement Directorate (ED) at the office of the Indian Political Action Committee (IPAC), a private election consulting agency, and by hitting the streets of Calcutta on January 9? At least, the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party's cadres and supporters are vociferous in asserting that the West Bengal chief minister has broken “constitutional norms” by stalling the ED's action against money laundering and corruption under her governance, and they are gunning for her head. Yet, they find it difficult to convince the larger electorate in this election-bound eastern state – and India at large – that the ED raided IPAC's office solely to bust corruption, its primary mandate. Despite its numerical strength in Parliament, the ruling dispensation has been unable to create a consensus among neutral experts and the wider public about its so-called “war against corruption.” However, the purpose of this article is not to investigate allegations of corruption against Banerjee, the BJP's principal political opponent, or that against Suwendu Adhikari and others of his ilk, who were charged by the ED and the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) when they were in the Trinamool Congress but secured reprieve after joining the BJP. The purpose, rather, is to understand how the Election Commission of India's special intensive revision (SIR) and India's premier investigating agencies appear to have been timed and synchronised with the BJP's electoral strategy to corner its opponents and win elections – not only in Bengal but across the country. In this light, Mamata Banerjee's “misadventure” or “street fight” in Calcutta, and even her use of “cuss words” against the BJP's top brass, can also be read as an expression of frustration and helplessness in the face of an opponent making all-out efforts to delegitimise her mandate and snatch power in her home state. One may list the options she might have taken instead: taking a delegation to the governor and submitting a memorandum against the ED; approaching the Election Commission of India to complain that the investigating agency was sabotaging her electoral strategy under the garb of fighting corruption; challenging the ED's action in a court of law. But the fact remains that she belongs to an enormously large section of Indians who are rapidly losing faith in the neutrality of constitutional institutions – including the investigating agencies, the election commission, and the governors. It would be imprudent to place the judiciary in the same bracket, but by its very nature the judiciary takes time and depends on investigating agencies that have already lost much of their credibility. The Yashwant Sinha route By hitting the streets with thousands of people on January 9, Banerjee has done exactly what the former BJP stalwart, now in the TMC, Yashwant Sinha, had urged the Congress and other opposition parties to do after the Bihar election results of November 2025. In an interview with journalist Neelu Vyas for her digital platform, Sinha – a former Indian Administrative Service officer of repute – said: “There is no iota of doubt that the Bihar election has been rigged. The only option for the opposition parties, including the Congress, is to hit the streets, get arrested, and not pray for bail. Let the government put you in jail as long as it wishes. The people will eventually find a way to liberate them and save the Constitution that its founding fathers gave them.” He went on in the same vein: “I used to take pride in my pedigree as an IAS officer. But I feel ashamed when I see Gyanesh Kumar, also an IAS officer. Gyanesh Kumar is a disgrace to the IAS... The opposition must bring an impeachment motion against him in Parliament, even if it is defeated.” Sinha had been principal secretary to former Bihar chief minister Karpoori Thakur before relinquishing his post to enter public life. He joined the Janata Dal and later became finance minister in the Chandra Shekhar government.

Cinépolis India expands its cinema advertising business, partners with It's Spotlight to operate digital screens across 100+ properties

Hyderabad, January 12, 2026: Cinépolis India is expanding into cinema advertising with a nationwide deployment of digital screens across its lobby spaces. India's only international exhibitor has appointed It's Spotlight, a digital out-of-home (DOOH) media company, to operate and commercialize the inventory. The deployment covers over 350 LED screens, video walls, and digital displays across Cinépolis's 101 cinemas in 63 cities spanning 23 states and Union Territories. Speaking about the partnership, Devang Sampat, Managing Director, Cinépolis India, said: "Cinema environments offer advertisers access to audiences in a focused, lean-forward setting which is distinct from outdoor and transit media. As DOOH grows and advertisers look for environments beyond cluttered digital and social platforms, cinema offers a differentiated proposition to reach young and urban audiences. With this partnership we are looking at unlocking this opportunity while staying focused on our core business of exhibition." According to the EY-FICCI M&E Report 2024, India's out-of-home advertising segment reached ₹5,920 crore in 2024, with digital OOH expected to grow from 12% to 17% of total OOH revenues by 2027. Virkaran Singh, Founder & Director, It's Spotlight, said: "Cinema screens sit at the intersection of attention, intent, and experience, creating strong opportunities for brands to connect with a premium, highly engaged audience. This partnership allows advertisers to access a powerful yet largely untapped market, supported by programmatic capabilities, real-time analytics, and performance-linked execution across Cinépolis properties.

With a presence across 23 states, brands can achieve national scale through a single buy with measurable results." Advertisers will have access to programmatic buying, campaign optimization, and performance metrics including impressions, audience profiles, and footfall data.

