Imphal (TSIT): At least three people were killed and several others injured in separate firing incidents involving armed groups from the Naga and Kuki tribal communities in Manipur's Ukhrul district on Friday, officials said. According to a police official, in one of the incidents near Mullam village in the violence-hit district, security forces recovered two bodies. AAP MPs have cited several reasons for leaving party: HM Amit Shah

New Delhi, April 24 : Union Home Minister Amit Shah said on Friday that the decision taken by AAP MPs from Rajya Sabha, including Raghav Chadha, to part ways with their party is based on several reasons cited by them.

HM Shah's remarks during an election rally in West Bengal coincided with Chadha announcing a divorce with the AAP and leading a three-member party Rajya Sabha MPs' team to meet BJP National President Nitin Nabin at the party headquarters here.

Chadha had cited the AAP "stepping away from honest politics" as a key reason behind the decision by him and six other AAP MPs from Rajya Sabha to merge their parliamentary faction with the BJP. The AAP has 10 MPs in the Upper House.

In a message on X, Chadha said, "Today, exercising the provisions of the Constitution of India, more than two-thirds of the AAP MPs in the Rajya Sabha have merged with the BJP. Seven MPs have signed the document, which was submitted to the Hon'ble Chairman of the Rajya Sabha. I, along with two other MPs, personally handed over the signed documents." Chadha was accompanied by Sandeep Pathak and Ashok Mittal during the meeting with BJP president Nitin Nabin, who offered sweets to the AAP MPs after they went public with their switchover plan. Earlier, addressing a press conference along with AAP MPs Mittal and Pathak, Chadha said, "We have decided that we, the 2/3rd members belonging to the AAP in Rajya Sabha, exercise the provisions of the Constitution of India and merge ourselves with the BJP." "The AAP that I gave 15 years of my life. Now the party has stepped away from honest politics. I am the right man in the wrong party. I am moving away from the party and going close to people," he said, adding that Rajya Sabha party colleagues like Harbhajan Singh and Swati Maliwal are among those parting ways with the AAP.

Sensex falls 983 points, Nifty slips below 24,000 as oil spike hits sentiment

Mumbai, April 24 : Indian equity benchmarks ended sharply lower on Friday as a surge in crude oil prices rattled investor sentiment amid rising geopolitical tensions linked to stalled US-Iran talks and disruption at the Strait of Hormuz. The Sensex dropped 982.71 points, or 1.27 per cent, to close at 76,681.29, while the Nifty declined 275.10 points, or 1.14 per cent, to settle at 23,897.95.

Commenting on technical outlook, experts said that on the upside, 24,000 has now emerged as a strong resistance band, as the previous support has transitioned into a supply zone, capping recovery attempts. "A decisive move above 24,000 is required to ease selling pressure and trigger a recovery towards 24,200, while a break below 23,800 could extend weakness towards the 23,600 level," an analyst stated. The sell-off was largely driven by weakness in information technology stocks, which bore the brunt of the decline.

Shares of Infosys, Tata Consultancy Services, and Tech Mahindra emerged as the top losers on the Nifty IT index, dragging the sector down by around 5 per cent. Broader markets also mirrored the weak trend, with the Nifty MidCap and Nifty SmallCap indices falling 0.96 per cent and 0.87 per cent, respectively. Among sectors, apart from IT, the Nifty Pharma and Nifty Media indices also ended in the red, adding to the overall market weakness. However, the Nifty Metal index showed relative resilience, posting the smallest decline among sectoral indices.

Right to speedy trial cannot be exercised to grant bail in NDPS case: Supreme Court

NEW DELHI: The Supreme Court on Friday said right to speedy trial is a precious constitutional right but it cannot be exercised to grant bail in matters governed by special enactment such as the NDPS Act, particularly where the recovery is of commercial quantity.

A bench of justices Sanjay Karol and Augustine George Masih made the observation while setting aside bail to two individuals by the Punjab and Haryana High Court in a case involving recovery of commercial quantity of heroin.

“The right to speedy trial, rooted in Article 21 of the Constitution, is undoubtedly a precious Constitutional right. That said, in matters governed by a special enactment such as the NDPS Act, particularly where the recovery is of commercial quantity, the said right under Article 21 must be exercised within the framework of Section 37 and cannot be pressed into service solely on the ground of delay to override it.

“The constitutional right under Article 21 and the special provision of law under Section 37, NDPS Act are to be read harmoniously and not placed in opposition to each other. The High Court, by failing to record its satisfaction on the twin conditions under Section 37, has in this court’s view, committed an error,” the bench said.

The top court said the impugned high court order reflects a lack of adequate consideration of the record as the accused himself admitted that ‘apart from the present case one more case FIR is there against him’.

“The High Court, however, has recorded that the respondent is ‘not involved in any other case’, and has expressly counted that recording among the considerations weighing in favour of the grant of bail.

“The recording of the High Court and the admission by the respondent are irreconcilable.

A Court while considering the prayer for bail under a special statute and attracting Section 37 of the NDPS Act could not have granted relief on grounds directly at odds with the admissions made by the respondent in the very petition before it. The said order being contrary to facts is flawed that speaks for itself as it appears that this fact was not brought to the notice of the High Court,” the bench said.

The apex court said the impugned high court order is conspicuously silent on the fact that the petition before the high court was the second petition under Section 483 of the BNSS, the first being dismissed as withdrawn.

“A Court entertaining a successive bail petition under a special statute is bound to refer to the fate of the earlier petition and to record what change in circumstances justifies a fresh consideration,” it said while setting aside the high court order and directing the accused to surrender within a week.

Noida International Airport appoints Nitu Samra as interim CEO

NEW DELHI: Noida International Airport on Friday announced the appointment of its Chief Financial Officer Nitu Samra as the interim Chief Executive Officer after authorities denied permission for foreign national Christoph Schnellmann to be at the helm.

“This change follows directions issued by the Bureau of Civil Aviation Security (BCAS) that the Chief Executive Officer of an airport in India is required to be an Indian national,” NIA said in a statement.

Samra will replace Schnellmann, a Swiss national who has led Noida International Airport (NIA) as the CEO since August 2020.

The regulatory issue related to the requirement of having an Indian national as CEO has been delaying the start of commercial operations of the airport, which was inaugurated by Prime Minister Narendra Modi on March 28.

Schnellmann will join the airport’s Board of Directors as Executive Vice Chairman. In this role, he will continue to support the project and its transition to operations, the statement said.

With immediate effect, NIA said Samra has been appointed as the CEO on an interim basis until the Board of Directors can conclude a formal selection process.

Samra has been serving as the CFO since October 2021 and was closely involved in the airport’s development journey, overseeing financial stewardship, governance, and strategic planning during a key phase of the project, the statement added.

NIA will be operated by Yamuna International Airport Pvt Ltd (YIAPL), a subsidiary of Zurich Airport International AG, under a public-private partnership.

Originally scheduled to commence passenger services in September 2024, NIA is being developed in four phases, along with a dedicated cargo terminal. It received an aerodrome license from the aviation regulator Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) in March.

YIAPL Chairman Daniel Bircher said that since the inauguration of the airport by the Prime Minister, the goal was to enable the start of operations as early as possible.