About Cinépolis India

Two Spectacular Days of Cinema Conclude as 3rd Niri9 International Film Festival Ends on a High Note

Hyderabad, January 12, 2026: The third edition of the Niri9 International Film Festival concluded two remarkable days (10th Jan & 11th Jan 2026) of cinematic excellence, creative exchange, and cultural celebration. Hosted at Prasad Film Labs and Raj Bhavan Samskruti Auditorium, the festival emerged as a vibrant platform that brought together filmmakers, artists, industry veterans, and cinema enthusiasts from across India and abroad. The two-day festival showcased an impressive range of films across Feature Films, Short Films, Shorter Films, and Documentaries, reflecting diverse voices, themes, and cinematic styles. From socially charged narratives to experimental storytelling and globally acclaimed features, the carefully curated lineup deeply engaged audiences and sparked meaningful conversations. Shri M Dana Kishore, IAS, Special Chief Secretary to the Governor was present as the Chief Guest of the event. Smt C Priyanka,

Managing Director of Telangana Film Development Corporation was present as Special Guest. Other dignitaries present during the closing ceremony included Shri VN Aditya, Senior Director & Chairman, National Film Awards; Shri Ashok Kumar, Actor & Director; Shri Ajitah Surabhi, Principal of SVFFA, among others. One of the major intellectual highlights of the festival was the panel discussion held on Day 2, featuring eminent personalities such as Seema Biswas, Carlyta

Mouhini, Manoj Nandwana, Jadumoni Dutta, Dr Padmini Nagulapalli, Satish, Y Ravi Shankar and Dr Junmoni Devi Khaund, the festival director. The session was moderated by Sunitha Krishnan. The discussion witnessed insightful conversations on cinema as a tool for social change, independent filmmaking, representation, and the evolving landscape of storytelling in the digital era. It also deliberated upon film production, co-production, and distribution, both nationally and globally.

The category-wise winners of the film festival are as follows:

Best Actor (Female): Akanksha Yadav (Ghar)
Best Child Artist(s): Nihar Kashyap, Sanidul Islam, Manik Ali (Kuhipath)

Go Colors solidifies its southern India presence with a new flagship store in Hyderabad's A.S. Rao Nagar, inaugurated by actress Niharika Konidela

Hyderabad, 12th January 2026: Go Colors, India's leading women's bottom wear brand is strengthening its foothold in Southern India by launching its newest flagship store, spreading across a massive area of 4,430 sq.ft. in Hyderabad's A.S. Rao Nagar - a popular retail destination in the city. Another significant leap forward in Go Colors' retail scaling trajectory, the store was inaugurated by popular actress Niharika Konidela. Located in Dr. A.S. Rao Nagar, one of Hyderabad's well-developed residential and commercial hubs, the store enjoys excellent connectivity, strong street visibility, and a thriving neighbourhood ecosystem. The location also serves as a strategic testing ground for Go Colors' expansion across similar residential-led markets in the city, and the launch aligns with Go Colors' mission to offer fashion that is comfortable, versatile, expressive, and inclusive. Designed as a one-stop destination, the Dr. A.S. Rao Nagar outlet showcases the brand's complete portfolio across women's Indian and western wear, men's wear and its signature bottomwear range. Customer insights played a key role in selecting this location. The area attracts a diverse mix of consumers with a strong preference for everyday ethnic and western wear, making it ideal for highlighting Go Colors' wide assortment of colours, fits and fabrics. The store caters to men and women across age groups, sizes and body types, with silhouettes crafted for daily wear, work, leisure and special occasions. Thoughtfully designed to offer a great shopping experience, the store blends modern aesthetics with functional planning. Its spacious, airy layout allows for easy navigation and comfortable browsing, while clearly defined category zones make product discovery intuitive. Enhanced mannequin styling, well-planned planograms and intuitive displays elevate visual appeal, complemented by comfortable trial rooms and seating areas that create a relaxed, immersive, and seamless shopping experience.

Ola Electric rolls out Shakti, its first battery energy storage system

New Delhi: Ola Electric on Monday announced the rollout of its first battery energy storage system, Shakti, from its manufacturing plant in Krishnagiri, Tamil Nadu. Shakti marks the company's entry into the country's residential BESS (battery energy storage system) market and takes the company beyond the automotive domain, the Bengaluru-based firm said in a statement. It represents a fundamental shift in how Indians will access, control, and consume energy, as a portable, on-demand resource designed for modern Indian households, farms, and businesses, it added. "The rollout of Shakti from our Gigafactory is a defining moment in our mission to build the future of energy in India. With Ola Shakti, we have reimagined how India will store and consume energy," a company spokesperson said. Powered by the company's indigenous 4680 Bharat Cell, Ola Shakti makes reliable, affordable, and intelligent energy storage accessible to every Indian home, farm, and business, the spokesperson added. Unlike conventional lead-acid inverters or diesel generators, Shakti operates across a wide input voltage range of 200V-240V protecting appliances from voltage fluctuations, and is spill-proof with IP67-rated batteries tested for dust, water, and monsoon conditions, the company said. Ola Shakti is available in four configurations — 1 k W / 1 . 5 k W h , 1 k W / 3 k W h , 3kW/5.2kWh, and 6kW/9.1kWh and can power air conditioners, refrigerators, induction cookers, farm pumps, and communication equipment, with charging times as fast as 2 hours and backup capacity of up to 1.5 hours on full load. The product is available for reservation on the Ola Electric website at Rs 999, it said.

Trump mulls 'very strong' military options as hundreds killed in Iran protests

President Donald Trump says the US military is considering "very strong options" in Iran, as anti-government protests which have reportedly killed hundreds enter a third week. The US-based Human Rights Activist News Agency (HRANA) says it has verified the deaths of nearly 500 protesters and 48 security personnel in Iran, while sources tell the BBC the death toll could be much higher. Trump has threatened to intervene, and said on Sunday that Iranian officials had called him "to negotiate" - but added "we may have to act before a meeting". Iranian leaders have described the demonstrators as a "bunch of vandals", and called on their supporters to take part in pro-government marches on Monday. The government has also announced three days of mourning for what it called "martyrs" killed in a "national battle against the US and Israel" - two countries that Tehran says are fomenting unrest. Anger over the plummeting value of the Iranian currency sparked protests in late December, which have grown into a crisis of legitimacy for Iran's Supreme Leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. Trump has not yet elaborated on what the US is considering in terms of military options, nor on the proposed negotiations, despite saying that a "meeting is being set up" with Iranian officials. He added that Iranian leaders "want to negotiate", because "they are tired of being beat up by the United States". A US official told the BBC's US news partner CBS that Trump has been briefed on options for military strikes on Iran. Other approaches could include boosting anti-government sources online, using cyber-weapons against Iran's military, or imposing more sanctions, officials told the Wall Street Journal. Sources told the BBC that protests continued on Sunday night, but at a reduced level compared to previous days, as fears grow of an escalating crackdown by the Iranian government. At least 10,600 people have been detained over the fortnight of unrest, according to HRANA. The BBC counted 180 body bags in footage from a morgue near the Iranian capital, with one source saying on Sunday that the streets of Tehran were "full of blood". "They're taking away bodies in trucks," the source added. In one video from the site near Tehran, about 180 shrouded or wrapped figures can be seen, the majority lying out in the open. Shouts and cries of distress can be heard from people who appear to be looking for their loved ones. Footage has been blurred to protect the identities of the living, who could face further persecution from the authorities. Sources said large numbers of bodies had accumulated at hospitals and forensic facilities, while some bodies were reportedly buried urgently before dawn by the authorities, limiting the chance for identification. City workers have also removed debris, burned cars and bloodstains from the streets during the night, a source told the BBC. Multiple sources in Iran also said that they had seen drones flying persistently over crowds and residential neighbourhoods to identify and track protesters. The BBC and most other international news organisations are unable to report from inside Iran, and the Iranian government has imposed an internet shutdown since Thursday, making obtaining and verifying information difficult. Some witnesses are relying on Starlink proxy connections or satellite television for information, but fear that these could be used by the authorities to trace them. "We cannot even send text messages," one source in southern Iran told the BBC, as a blanket internet outage continued. "Only the government is sending threatening messages to people." Trump said on Sunday that he would speak to Elon Musk, owner of company SpaceX which operates Starlink, about restoring internet access to Iran.

THOUSANDS OF TOURISTS STRANDED IN LAPLAND AS COLD GROUNDS FLIGHTS

HUNGARY GRANTS ASYLUM TO POLISH EX-JUSTICE MINISTER

Hungary has granted political asylum to Poland's former Justice Minister Zbigniew Ziobro who is facing charges of embezzlement. Ziobro is facing 26 charges related to embezzling money from a fund meant to be spent on crime victims and rehabilitating criminals. Instead, he is accused of authorising the purchase of spyware that was allegedly used to hack political opponents' phones. He says he is a victim of political persecution. Granting asylum to a citizen of a fellow EU member state goes against the spirit of EU standards. But in the case of Hungary it is neither new nor surprising. Ziobro is the second politician of the former Justice and Law-led government to be granted this status - last year it was his former deputy Michal Romanowski who fled to Budapest to seek protection. Both are accused of corruption and misusing their power - most notably by using the money of the state-controlled Foundation for Justice which was under their oversight in order to fund their party and its cronies. Ziobro was justice minister between 2015 and 2023 under the previous right-wing PiS-led government, which is politically aligned to Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban. If found guilty he could face up to 25 years in prison. Writing on X, Ziobro said: "I have decided to accept the asylum granted to me by the government of Hungary due to the political persecution in Poland." "I have chosen to fight against political banditry and lawlessness. I stand in opposition to a creeping dictatorship," Ziobro added, accusing Prime Minister Donald Tusk of waging a "vendetta" against him. Ziobro is accused of authorising a 25m zloty ($7m; £5.15m) purchase from of Israeli-made Pegasus spyware, which Poland's current coalition government and a European Parliament investigative team found was used to secretly hack the phones of political opponents.

CUSTODY EXTENDED FOR OWNER OF SWISS SKI BAR AFTER DEADLY FIRE

A judge in Switzerland has ordered that one of the two co-owners of the ski resort bar where 40 people died in a fire on New Year's Eve be kept in detention for 90 days. Swiss prosecutors have argued that Jacques Moretti, a French national, is a potential flight risk. He and his wife Jessica, who is also French, are suspected of manslaughter by negligence, bodily harm by negligence and arson by negligence. The blaze at Le Constellation bar in Crans-Montana also left 116 people injured. Many of the victims were aged under 20. The fire is believed to have been started by sparklers in champagne bottles raised too close to the ceiling during celebrations. Authorities acknowledged last week that the bar in the popular ski resort had not undergone safety checks for five years. Jacques Moretti was first detained on Friday for an initial period of 48 hours. On Monday, a judge at what is known as a court of coercive measures ruled that he should be kept in custody for three months - a period that can be renewed under Swiss law.