Nagpur man booked over objectionable remarks on Gadkari

NAGPUR: Police have registered a case against a Nagpur-based man for allegedly circulating an objectionable video on social media targeting Union Road Transport and Highways Minister Nitin Gadkari, officials said on Friday.

According to the officials, the accused has been identified as Ayush Rameshchandra Agarwal, a resident of Manewada.

The case was filed following a complaint by Sumitkumar Rakeshkumar Chauhan, who claims to be an office-bearer of the Akhil Bharat Hindu Mahasabha.

Police said Chauhan had come to Nagpur on April 18. While he was near the Yashwant Stadium, he came across a video posted on Facebook by a user named ‘SK Chavan’.

The video allegedly contained objectionable remarks about Gadkari, the Lok Sabha MP from Nagpur, they said.

Chauhan later approached the police and lodged a formal complaint, based on which the Dhantoli police registered an offence against Agarwal under relevant sections of law related to promoting offensive content on social media.

An official from the Dhantoli Police Station said, “We are verifying the video and the account from which it was circulated. Further investigation was underway.”

Kejriwal strayed from AAP’s founding principles, says MP after quitting party

NEW DELHI: Rajya Sabha MP Swati Maliwal, who on Friday announced her decision to quit AAP, alleged that the party under its national convener Arvind Kejriwal had strayed from its founding principles and shielded individuals involved in misconduct.

In a post on social media on X (formerly Twitter), Maliwal said she had chosen the path of national and public service in 2006.

She said, “From the RTI movement and the Anna movement to the formation of the Aam Aadmi Party and my eight years of dedicated service at the Delhi Commission for Women, I contributed with absolute honesty and devotion at every stage.”

“With great sorrow today, I must say that the principles, values and resolve for honest politics with which we began this journey have been abandoned by Arvind Kejriwal ji and, at his behest, the entire Aam Aadmi Party,” she added.

Recalling the incident which had taken place at Kejriwal’s official residence, Maliwal further alleged that she was subjected to “severe physical assault and gross misconduct” on his instructions and claimed that attempts were made to shield the accused.

She also accused the party leadership of allowing “rampant corruption”, promoting “criminal elements” and failing to address issues related to harassment and violence against women.

“Seeing the unchecked corruption growing in the Aam Aadmi Party under Kejriwal ji’s patronage, incidents of harassment and assault against women, the promotion of tuggish elements, and the betrayal and looting happening with Punjab, I have decided to leave the party today,” Maliwal declared.

In a massive jolt to AAP on Friday, seven of its Rajya Sabha MPs, including Raghav Chadha, Sandeep Pathak and Ashok Mittal, quit the party. Addressing a press conference, Chadha said that party MPs Harbhajan Singh and Swati Maliwal are also quitting the AAP.

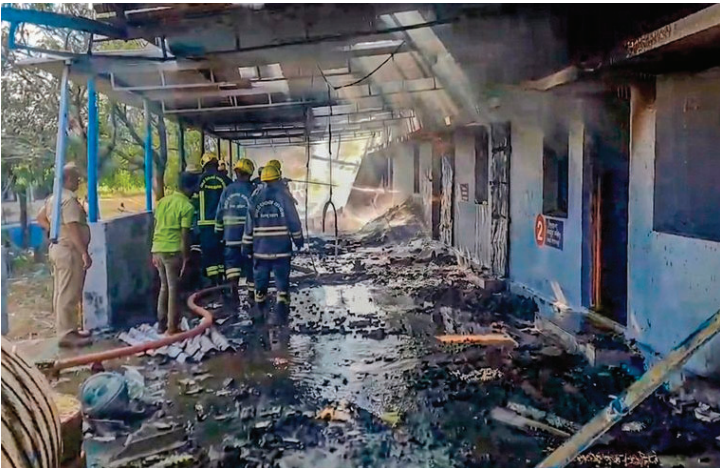

Maliwal said that she will be speaking on the matter in greater detail once she is in Delhi on Friday night.

NHRC notice to TN govt, Virudhunagar SP over deaths in blast at fireworks unit

NEW DELHI: The NHRC on Friday said it has issued a notice to the Tamil Nadu government and the Superintendent of Police of Virudhunagar, in the wake of an explosion at a private firecracker manufacturing unit in that district in which several lives were lost.

At least 23 people were charred to death, and a few others sustained grievous injuries following a massive explosion at the unit near Virudhunagar on April 19, local police had said.

The National Human Rights Commission in a statement said it has taken suo motu cognisance of a media report that several workers died and six others were injured in an explosion at a private firecracker manufacturing unit in the Kattanarpatti area of Virudhunagar district of Tamil “Reportedly, more than 100 workers including women were present at the factory complex when the incident occurred on April 19. The blast was allegedly triggered due to friction during the chemical mixing and manufacturing process. Reportedly, in a recent similar incident in the district, four persons had died,” it said.

The Commission has observed that the content of the news report, if true, raises serious issues of human rights violations of the victims.

Therefore, it has issued notices to the chief secretary of Tamil Nadu and the Superintendent of Police, Virudhunagar, seeking a detailed report on it within two weeks, it said.

The report should include the status of health of the injured persons, investigation of the case and compensation, if any, has been paid to the next of kin of the deceased and the injured persons, the rights panel.

In a separate statement, the NHRC sought a report on the explosion at a thermal power plant in Chhattisgarh, which killed 13 workers and injured 20 others on April 14.

It gave two weeks to the state’s chief secretary and the director general of police to submit the report, expecting details on the status of the disbursement of compensation to the affected workers and the health of those injured.

The NHRC also took suo motu cognisance of a media report which said that two girl students died after an iron gate of a government primary school collapsed upon them in Odisha’s Gajapati district on April 15.

Reportedly, the incident occurred when the girls were playing near the school entrance.

It issued notices to Odisha chief secretary and Gajapati superintendent of police seeking a detailed report on it within two weeks.

AAP strong alternative in Gujarat, will win Rajkot civic polls: Sisodia

RAJKOT: Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) leader Manish Sisodia on Friday said that his party has emerged as a strong alternative in Gujarat and will sweep the upcoming Rajkot Municipal Corporation election.

Speaking to reporters here on the last day of campaigning for the April 26 polls, Sisodia accused the BJP-led state government of systematically weakening public hospitals and governance over the last 30 years.

Elections to local bodies in Gujarat, including 15 municipal corporations, will be held on April 26, and votes will be counted on April 28. “AAP has now emerged as a strong alternative. This time it will win in the Rajkot Municipal Corporation,” the former deputy chief minister of Delhi said. He targeted the ruling party, alleging that the condition of government schools in Rajkot is

While some school buildings had undergone improvements after AAP raised the issue, the quality of education remains poor, he said, and accused the government of weakening public hospitals and the overall system over the last 30 years. Schools, hospitals, and governance systems have systematically deteriorated, Sisodia claimed, asserting that people now have an alternative which they will use in elections.

The senior AAP leader also participated in a roadshow with a large number of supporters and party workers in Rajkot.

More than 4.18 crore voters will be eligible to exercise their franchise in the local body polls, which will cover 34 district panchayats, 260 taluka panchayats, and 84 municipalities, besides 15 municipal corporations.