Referee and student among hundreds killed in Iran protests

A referee and a student are among hundreds of people reportedly killed during massive anti-government protests in Iran. Coach Amir Mohammad Koohkan, 26, was hit by live ammunition on 3 January during protests in the town of Neyriz, his friend told BBC Persian. "Everyone knew him for his kindness", they said, adding his family is grieving and "angry because he was killed by the regime". Five days later, student Rubina Aminian, 23, was shot from behind during a protest in Tehran, according to human rights groups. "She fought for things she knew were right", her uncle told CNN. Nearly 500 protesters and 48 security personnel have been killed in two weeks of protests, a US-based rights group says. Sources in Iran have told the BBC the death toll is likely higher than reported. Demonstrations began on 28 December over the economy in the capital Tehran and have spread to 186 cities and all 31 provinces, according to the Human Rights Activist News Agency (HRANA). The protests have grown into the largest in years, with calls for an end to the Islamic Republic and rule of Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. The protests led to a government crackdown, with at least 10,600 people reportedly arrested and 496 protesters killed, according to HRANA. Medical staff in Iran have described hospitals overwhelmed with dead and injured patients. BBC Persian verified that 70 bodies were brought to Poursina Hospital in Rasht city on 9 January, and the BBC counted 180 body bags in footage from one morgue near Tehran thought to have been filmed on the same night. The BBC and most other international news organisations are unable to report from inside Iran, and the Iranian government has imposed an internet shutdown since Thursday, making obtaining and verifying information difficult. Among the protest victims was Koohkan, who was killed in Neyriz in south-west Fars Province, his friend told BBC Persian.

Fed chair Powell hits out at 'unprecedented' probe by US justice department

Federal prosecutors have opened a criminal investigation into Federal Reserve chair Jerome Powell, he said on Sunday. In a highly unusual move, Powell disclosed that the US Department of Justice (DoJ) served the agency with subpoenas and threatened a criminal indictment over testimony he gave to a Senate committee about renovations to Federal Reserve buildings. Calling the probe "unprecedented", Powell said he believed it was opened due to Donald Trump's anger over the Fed's refusal to cut interest rates despite repeated public pressure from the president. Trump said he did not "know anything" about the investigation. The DoJ has been contacted for comment. Until now, the long-running feud between Trump and Powell has been largely one-sided with the US president calling the banker "Mr. Too Late" and a "numbskull". Powell's statement on Sunday is the first time he has publicly and robustly pushed back against Trump as he warned that the independence of the US central bank is at stake. "This is about whether the Fed will be able to continue to set interest rates based on evidence and economic conditions, or whether instead monetary policy will be directed by political pressure or intimidation," Powell said. "I have deep respect for the rule of law and for accountability in our democracy. No one, certainly not the chair of the Federal Reserve is above the law, but this unprecedented action should be seen in the broader context of the administration's threats and ongoing pressure," he went on to say. Trump said in an interview with NBC News on Sunday that he did not have any knowledge of the DoJ's investigation into the Fed. "I don't know anything about it, but he's certainly not very good at the Fed, and he's not very good at building buildings," he said of Powell. The Fed is undertaking the first renovation of two buildings, the Eccles and 1951 Constitution Avenue buildings, since their construction in the 1930s. The "overhaul and modernisation" of the buildings includes health and safety work such as the removal of asbestos and lead contamination.

JAILED VENEZUELAN POLITICALIAN'S SON SAYS TRUMP SHOULDN'T BE 'FOOLED' BY PLEDGE OF PRISONER RELEASES

The son of a jailed Venezuelan opposition leader has warned Donald Trump to "not be fooled" by the country's government, amid accusations it has not kept its promise to release a significant number of political prisoners. Ramón Guanipa, the son of Juan Pablo Guanipa, said he believed the US president was unaware that only about 40 releases out of more than 800 political prisoners had reportedly been confirmed so far. On Saturday, Trump thanked the Venezuelan authorities, saying they had "started the process, in a BIG WAY". The Venezuelan government announced on Thursday it would release detainees considered political prisoners by human rights groups as a "goodwill gesture". The move came after the US seized Venezuela's President Nicolás Maduro in a raid on the capital, Caracas, on 3 January, and took him to New York, where he has been charged with drug trafficking. Jorge Rodríguez, Venezuela's National Assembly leader and the brother of Interim President Delcy Rodríguez, announced that an "important number of Venezuelan and foreign detainees" would be released "immediately". On Monday, the government said more than 100 such prisoners had already been released - a number far greater than the figure so far confirmed by human rights campaigners. Among those who are confirmed to have been released are several high-profile opposition figures - with Spain's foreign ministry confirming that five Spanish citizens had been freed, including human rights lawyer Rocio San Miguel. Trump claimed credit for the releases, writing on social media on Saturday: "I hope these prisoners will remember how lucky they got that the USA came along and did what had to be done." But relatives of those still behind bars have been expressing their frustration that only a small number of prisoners have been freed.