Modi biggest brand ambassador for Bengal’s tourism: Abhishek Banerjee

HOWRAH: Senior TMC leader Abhishek Banerjee on Friday took a swipe at Prime Minister Narendra Modi, saying he had inadvertently become the “biggest brand ambassador” for West Bengal tourism by showcasing the state’s Ganga ghats, roads and street food during campaign visits.

Addressing election rallies in Jagatballavpur and Domjur assembly constituencies in Howrah district, Banerjee said Modi’s public appearances, including eating muri on a pavement in Jhargram and walking along the Ganga, had done more to promote the state than official tourism campaigns.

“If Bengal had not been promoted this way -- how beautiful the Ganga is, how developed the roads of Jhargram are -- people of the country would not have known or understood. The biggest brand ambassador for tourism of Mamata Banerjee’s Ma-Mati-Manush government is Narendra Modi,” he said.

“The road he walked on was built by Mamata Banerjee’s government, the footpath was laid by Jhargram municipality, and the boy selling muri has his home in Bihar, where Modi’s own double-engine government rules. He has come to Bengal out of economic compulsion,” Banerjee said in an apparent dig at the BJP’s governance record in its alliance states.

The TMC leader said BJP leaders were “exposing themselves” without any help from the opposition.

“They came to change Bengal, but they are changing themselves,” he said.

Banerjee invited BJP leaders to visit the state throughout the year, not just during elections, to enjoy its street food such as ‘phuchka’, ‘jhal muri’, rolls and ‘kachuris’.

Targeting Union Home Minister Amit Shah, Banerjee said he had advised him to “drink more water and keep a cool head” in view of the summer heat and early indications after the first phase of polling.

Referring to the first phase of polling, Banerjee expressed confidence that TMC’s performance would mirror its 2021 sweep, saying, “The party has crossed a century.”

A TMC spokesperson at a media conference claimed the party was leading in over 125 of the 152 seats that went to the polls on Thursday, while Shah put his party’s estimate at over 110 seats.

Both parties have claimed that they would win by a landslide, following the first phase of polling, which saw nearly 93 per cent turnout, the highest since Independence.

At an election rally at Canning Paschim, Banerjee also dismissed allegations that he used inappropriate language against Shah, saying he had only advised the home minister to drink more water in the summer heat and challenged him to stay in Bengal till May 4 noon.

“I have not used a single bad word against anyone. I only said it is very hot, drink more water. If you have the courage, stay in Bengal on May 4 noon,” he said, adding that the results would separate “milk from water.”

‘Gaddars’: Punjab CM Bhagwant slams AAP MPs who quit party

CHANDIGARH: Punjab Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann on Friday dubbed AAP’s Rajya Sabha members, who quit the party and announced joining the BJP, as “gaddars” (traitors).

Addressing a press conference here, Mann alleged that the BJP was trying to break the AAP and had “betrayed the people of Punjab.”

When they did not find anything against Bhagwant Mann, they tried to break AAP, said Mann, who returned on Friday after nearly a week-long visit to the Netherlands and Finland to attract investments for his state.

They are perturbed why Mann is becoming the leader of people, Mann said, hitting out at the BJP.

People of Punjab are with AAP; they firmly stand with the party, he said.

He also said that the party is bigger than an individual, and 6-7 people who have left do not comprise Punjab.

Chadha and Pathak on Friday announced that they are joining the BJP along with five other MPs of the party.

Earlier, addressing a joint press conference in Delhi, AAP Rajya Sabha MPs Raghav Chadha and Sandeep Pathak said they were joining the BJP.

Chadha claimed that nearly two-thirds of AAP’s Rajya Sabha MPs had quit the party and would join the BJP as a separate faction.

Swati Maliwal and Harbhajan Singh were among the seven who quit, he revealed.

Addressing the media, Mann said, “I have been saying this earlier too that the BJP does not get along with Punjab and Punjabis.”

Anything with which people of Punjab are happy about, it tries to spoil it, he charged.

“When the AAP government was formed in Punjab, it withheld the state’s rural development funds,” he alleged.

He alleged that the “BJP started keeping a grudge against Punjab after Prime Minister Narendra Modi had to take a U-turn over the (now-repealed three) farm laws”.

Citing other examples like the Bhakra Beas Management Board, he said it shows that the BJP cannot win in Punjab, but it indulges in ‘tikrambaazi’ (trick games). Today, the BJP betrayed the people of Punjab by calling some of our RS members to its side, he said.

Mann claimed that through the surveys, the BJP must have come to know the ground reality and thought of creating a flutter by engineering defections. But Punjabis do not tolerate betrayal, he said.

Drunk ‘friends’ nabbed for public row in Gurugram after video goes viral GURUGRAM: The Gurugram Police has arrested a man and woman for allegedly engaging in a public fight, spouting cuss words at each other, at Bristol Chowk here, police said on Friday.

A video of the row outside a liquor shop circulated widely on social media.

The police, taking cognisance of the viral video, registered a case and then arrested the two late at night.

In the footage, the two can be seen engaged in a physical fight amid heavy traffic.

The man is seen pulling the woman’s hair and repeatedly slapping her, said police.

A bystander recorded the incident and later shared it online.

A few more people were seen filming the altercation and asking the woman to leave.

Social media users tagged the Haryana Police and Gurugram administration, demanding strict action.

The arrested woman was identified as Riya Kumari alias Riya, a resident of West Bengal, and the man as Rohit Kumar, a resident of Jhunjhunu, Rajasthan.

Riya Kumari lives on rent in Wazirabad village, while Rohit lives in Chakkarpur in Gurugram, said police.

“During interrogation, the accused revealed that they knew each other and that the incident occurred after they had drunk heavily. An argument broke out between them over an old matter and quickly escalated into a public uproar,” an officer said.

TVK chief Vijay says voters crush 'political myths' with record 85 pc turnout in TN

Chennai, April 24 : Tamilagam Vettri Kazhagam chief and actor Vijay on Friday expressed gratitude to the voters of Tamil Nadu for the record-breaking 85 per cent voter turnout in the single-phase Assembly elections held on Thursday. In a statement shared on the social media platform X, Vijay described the massive participation as a landmark moment that shattered long-standing political illusions. "Greetings to everyone who resides in my heart. The illusions created by those who confined politics within the limits of powerful or highly experienced individuals have now been shattered by ordinary people," the TVK leader said. The 2026 Assembly elections witnessed an unprecedented surge in participation, noting it as the highest polling percentage in the state's electoral history since Independence.

The surge was driven significantly by youth and women voters, who turned out in large numbers across all 234 constituencies. Vijay said the 85 per cent voter turnout was unprecedented in Tamil Nadu and unlike anything the state had seen before.

"An 85 per cent voter turnout is something Tamil Nadu has never witnessed before. Only yesterday (Thursday) did we truly experience why elections are called a 'festival of democracy.' April 23, 2026, will remain a defining day," Vijay stated, noting that families, including children, flocked to polling booths with the enthusiasm usually seen at temple festivals. The actor-politician also extended special thanks to first-time voters and those who travelled from other states and abroad to exercise their franchise.

He noted that the democratic spirit shown by the public deserves the deepest respect.

Acknowledging his party's grassroots machinery, Vijay lauded the efforts of booth agents and administrators who faced criticism during the campaign. He stated that the actions of the voters served as the best response to those who mocked the political understanding of his party workers. Looking ahead to the results, the TVK chief remained optimistic about his party's prospects in the triangular contest involving the ruling Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam-led alliance and the Opposition All India Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam-led National Democratic Alliance. "Let us remain hopeful. Good things will happen. Victory is certain," he added.

Madurai: 500 cusecs released from Vaigai dam for Chithirai fest

THENI: Water has been released from the Vaigai dam at a rate of 500 cusecs through irrigation canals for the Madurai Chithirai festival, where Kallazhagar is scheduled to enter the Vaigai river on May 1. Officials decided to release a total of 170 million cubic feet of water from April 24 to April 29 to ensure adequate flow for the event. The move comes amid concerns over low storage, with the dam's water level at 33 ft against its full level of 71 ft, raising doubts about water availability for the festival. To avoid seepage and flow loss due to dry riverbeds and summer heat, the Public Works Department opted to divert water through irrigation canals instead of releasing it directly into the river. The water will first be stored in the Sellur tank in Madurai and then channelled to the Vaigai River, where the Kallazhagar event will take place. Plans are also underway to supply water through the Kondamari channel.

Inside the center, she and hundreds of other evacuees had cots and other amenities; outside, representatives from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other groups had set up shop.

Inside the evacuation center, social worker Elizabeth Hamilton, LCSW, MPH, senior director of regional behavioral health at Kaiser Permanente Southern California, was offering a listening ear to the evacuees. "People are looking for comfort," she said, and are reaching out to others to get that. "There is comfort in connections, in knowing people have your back."

Some call this psychological first aid, an approach used by mental health experts to reduce distress, encourage hope, and help people affected reconnect with family and friends. The support and connections just after a wildfire disaster can go a long way in preserving mental health, researchers have found.

After a wildfire disaster, receiving good support from the community is at the top of the list for mental health, according to Vincent Agyapong, MD, PhD, a professor and head of psychiatry at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, who has long researched the mental health status of people affected by wildfires and other climate events.

"The most positive predictor of psychological well-being was the perception you are receiving good support from the community." That support can come from family, friends, local groups, or government, he said.

As the fires continue to burn, the Los Angeles community continues to offer support.

As of January 22, according to the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, the Eaton Fire was 91% contained; Palisades, 68%. More than 15,700 structures have been destroyed and more than 40,000 acres burned. About 200,000 people were under evacuation orders at first, although some of those orders were later lifted.

Restaurants invited people affected by the fire to stop by for a meal. Hotels and short-term rentals are offering free or discounted stays. One collection point – Santa Anita Park, near the Eaton Fire – was so full of donations just four days after the fires began, the organizers said they didn't need more of some donations. Animal shelters helped evacuate small and large animals. Music benefits with big names are scheduled. GoFundMe accounts to help people rebuild are being set up at brisk rates. A synagogue in Pacific Palisades that survived the fire put together an information panel with speakers who had lost their homes in previous fires. A Veterans of Foreign Wars post miles from the fires is hosting a $10-a-plate pozele benefit, giving proceeds to displaced veterans. Clothing retailers are offering new clothes, gratis, to those affected. In 2024, according to the National Centers for Environmental Information, more than 61,000 U.S. wildfires burned more than 8.8 billion acres, the seventh-most burned acreage over the last 25 years. As the number of wildfires grows, research on the mental health effects is increasing. Alison Hwong, MD, PhD, an assistant professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at the Stanford School of Medicine, analyzed data from the California Health Interview Survey, which in 2021 added questions about exposure to extreme weather events and mental health. More than half, 53%, reported their mental health was affected by climate events such as wildfires. Young, White, college-educated respondents, as well as women and rural residents, were more likely to report poorer mental health, but Hwong can't entirely explain that finding. People with mental health issues are more vulnerable, she and others said.

Agayapong's team tracked the mental health status of residents affected by the 2016 Fort McMurray wildfire in Canada, with 2,400 homes destroyed and 88,000 people evacuated. "Those who reported no support from the community were at greater risk of mental health problems at six months and also at five years," Agayapong said. Family and friend support also protected people from depression, he found. His team reviewed 63 published studies on the impact of wildfires on mental health, finding an increased rate of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD), depression, and anxiety both right after the disaster and for years after. Just after evacuation, "people are seeking immediate relief," said Dawn Gillam, a licensed clinical social worker and executive leader of behavioral health services at Kaiser Permanente Southern California. "They want to know where to get a shower, where to get food. They want help walking their dogs, playing with their kids." Then, "A few days in, they want to talk about their feelings. People want to talk about their frustration over little things, like they are not getting a warm-enough shower." Whether a therapist, friend, or family member is listening, people want to feel validated about how they are feeling, therapists said. Hamilton recalled a woman at the evacuation center who told her: "I'm not a crier, but I can't stop crying." She was in community leadership roles, and the reversal, of needing help instead of giving it, was difficult for her to accept, Hamilton said. Hamilton assured her that crying was normal, telling her: "We've been through the scariest days."

Humor might help. One woman fretted that she hadn't gathered the right belongings when she had to evacuate quickly. Hamilton teased her: "You didn't evacuate right?" That got a laugh. Another man joked: "People have told me my whole life I should see a therapist. Now might be the time." Hamilton has heard a lot of "I should have" and tells people to ease up on themselves. "All kinds of emotions get triggered by events like this," said Jeffrey Katzman, MD, a psychiatrist and director of the Silver Hill Academy for Research and Education in New Canaan, Connecticut. He grew up in Pacific Palisades and went to school there. Long distance, he's helping family members who had to evacuate and are missing important medical equipment. "There's sadness, there is numbness. It's important to honor those feelings and have someone to listen." While Katzman said it's important to honor the range of emotions of someone who's been through a wildfire, "you don't want to get stuck there. It's important to keep moving." One way to do that, he said, is to regain structure in one's life. He advises those affected by wildfires to plan, as best and quickly as possible, how they'll work, where they will live. "Structure helps to engender a sense of hope, meaning, and a sense of the future. It takes us away from living in the loss and trauma."

Is It Paranoia or Anxiety?

The community that helps people recover in the short term can also help in the long term," said Jennifer Gray Thompson, MPA, CEO of afterthefireusa.org, a California nonprofit that reaches out to communities after fire disasters. It was formed in 2017, after a series of deadly wildfires in Sonoma and Napa counties. She lived through one,

Early Detection Saves Lives: Incidentally Detected Kidney Tumor Successfully Treated

Hyderabad, 24th April 2026: A 42-year-old male patient underwent a routine master health check-up, during which an abdominal ultrasound incidentally revealed a mass in the left kidney measuring approximately 8 cm. The patient had no prior history of diabetes, hypertension, smoking, or any significant family history of cancer. He was completely asymptomatic at the time of diagnosis. Further evaluation with a contrast-enhanced CT scan of the abdomen confirmed the presence of a renal tumor. The patient subsequently underwent surgical removal of the left kidney (radical nephrectomy). Histopathological examination of the specimen confirmed the diagnosis of clear cell renal cell carcinoma, the most common type of kidney cancer. The patient has recovered well post-surgery and is currently doing fine.