Chalamet beats DiCaprio to Golden Globes glory

Timothée Chalamet was among the main winners as Hollywood's finest gathered for this year's Golden Globe Awards. Chalamet, 30, continued his pursuit of greatness, and an Oscar, by beating stars including Leonardo DiCaprio and George Clooney to the award for best actor in a musical or comedy for table tennis caper Marty Supreme. Despite DiCaprio missing out, his film One Battle After Another won the most awards overall, with four prizes including best musical or comedy film and best director. Irish actress Jessie Buckley was named best drama actress for Hamnet, which also scored a surprise win in the best drama film category. Vampire thriller Sinners had been considered the frontrunner, but it instead went home with the box office achievement prize as well as best score. The Golden Globes are a key stop on the road to the Academy Awards, and other acting winners on Sunday included Teyana Taylor, Rose Byrne, Wagner Moura and Stellan Skarsgård. Unlike the Oscars, the Globes also reward TV shows, and the night saw British actors Stephen Graham, Owen Cooper and Erin Doherty pick up more honours for their performances in Netflix drama Adolescence. With all eyes on the Oscars race, Timothée Chalamet's victory has given him a boost over his rivals. "I'm in a category with many greats," he said when accepting his trophy. It was Chalamet's fifth Globes nomination, but his first win. "My dad instilled in me a spirit of gratitude growing up, always be grateful for what you have," he said. "It's allowed me to leave this ceremony in the past empty handed, my head held high, grateful just to be here. But I'd be lying if I didn't say those moments make this moment that much sweeter. "For my parents, for my partner, I love you so much," he added, looking at girlfriend Kylie Jenner.

Jessie Buckley was named best actress for her role in the adaptation of Maggie O'Farrell's best-selling novel Hamnet, about the death of William Shakespeare's son. "This is not a normal feeling or situation to be in," she said in her acceptance speech. "It was such an extraordinary set to be part of, because we were telling the story of probably the most famous Brit that ever lived, and we had a Chinese director, a lot of Irish, a mostly Polish crew, beside our British family." She concluded: "This is a real honour, I love being part of this industry." Shortly afterwards, Hamnet director Chloe Zhao looked visibly shocked when the movie was announced as the winner of best drama film. Accepting the prize, producer Steven Spielberg said he had "loved the book" by O'Farrell, but felt Zhao was "the only filmmaker on the face of the planet who could tell the story". Zhao said: "The village of Hamnet that made this film together. Some of them lost their loved ones while we were making this film, and some of them are still struggling, and I just wanted to say we're thinking of you, we're here because of you, we love you." Elsewhere, singer and actress Teyana Taylor, whose career started when she choreographed a Beyoncé music video at the age of 15, cemented her Hollywood breakthrough by winning best supporting film actress for One Battle After Another. After tearfully thanking a list of people, she used her acceptance speech to send a message to "my brown sisters and little brown girls watching tonight". "Our light does not need permission to shine," she told them. "We belong in every room we walk into. Our voices matter and our dreams deserve space." Swedish actor Stellan Skarsgård, 74, won best supporting actor for Sentimental Value, and joked that he hadn't prepared a speech "because I thought that I was too old".

"No Problem If Pakistan, UAE Host Bangladesh's T20 World Cup Matches": Top Government Official On Venue Row

Less than a month remains for the 2026 T20 World Cup to start, yet there is uncertainty over Bangladesh's four group-stage matches in India (three in Kolkata and one in Mumbai). Bangladesh does not want to play in India, citing a 'security threat' in the country. The tussle began after the release of Bangladesh pacer Mustafizur Rahman from IPL franchise Kolkata Knight Riders on the instructions of the BCCI for unspecified reasons. The Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) has asked the International Cricket Council (ICC) to shift its matches to Sri Lanka (the hosts of the tournament). In the meantime, a report in Geo Super claimed that the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) has now shown interest in hosting the Bangladesh games. Bangladesh government's

Sports Advisor Asif Nazrul, known for his hardline stance against India, has reacted to the report. He was responding to a question on whether the BCB would accept a proposal where Bangladesh matches are shifted from Kolkata and Mumbai to another Indian city. "We are talking about India, we are not talking about Kolkata. If the venue is changed from India to Sri Lanka, there is no issue. I saw a report, which I don't know is true or not, that claimed Pakistan has offered to host our matches. No problem if Pakistan or UAE host our matches," Nazrul said on Wednesday. Nazrul also claimed that the Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) has received a letter from the ICC's security team. Following is what Nazrul said in a press conference on Monday: "We are yet to receive any reply to the two letters sent to ICC. Also, in the meantime, the ICC security team, those in charge of security, have given a letter to the BCB. In that letter, it is said that if three things happen, the security threat to the Bangladesh team will increase: If Mustafiz is included in the Bangladesh team. If the supporters of the Bangladesh team roam around wearing the national jersey of Bangladesh, which is our national jersey. As the national elections are forthcoming, the security threat to the Bangladesh team will increase." This statement by the ICC security team has proven that Bangladesh is in no position to play the T20 World Cup in India." The ICC is yet to confirm or deny the existence of the letter from its security team. According to sources, this letter was part of an inter-departmental note, and not ICC's official response to BCB over its request to relocate its T20 World Cup matches from India.