Germany's First 'Military Strategy' In 77 Years Is A Wake-Up Call For India

On April 22, India and Germany signed a Defence Industrial Cooperation Roadmap in Berlin, alongside a P-751 submarine deal inching towards closure between ThyssenKrupp Marine Systems and Mazagon Dock. On the same day, the Bundesministerium der Verteidigung released something far more consequential for Europe's strategic future: the public portion of the Gesamtkonzeption militrische Verteidigung, the "overall conception of military defence", Germany's first formal military strategy since 1949. The timing is deliberate and tells us something important.

Why This Document Is Historic
For seventy-seven years, Germany has deliberately avoided having a "Militrstrategie". The word itself carried too much weight, too much memory. Post-war Bonn, and later Berlin, worked through Weissbcher, Verteidigungspolitische Richtlinien, and NATO planning documents. The deliberate vagueness was the point. A Germany with a signed military strategy was a Germany with strategic ambition, and strategic ambition was precisely what post-war German political culture had been built to suppress. That reticence is now history. Signed by Generalinspekteur Carsten Breuer in April 2026 and publicly endorsed by Defence Minister Boris Pistorius, the Gesamtkonzeption promulgates a single organising objective: to make the Bundeswehr "die strkste konventionelle Armee Europas", that is, the strongest conventional army in Europe. Pistorius puts it in language that would have been heretical in Berlin a decade ago. Germany, he writes, must be the "Schrittmacher unter den europischen Nationen", the pacemaker among European nations. The document's subtitle, "Verantwortung fr Europa" (responsibility for Europe), bears the same weight.

THIS IS A RUPTURE, AND A DELIBERATE ONE.

What Motivated It
The first force is Russia. The strategy names Moscow as the largest and most immediate threat to German, European and transatlantic security. It argues Russia is actively preparing the conditions for a war against NATO, already conducts hybrid operations inside alliance territory, including Germany, and views military force as a legitimate instrument of policy. Moscow's strategic goal, the document assesses, is the collapse of "Bndniskohsion", that is, alliance cohesion, and the strategic decoupling of the United States from Europe. The second force, arguably the more important one, is Washington. The Gesamtkonzeption openly references the US 2026 National Defense Strategy and its calls for allies to take greater responsibility for their own security. It accepts with rare clarity that Europe must now do more. The thesis is one line: "Die NATO muss europischer werden, um transatlantisch zu bleiben." It means NATO must become more European to remain transatlantic. This is a document planning for a semi-absent America while remaining diplomatic about it.

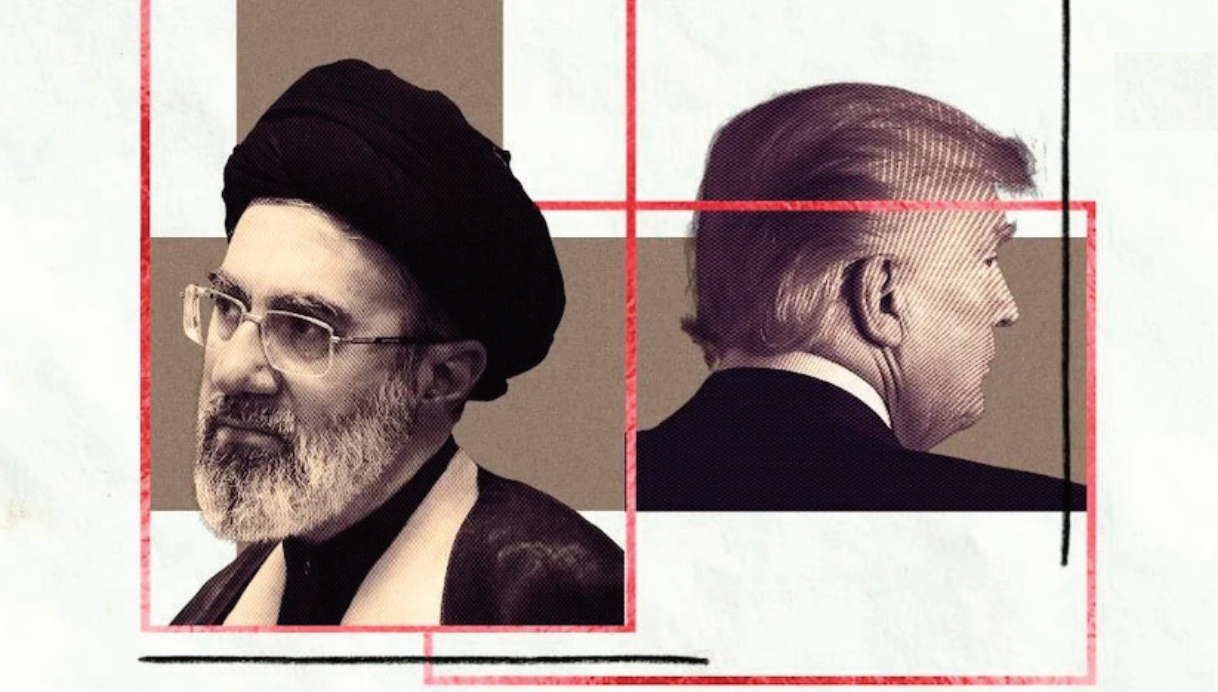

The Significant Facets
The document organises the Bundeswehr's transformation across three phases running to 2039. Phase one, to 2029, focuses on "Maximierung Verteidigungsfhigkeit", that is, maximisation of defence readiness. Phase two, roughly to 2035, delivers "strker Aufwuchs durchhalte-fhiger Streitkrfte", marked by the growth of sustainable forces aligned with the alliance. Phase three, from 2039, aims for "technologisch berlegene Streitkrfte" (technologically superior forces). The personnel target is 460,000 soldiers, minimum, by 2035, active and non-active combined, with full equipment for all units, as the document calls it, "Vollausstattung". Six national capability priorities structure spending and procurement: long-range precision strike and integrated air and missile defence, "Informationsberlegenheit", or information superiority, powered by artificial intelligence, a sovereign cloud-based "Digital Backbone", national command capability for Multi-Domain Operations, the "Operationsbasis Deutschland" or homeland as operational base for NATO forces, and national crisis response. The permanent deployment of the "Brigade Litauen" in Lithuania, the first such basing outside German soil in the Bundeswehr's history, is highlighted as the visible symbol of the new posture.

Ukraine, And The Lesson From It
The document's "Kriegsbild", its picture of future war, reads like a comprehensive distillation of three years of observation in Ukraine. It is organised based on six concepts. "Entgrenzung des Krieges", the dissolution of boundaries between civil and military, home and front, combatant and non-combatant. "Multi-temporaler Krieg", where state-of-the-art systems operate alongside legacy platforms and improvised drones. "Transparentes Gefechtsfeld", the transparent battlefield where real-time reconnaissance makes concealment nearly impossible. "Wirkung auf Abstand", long-range precision effects that eliminate safe rear areas. Automation and autonomy that compress decision cycles beyond human capacity. And most strikingly, "effiziente Masse", efficient mass, the recognition that cheap mass-produced systems combined with high-end assets produce decisive effects, and that the economy of war matters again. The explicit warning against building "die Armee von gestern fr den Krieg von morgen" - the army of yesterday for the war of tomorrow - is a direct rebuke of institutional inertia. It is the lesson every serious military has had to confront since February 2022.