Shikhar Dhawan Gets Engaged To Sophie Shine

Former Indian cricket team star Shikhar Dhawan confirmed his engagement to long-time girlfriend Sophie Shine on Wednesday. "From shared smiles to shared dreams. Grateful for the love, the blessings, and every good wish for our engagement as we choose togetherness forever - Shikhar & Sophie," Dhawan wrote in the caption of an Instagram post, which featured a photo of the two wearing their engagement rings. According to reports, Dhawan is set to marry Sophie Shine in February. The ceremony is likely to take place in the third week of February in Delhi-NCR, with big names from both the cricketing world and Bollywood expected to attend. Preparations for the lavish ceremony are already underway, though no further details have emerged. Reports suggest that Sophie worked as a product consultant and holds a degree in Marketing and Management from the Limerick Institute of Technology. While cricketing celebrities are often linked with personalities from the world of social media and entertainment, Sophie's case is quite different. The Ireland-born professional has an academic background at Castleroy College, with credentials that can impress anyone. She currently serves as Second Vice President at Northern Trust Corporation, based in Abu Dhabi. Sophie completed all her education in Ireland. She now heads the Shikhar Dhawan Foundation, the philanthropic arm of Da One Sports. Sophie has close to 341,000 followers on Instagram and has been posting pictures and videos with Shikhar for a while now. She was spotted with Dhawan on multiple occasions, watching cricket matches with the former India opening batter, but the news about their relationship status was only confirmed after the southpaw himself made it public.

Afghanistan's Mohammad Nabi Blasts Reporter Over Mustafizur Rahman-KKR IPL Controversy

Former Afghanistan captain Mohammad Nabi lashed out at a reporter over a question surrounding the Indian Premier League (IPL) controversy involving Bangladesh pacer Mustafizur Rahman and the Kolkata Knight Riders (KKR). KKR released Mustafizur from their squad for IPL 2026 following directives from the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI). While a lot has been said and written about KKR and Mustafizur, a Bangladeshi reporter, during a press conference, asked Nabi about the controversy. Nabi, who is currently playing for Noakhali Express in the Bangladesh Premier League (BPL), lost his cool at the journalist, saying that he has nothing to do with the controversy.

"Iska merese kya lena dena bhai. Mera Mustafizur se kya kaam hai? Politics me kya kaam hai mera? (What do I have to do with it? How am I related to Mustafizur? I don't have anything to do with politics)," Nabi responded. The veteran all-rounder insisted that he shouldn't have been asked about the controversy in the first place. "I know he is a good bowler, all these things. But the way you are questioning, it's not related to me," he added. The 30-year-old drew significant attention after KKR acquired him for a record Rs 9.20 crore at the December mini-auction, making him the highest-paid Bangladeshi cricketer in IPL history. He was purchased from a starting bid of Rs 2 crore amid a fierce bidding war between the Chennai Super Kings and the Delhi Capitals. The decision to release Mustafizur was made following reports of violence against members of the Hindu community in Bangladesh in December. Additionally, critics had voiced their disapproval of Rahman's involvement in the IPL. The 30-year-old player has claimed 65 wickets over 60 matches, maintaining an economy rate of 8.13 since his IPL debut with Sunrisers Hyderabad in 2016. He has represented several franchises: Mumbai Indians in 2018, Rajasthan Royals in 2021, Delhi Capitals during 2022-23, and Chennai Super Kings in 2024.

Shubman Gill Told To Follow Virat Kohli's 'Single-Mindedness' By Ravi Shastri: 'It Is A Routine'

Indian cricket's next generation is being reminded that talent alone isn't enough to reach the top; discipline and obsession matter just as much. Ahead of India's ongoing ODI series against New Zealand, former India head coach Ravi Shastri highlighted the unparalleled work ethic of Virat Kohli, saying that young captain Shubman Gill should chase that same drive to take his own game to the next level. Shastri said Kohli's excellence stems not just from talent, but from a daily routine of hard work, discipline, and an unyielding focus on the "little things" that often go unseen—the kind of habits that build champions over time. Shastri made these remarks during commentary on the first ODI between India and New Zealand in Vadodara, where Gill and Kohli batted together early in the innings. He didn't dwell on technique or batting mechanics; instead, he talked about Kohli's obsession with cricket, pointing out how the veteran goes above and beyond in training, fielding drills, and fitness work, day after day. That kind of "single-minded hunger," Shastri said, sets a standard that rising stars like Gill can learn from as leadership responsibilities grow. "The single-mindedness, the hunger. The willingness to push that body to the limits. And I have seen that in my time when I was with the team, his work ethics probably second to none. I have seen just the way he goes about his job.

CARRICK FAVOURITE FOR MAN UTD CARETAKER ROLE

Michael Carrick has emerged as favourite to be appointed Manchester United caretaker head coach, according to sources close to the process. Club chiefs are hoping to have an appointment in place for when players return to training on Wednesday. While a final decision is yet to be reached, talks are said to have progressed with the 44-year-old over the position. Carrick previously had a three-game stint as United's temporary boss following Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's dismissal in 2021. He won two and drew one of those matches but left after Ralf Rangnick's arrival as interim manager. Solskjaer held face-to-face discussions with the club on Saturday about a return. United sacked Ruben Amorim as manager after 14 months in the job on 5 January. Darren Fletcher, a former United and Scotland midfielder, was initially handed temporary responsibility for first-team affairs following Amorim's departure. United suffered an FA Cup third-round defeat at the hands of Brighton on Sunday in what looks set to be Fletcher's second and final game in charge. He led the side to a draw at struggling Burnley in the Premier League last Wednesday. Former England midfielder Carrick played 464 games in all competitions for United between 2006 and 2018, having been signed from Tottenham by Sir Alex Ferguson. He has been out of work since he was sacked by Championship club Middlesbrough last June after two and a half years in charge. Carrick guided Boro to the Championship play-offs in the 2022-23 campaign, only for them to lose to Coventry in the semi-finals. His side then narrowly missed out on the top six in successive campaigns, resulting in Carrick losing his job. Wallsend-born Carrick does not boast the same managerial experience as Solskjaer, given he has had only one permanent role with Middlesbrough