Why This Matters For India
First, Germany's move towards a more autonomous European defence posture alters the balance India has historically managed between Washington, Moscow, and Europe. For India, this means the previous policy framework of triangulating among these powers, within the context of a stable, US-led transatlantic order, is now evolving. India will have to adjust its approach as Germany signals a more independent European role, making Europe a more active strategic actor.

An End To US-Iran War Is Hiding In Plain Sight - If They Can See It

America has achieved its core objective: Iran's nuclear threat is comprehensively set back years, if not decades. Staying in the Gulf now serves no purpose; the longer the standoff drags on, the greater the risk of a war that could cripple global energy lifelines. A strategic walkaway - trading dominance for deterrence - may be the only way to prevent it. An indefinitely extended ceasefire should bring relief. In the Middle East, it brings a quieter dread. The truce that paused the 40-day US-Israel-Iran war has entered its third week - a pause, not a peace, in which everyone is reloading. America's seizure of an Iranian vessel and Tehran's calibrated retaliation show that no calm ever arrived. The Strait of Hormuz has become a stage for two exhausted adversaries in a high-stakes game of chicken, one radar blip from a conflagration neither wants. The question is straightforward: Where do we go from here? The Balance Sheet The war was an asymmetric dismantling. Iran absorbed the seismic shock of "Epic Fury" without state collapse - proof of its technocratic capacity, security apparatus, ideological resolve and nationalist sentiment. It defended its territory and projected defiance to rally support. Its leverage over the Strait of Hormuz is now its undisputed geopolitical currency. But the other side of the ledger is just as stark. American air and naval forces achieved their objectives. Iran's navy has been reduced to fast-attack craft and seabed debris; military-linked industry is severely damaged. B-2 bombers have entombed the highly enriched 440kg uranium stockpile under tons of concrete and granite - a radioactive grave surveilled ceaselessly from above. Breakout time has been reset from weeks to years, perhaps indefinitely. The bill: over $300 billion in Iranian infrastructure damages, a generational setback. The Realpolitik Calculus Continuing the blockade and "Economic Fury" sanctions yields diminishing returns and mounting risk. The blockade is a tripwire; the longer the Fifth Fleet plugs the Strait of Hormuz, the greater the chance of a miscalculation that reignites war. Stalemate is not stability - it is the prelude to crisis.

Some in Washington and Tel Aviv ask: Iran is on its knees, why not finish the job? The temptation is understandable - and catastrophically misguided. "Epic Fury" was devastating because it was calibrated. It struck nuclear and military targets while avoiding the regime's absolute red line: energy infrastructure. Should the war restart, there is nowhere left to go but up the escalation ladder, and the only remaining rungs lead directly to Iran's refineries and export terminals. Iran Is Not Unprepared An attack on those targets would pose an existential threat, and Tehran has prepared for exactly this. Its missile and drone forces, degraded but far from destroyed, would be unleashed not on American warships but on the soft underbelly of the global energy system. Aramco's Abqaiq facility could be struck repeatedly; the UAE's oil infrastructure would burn. Most ominously, the vulnerable desalination plants supplying over 90% of the Persian Gulf's freshwater - and Israel's own capacity - would be systematically targeted. The result would be a regional catastrophe rendering the littoral states of the Persian Gulf uninhabitable. This is not alarmism; it is the logical terminus of an escalation pathway both sides have so far had the prudence to avoid. To restart the war is to choose that terminus. Abandonment, Of A Different Kind This reality makes a cynical but pragmatic exit imperative. The United States should abandon the conflict in its entirety - not via a treaty photo-op, but through quiet strategic de-escalation rooted in off-shore balancing. The hawks' objection is predictable: why walk away now? Because the nuclear programme is entombed, the navy wrecked, the industrial base shattered. An indefinite garrison achieves nothing; remaining merely converts a punitive success into an open-ended occupation of a waterway and a catastrophic escalation. Yet a half-measure exit - withdrawing the fleet while maintaining full financial warfare - is not de-escalation at all. It merely shifts the domain of conflict. Reopening the Strait while keeping the economy suffocated by sanctions removes any incentive for Tehran to behave as a status-quo power. Denied revenue to rebuild, Iran would weaponise the very access America claims to have restored. The blockade would migrate from the sea lanes to the global economy. A withdrawal from the Gulf must, therefore, be paired with a de facto relaxation of "Economic Fury". The two levers are not independent; pulling one without the other guarantees that the mechanism jams. Washington can frame this as a mission-complete transition. The uranium is entombed; any attempt to rebuild enrichment sites will be met with precise air strikes. By stepping back, the White House can sell a narrative of punitive victory: Iran is denied the bomb and forced to live with the consequences of its intransigence. No Marshall Plan, no sanctions relief, no compensation. In Washington's transactional vernacular, that is the punishment. The Iranian Equation For Tehran, this is the bitterest of pills, but one it can swallow. Under this de facto arrangement, Iran does not surrender. It can claim it weathered the American storm, that its sovereignty remains intact. National pride remains unscathed. This path also offers Iran the only sustainable exit from economic oblivion. To rebuild, Iran must sell oil. To sell oil, it needs secondary sanctions to be eased - not lifted entirely, but rendered non-enforceable through deliberate inattention to third-party energy transactions.

IS BORING GOOD? TIM COOK WOULD SAY 'YES'!

Steve Jobs famously said, "It's better to be a pirate than to join the Navy". But as his first chosen successor moves away from the top job at Apple, 15 years after Jobs' death, the company he founded is as far as possible from a bootleg vessel as can be. Jobs was a genius, a visionary in design, product and marketing. Is Tim Cook close to any of these? Heck, no! Apple events don't unleash epochal products anymore. In fact, recent announcements show a clear lack of imagination with AI or device innovation, with markets repeatedly giving them thumbs down after every new iPhone unveiling. Has Tim Cook in his 15 years made Apple boring? Of course, yes. But is boring as bad as it is made out to be? The answer in Apple's case is a resounding NO. Boring is essential for corporate longevity. So, Cook isn't a showman-inventor but an operations expert. While it's fun and glamorous to be a buccaneer-style founder, the heavy-lifting lies in putting the ship together to insulate it against choppy waters, regulatory and geopolitical attacks, and make it into an institution that is structured in operations, governance, product pipeline, succession planning, for these give returns to all its stakeholders, including the innovators at its core. In short, a closer look shows how Cook's every weakness is actually a thought-through strategy to steer Apple to stable waters. Let's begin with the biggest criticism of Cook: Making Apple boring. No out-of-the-world device innovations and no jaw-dropping AI announcement either.