Washington Sundar Ruled Out Of New Zealand ODIs Due To Injury. This Star Receives Maiden Call-Up

Indian cricket team all-rounder Washington Sundar was ruled out of the ongoing ODI series against New Zealand due to injury, BCCI confirmed on Monday. Sundar reported an acute onset discomfort in his left lower rib area while bowling during the first ODI at the BCA Stadium, Vadodara, on Sunday. The BCCI said that he will undergo further scans, following which the BCCI Medical Team will seek expert opinion. Ayush Badoni received his maiden call-up as he was named replacement for the all-rounder. The BCCI said that Badoni will link up with the squad in Rajkot ahead of the second ODI encounter on Wednesday. India registered a four-wicket win after successfully chasing down a target of 301 in 49 overs against New Zealand in Vadodara on Sunday, with captain Shubman Gill and Virat Kohli playing pivotal roles in the run chase. Gill led from the front with a composed 56 off 71 balls, which included three fours and two sixes, anchoring the innings at the top. He found solid support in Kohli, who was the standout performer of the chase, scoring a fluent 93 off 91 deliveries to steer India close to the target. Reflecting on the win, Gill emphasised the importance of contributing during a chase and staying mentally grounded. "Always feels great to chip, especially when you're chasing. Staying in the present is most important, esp for athletes. That's what I try to do," Gill said after the match, as quoted from ESPNcricinfo. The India skipper was full of praise for Kohli, acknowledging the difficulty of batting on the surface. "At the moment, Kohli's making batting look easy, it's tough to start on these pitches. Tough to replicate what he does. Hope he keeps piling on runs," he added. Gill also spoke about the team's bowling combinations and the decision-making around squad rotation, given the limited number of ODIs. "Arshdeep did well last series, (Mohammed) Siraj wasn't there, we want to keep rotating as there aren't that many ODIs," he said, explaining the rationale behind giving opportunities to different players.

BCB Breaks Silence On Bangladeshi Umpire Officiating During 1st India vs New Zealand ODI

A Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) official stated that umpire Sharfuddoula Ibne Shahid Saikat did not need a No Objection Certificate (NOC) from the board to officiate in the first ODI between India and New Zealand in Vadodara on Sunday. Saikat's involvement in the match comes as the BCB has requested the International Cricket Council (ICC) to shift its T20 World Cup 2026 matches out of India, citing "security concerns." While the BCB remains steadfast in its stance regarding the T20 World Cup, Umpire Department Chairman Iftekhar Rahman clarified contracted umpire, the BCB has no authority to prevent him from officiating matches in India. "He (Saikat) is an ICC-contracted umpire, and we are stating clearly that he is not contracted with us (BCB)," Iftekhar told Cricbuzz. "Our contract stipulates that whenever he has an ICC assignment, he is automatically on leave from his duties with us. I don't need to issue any NOC. The contract states that if he has any ICC engagement, he must be automatically released. I have no authority to decide whether to grant permission or not," he added. Implications for the T20 World Cup Saikat and Gazi Sohel are expected to feature as match officials during the upcoming T20 World Cup. It is likely that the ICC will cite Saikat's current presence in India in its response to the BCB's "security concerns," using it as a precedent to encourage the Bangladesh team to travel to India for the tournament. BCB President Aminul Islam Bulbul confirmed that the board has yet to receive a response from the ICC regarding its concerns about playing in India. He reiterated that the BCB's position remains

'PGA TOUR FACES HUGE DILEMMA OVER KOEPKA RETURN'

How should the PGA Tour react to Brooks Koepka's application to rejoin its lucrative and prestigious circuit of tournaments? Within days of leaving the breakaway LIV Golf League, the five-time major champion signalled his intention to switch back to the leading establishment tour by reapplying for membership on 9 January. Koepka, 35, left LIV one year early, wanting to spend more time with his family. But the Floridian, who remains eligible for all four majors courtesy of his 2023 US PGA Championship victory, is clearly keen to rejoin the tour he dramatically left four years ago. And for the PGA Tour this provides a huge dilemma. 'Get Koepka back ASAP' Koepka is the past decade's most prolific winner of men's majors and an attractive draw for sponsors, television and fans alike. Such appeal brought a gargantuan signing on fee from the Saudi Arabia-backed LIV organisation and his 2022 departure was a hammer blow for the PGA Tour. Of course they would love to have him back and readmitting Koepka would help the established order administer a painful retaliatory jab that could set up a potential knockout blow to the disrupting upstarts. By welcoming back someone with two US Opens and three US PGAs to his name, the PGA Tour might provide an encouraging return path for other stars such as Bryson DeChambeau and Jon Rahm when they near the end of their LIV contracts. "Does it make sense if Brooks wanted to play the PGA Tour again to get him back as soon as possible? Absolutely," Masters champion Rory McIlroy recently told the Palm Beach Post. "What Brooks has done in the game of golf, it would be good for everyone to have him back." But McIlroy added: "You can't treat one person differently from how you treat others."