APPLE'S AI HESITANCE
Cook is a firm believer in being the best, which might not necessarily mean being the first. For him, market-timing and first-mover advantage is subordinate to readiness. Cook's strategy is to patiently wait while others validate demand and the noise settles. Historically, Apple then goes for the kill in that category with a product that is dramatically more useful and practical to mainstream users. The Cook era is full of late-but-integrated entries: Apple Watch in 2014, Apple Pay in 2014, AirPods in 2016, Vision Pro in 2023 with retail availability in 2024, and Apple Intelligence in 2024. None were first in their category; all were framed as deeply integrated with Apple's hardware, software and services stack. The success of each of these products is validation of Cook's strategy. Though analysts have labelled Apple as an AI laggard, Cook, while announcing John Ternus, the company's hardware chief, as his successor, did tease 2026 as the year with an 'incredible' pipeline of products, including a foldable iPhone and AI-focused wearables. But Cook's Apple doesn't build everything. It builds only when a dependency threatens to become a chokepoint. So, in the AI cycle, Cook has signalled a greater willingness to loosen his traditional M&A discipline, saying Apple was open to deals that accelerate its roadmap and had already acquired seven small AI firms in 2025.

LASTING LEGACY
It is now clear that there will be no radical iPhone upgrades, and yes, there are Reddit threads arguing for and against it; but the debate is largely settled around the belief that a boring phone is better than unstable, reckless radicalism.

Between Fear And Opportunity: Sri Lanka's India Dilemma

Sri Lanka is once again at a moment of crisis - shaped by economic uncertainty, energy insecurity, and the aftershocks of its recent financial collapse. Recent attacks on Iran have further disrupted energy markets, exposing the fragility of supply chains. Yet, as so often in its post-independence history, the central question is not the nature of the crisis, but whether the country has the vision to convert it into opportunity. At a time when India is emerging as a principal driver of regional growth and connectivity, Sri Lanka faces a stark choice: align with this transformation, or remain constrained by the anxieties of the past. History offers instructive parallels. The Netherlands positioned itself as Europe's logistics hub after the Second World War, while Singapore became Southeast Asia's gateway. Both translated geographic advantage into sustained execution. Sri Lanka, too, was poised - by geography and history - to play a comparable role for South Asia. Yet its trajectory has been marked by false starts and unrealised expectations. External shocks played a part, but the deeper constraint has been internal: populist politics and an inward-looking mindset, accompanied by unease about external engagement, particularly with India. The contrast is striking. Sri Lankans have excelled globally in open, competitive environments. Yet, at home, the country has struggled to align policy with opportunity. Recent proposals on energy connectivity between India and Sri Lanka-including an oil pipeline, the development of the Trincomalee tank farm, and the transformation of the Port of Trincomalee into a regional energy hub-reflect a long-overdue recognition of strategic reality. Interest from the United Arab Emirates strengthens the case. Sri Lanka's annual oil and petroleum requirement is roughly equivalent to about one week's requirement for India, making practical arrangements on energy security relatively straightforward. These discussions have gained urgency. The strategic imperative, however, is fundamentally Sri Lanka's: to finally operationalise an asset that has remained unrealised for decades. Sri Lanka's wind energy potential in the northwest - estimated at over 15,000 MW, around three times current capacity - offers another opportunity. Exporting renewable energy to India is both commercially viable and strategically transformative. Yet, Sri Lanka's experience suggests that opportunity alone is not enough. The trajectory of Indo-Sri Lankan economic relations reflects this pattern of missed opportunities. India's first-ever Free Trade Agreement with any country, signed with Sri Lanka in 1998, held considerable promise, but progress has been uneven. Delays in the Trincomalee tank farm project, signed in 2003, and the cancellation of the Sampur power project illustrate this pattern, as does the more recent cancellation of a major wind project in Mannar and Pooneryn. The ports sector tells a similar story. Sri Lanka's deep-water advantage at the Port of Colombo has made it a vital transshipment hub, with nearly 50% of its volume linked to India. However, as India expands its own port infrastructure, this advantage cannot be taken for granted. The withdrawal from the East Container Terminal arrangement reflected recurring hesitation, while progress on the West Container Terminal must be followed by further development, including Colombo's North Port. Connectivity must extend beyond ports. Bandaranaike International Airport requires expansion and investment, potentially through partnerships with India and Japan. Measures such as pre-clearance arrangements for Indian travellers in Colombo, akin to US-style pre-clearance in Abu Dhabi, could further deepen linkages. Looking ahead, more ambitious infrastructure links - through road and rail connections between India and Sri Lanka - should be explored, despite political sensitivities. Sri Lanka's mineral resources-graphite, phosphate, and ilmenite-also offer opportunities for integration into regional supply chains, particularly in meeting India's growing industrial demand. In this regard, the recent proposal by Japan for an India-Sri Lanka export-oriented economic corridor merits serious consideration. Across decades, successive governments have often squandered strong mandates through short-term populism. Each crisis has raised hopes of course correction; too often, those hopes have faded. There are, however, clear examples of progress. Tourism is one such area. India is now Sri Lanka's largest source of visitors, and this flow has been both economically beneficial and socially well-received. Sri Lanka has the potential to position itself as a preferred leisure destination for Indian travellers - perhaps even as a "new Goa" for segments of the market, with Colombo only about an hour further from Delhi. Digital cooperation is another promising frontier. Collaboration on digital public infrastructure, including initiatives around a unique digital identity, could enhance service delivery, expand financial inclusion, and integrate Sri Lanka more deeply into regional ecosystems. The central challenge, therefore, is not one of geography or resources, but of mindset. Sri Lanka must recognise that while asymmetries in size and power are real, India is an opportunity that should be seized with clarity and confidence, as an equal partner. For such a partnership to succeed, the Indian side must move decisively to translate agreements into tangible outcomes, with faster and more responsive execution. India, as the larger partner, should also be more sensitive to the imbalance inherent in the relationship, and accordingly more accommodating. If that shift occurs, Sri Lanka can still realise its long-delayed destiny as South Asia's logistics and economic hub-its own version of the Netherlands or Singapore, albeit belatedly. The present crisis is not just a test of resilience-it is a test of imagination.

AGENCY
Mumbai: A potential hike in petrol and diesel prices may be on the horizon, with brokerage firm Emkay Global Financial Services warning that continued disruptions linked to the Strait of Hormuz could force the government to act. The brokerage expects a first round of price hikes of around Rs 10 per litre, although it noted this would only partially offset losses faced by oil marketing companies (OMCs). In a report released on Friday, Emkay said that any prolonged closure or disruption in the Strait of Hormuz, a critical global oil transit route, would tighten supply and keep crude prices elevated, making India's current fuel price freeze increasingly unsustainable. The pressure stems from persistently high global oil prices, with Brent crude hovering around $100-$120 per barrel, exacerbated by geopolitical tensions affecting flows through the Strait of Hormuz. Since a significant portion of global oil supply passes through this chokepoint, any disruption directly impacts import-dependent economies like India. As a result, Indian fuel retailers are facing rising under-recoveries, as domestic pump prices have

The brokerage expects a first round of price hikes of around Rs 10 per litre, although it noted this would only partially offset losses faced by oil marketing companies (OMCs).