Prime Video Unveils the Gripping Trailer of its Latest Telugu Crime Thriller Movie Cheekatilo

A Prime Original movie, Cheekatilo is an edge-of-the-seat crime thriller, directed by Sharan Kopishetty, produced by D. Suresh Babu under the banner of Suresh Production Pvt Ltd, and written by Chandra Pemmaraju and Sharan Kopishetty Prime Video, India's most-loved entertainment destination, today unveiled a riveting trailer of Cheekatilo, an emotionally-charged Telugu crime suspense drama. Against the backdrop of a dynamic, fast-growing Hyderabad, the narrative follows Sandhya, a true crime podcaster portrayed by SOBHITA Dhulipala as she uses her podcast to uncover the two-decade-old secrets of a long-dormant serial killer. Directed by Sharan Kopishetty and produced by D Suresh Babu under the banner of Suresh Productions Pvt Ltd., the thrilling narrative is written by Chandra Pemmaraju and Sharan Kopishetty. The movie stars Sobhita Dhulipala and viswadev Rachakonda ,in lead roles, alongside Chaitnaya visalakshmi ,Esha Chawla , Jhansi,Aamani and Vadlamani Srinivas in pivotal roles. The Telugu movie will premiere exclusively on Prime Video across India and in over 240 countries and territories worldwide, on January 23. The trailer for Cheekatilo offers a gripping glimpse into Hyderabad's underbelly, where Sandhya—a criminology graduate and true crime podcaster—is drawn into a dangerous game of cat and mouse. The shocking murder exposes a trail of past crimes, setting off a tense pursuit of truth and justice. Using her podcast as an investigative tool, Sandhya attempts to challenge and draw out a cold-blooded killer. As the tension escalates, the narrative builds toward a chilling revelation. But will the truth come to light, or will Sandhya become the killer's next victim? Packed with suspense and emotion, the trailer sets the stage for a nerve-racking hunt that begins January 23, only on Prime Video. Sharan Kopishetty, director and co-writer of Cheekatilo, shared, "Directing Cheekatilo has been a deeply rewarding journey—one that pushed me to explore the darker, more human layers beneath a seemingly straightforward crime story. At its heart, this movie is more than a crime suspense—it is a reflection on resilience, the fight against silence and power, and the courage it takes to bring justice to the front. With the trailer now out, audiences can glimpse the tense, suspenseful world we have created. Partnering with Prime Video has been immensely rewarding, allowing us to bring this vision to a global audience, united by our commitment to bold, authentic, and relatable storytelling. The film's talented cast, with their exceptional performances, has been central in shaping this vision. I can't wait for viewers to experience it when it premieres exclusively on Prime Video on January 23." Sobhita Dhulipala, who plays the lead character of Sandhya in Cheekatilo, shared, "Playing 'Sandhya' has been a superb experience - she's a front-footed young woman who is an independent thinker, deeply committed to standing by her belief system no matter the resistance. Her choices are shaped by a unique stubbornness that has a history of its own. Playing a character rooted in the by-lanes of Hyderabad and other Telugu localities and coming from a cultural background as my real self, the integration between the character and my own expression was seamless and utterly enjoyable. Grateful for this wonderful experience and our exceptional cast and crew - everyone brought their heart to the set every single day. Being part of a Prime Original project is special in many ways. From Made in Heaven to now Cheekatilo, it has been an intentional and inspiring journey—our shared growth, commitment towards entertaining storytelling as well as the keenness to push the envelope each time is a rare joy. Looking forward for the audiences to see a different side of me as Sandhya when the movie premieres exclusively on Prime Video on January 23"

Archana Puran Singh diagnosed with ‘rare’ health condition, breaks down

Mumbai: In her latest London vlog, Archana Puran Singh, known for her infectious laughter on The Kapil Sharma Show, shared a deeply personal moment with her fans. Her son, Ayushmaan Sethi, paid tribute to her resilience amid her health struggles. Ayushmaan expressed his pride in his family, including his parents, brother, and even their dogs. However, it was Archana who topped the list, bringing her to tears. Ayushmaan's Praise for Archana Ayushmaan praised his mother for her strength and determination in the face of a tough year.

He spoke about how Archana broke her hand and developed a rare condition, Complex Regional Pain Syndrome (CRPS), which left her hand permanently damaged. Despite the pain, Archana shot for several movies and a web series, working tirelessly for 30 consecutive days without complaints. Ayushmaan also admired her for starting a YouTube channel at the age of 60, which he described as incredible. Archana's Emotional Response Visibly moved by her son's words, Archana choked up as she responded, "I am so proud of you. You didn't even mention yourself." She shared that while her children sometimes made her cry out of frustration, these were happy tears, filled with pride and gratitude. Archana's Health Struggles In 2025, Archana suffered a severe injury on the set of a film, which later developed into CRPS. The pain and slow recovery were documented in her vlogs, where she shared her struggles and determination to stay positive despite the challenges. The Family's Day in London After the emotional moment, the family ventured out to Borough

Market in London to sample local delicacies.