not kept pace with global benchmarks. Impact On Inflation, GDP And Markets According to Emkay, a Rs 10/litre increase would cover only about 53% of current under-recoveries, leaving room for further hikes if crude prices remain elevated. However, the brokerage cautioned that a sharper increase could trigger inflationary shocks and broader macroeconomic risks. It estimates that a Rs 10 hike could have an approximately 75 basis points impact on inflation, including second-order effects. Emkay noted that even a partial price hike would not allow the government to roll back recent excise duty cuts, which have a potential fiscal impact of about 0.2% of GDP. Meanwhile, equity markets could react negatively in the short term. The brokerage warned that a fuel price hike could trigger a correction, especially as market valuations are already near long-term averages. Emkay also believes that if crude prices remain high due to continued tensions around the Strait of Hormuz, additional rounds of price hikes may follow, likely in a staggered manner. Despite this, the firm described the current energy shock as "transient", expecting eventual stabilisation in global markets once supply normalises. The report also flagged sectoral risks, noting that automobiles (OEMs, ancillaries, lenders) and cement companies are likely to be among the biggest losers due to higher fuel costs. Separately, Kotak Institutional Equities had outlined a more severe scenario. In its recent report, the brokerage estimated that fuel prices may need to rise by Rs 25-28 per litre to fully align with global crude prices, assuming an Indian crude basket of $120 per barrel. However, it added that political considerations, especially around ongoing state elections, have likely kept actual hikes more moderate. Kotak also highlighted that Indian refiners are facing an incremental monthly burden of around Rs 270 billion, despite modest increases in LPG and aviation turbine fuel (ATF) prices. A Rs 10/litre excise duty cut announced on March 27, 2026, has provided some relief but limited the government's fiscal flexibility. However, the Ministry of Petroleum and Natural Gas has dismissed reports of an imminent price hike. In a statement posted on X, the ministry said there is "no such proposal under consideration", calling such reports "misleading" and aimed at creating panic. The government also emphasised that India is among the few countries where petrol and diesel prices have remained unchanged for nearly four years, attributing this stability to coordinated efforts between the government and public sector oil companies to shield consumers from global price volatility.

AI is already leading to fewer jobs for young people, says Sunak

AGENCY
London: Artificial intelligence (AI) is flattening the jobs market for young people and governments should eliminate National Insurance to make hiring workers more attractive, former prime minister Rishi Sunak has told the BBC. Sunak, now an adviser to AI firm Anthropic and Microsoft, said while he is an enthusiast for the transformative impact of AI, he said concerns from graduates looking for entry level jobs were justified. He said company bosses were privately acknowledging to him that recruitment of young people is flattening because of the technology. "There are reasons to be worried and think about the future. But we are able to do something about this," he said. Sunak suggested rebalancing the tax system by abolishing National Insurance

"over time" and replacing it with taxes on corporate profits. These, he said, would be boosted by productivity and efficiencies in deploying AI. Sunak said it is becoming tougher for young people to get jobs in service sectors such as law, accountancy and the creative industries. Meanwhile, he said chief executives are telling him that "flat is the new up".

RBI cancels banking licence of Paytm Payments Bank

AGENCY
Mumbai: The Reserve Bank of India on Friday, April 24, said it has cancelled the banking licence issued to Paytm Payments Bank. The licence was cancelled as the "affairs of the bank were conducted in a manner detrimental to the interest of the bank and its depositors", the RBI said in a statement. "The general character of the management of the bank is prejudicial to the interest of depositors as also the public interest," it said. Consequently, Paytm Payments Bank is prohibited from conducting any "banking" business, it said. The RBI also said it will make an application to the high court to wind up the bank. "Paytm Payments Bank Limited has enough liquidity to repay its entire deposit liability upon winding up of the bank," it said. Paytm Payments Bank has been barred from onboarding new customers with effect from March 11, 2022. Paytm Payments Bank Ltd has lost its banking licence, with the Reserve Bank of India banning the lender from carrying out operations with immediate effect. The RBI said Paytm Payments Bank has enough funds to repay its liabilities during the winding-up process. Today's decision is the last RBI action against the lender in a long process of regulatory action to close Paytm Payments Bank. The RBI had already banned it from taking new customers and accepting deposits. The RBI's action began in 2022 when it imposed curbs on the lender. It tightened the curbs in 2024 after repeated supervisory concerns over governance, compliance and operations surfaced. The RBI cited multiple grounds for cancelling the licence, including the conduct of the affairs of the bank going against the interests of the lender and its depositors.

Markets slide for third straight day as crude spike, IT sell-off drag sentiment

AGENCY
Mumbai: Equity benchmark indices Sensex and Nifty tumbled over 1 per cent on Friday, falling for the third consecutive day, as a sharp rally in crude prices and massive selling in IT counters weighed heavily on investors' sentiment. Unabated foreign fund outflows, a negative trend in global markets amid prolonged conflict and continued disruption in the Strait of Hormuz added to the gloom. The 30-share BSE Sensex dropped 999.79 points, or 1.29 per cent, to settle at 76,664.21. During the day, it plunged 1,260.13 points or 1.62 per cent to 76,403.87. A total of 2,905 stocks declined, while 1,326 advanced and 158 remained unchanged on the BSE. The wider gauge NSE Nifty slumped 275.10 points, or 1.14 per cent, to end at 23,897.95. On the weekly front, the BSE benchmark tanked 1,829.33 points, or 2.33 per cent, and the Nifty dropped 455.6 points, or 1.87 per cent. "Indian equity markets extended their decline for a third consecutive session, as renewed risk-off sentiment weighed on investor confidence. Ongoing tensions in the Middle East, coupled with persistent weakness in the IT sector, continued to pressure an already fragile market backdrop. "Volatility also increased, with the India VIX rising 6 per cent, reflecting heightened fear and uncertainty amid the prolonged conflict and continued disruption in the Strait of Hormuz, with no meaningful signs of de-escalation," Ponmudi R, CEO of Enrich Money, an online trading and wealth tech firm, said. From the Sensex constituents, Infosys dived 7.09 per cent after its revenue growth forecast for FY27 came in lower than market expectations. HCL Tech, Tata Consultancy Services, Tech Mahindra, Sun Pharma, Asian Paints and ICICI Bank were also among the major laggards. In contrast, Trent, Bajaj Finance, State Bank of India, HDFC Bank and Kotak Mahindra Bank were the winners. The

B. Netanyahu treated for early-stage prostate cancer

AGENCY
Tel Aviv: Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has said he is "in excellent physical condition" after the publication of his annual medical report revealed he had a malignant tumour removed. In a post on X on Friday, Netanyahu said that during routine medical monitoring following successful surgery for an enlarged benign prostate, doctors found an early-stage malignant tumour. Treatment had "removed the problem and left no trace of it", he added. Netanyahu said he had requested to delay publication of his health record so it was not released at the height of the US and Israel's war with Iran, to prevent Tehran from spreading "even more false propaganda against Israel". The 76 year-old Israeli leader said he underwent the initial surgery for an enlarged benign prostate in 2024 and has been under routine medical monitoring. "A tiny spot of less than a centimetre" was discovered during the most recent check up. "I had a minor medical issue with my prostate that was completely treated. Thank God, it's behind me," he said. In the lengthy post, Netanyahu also said he chose to undergo treatment because "when I'm given information in time about a potential danger, I want to address it immediately". He added: "This is true on the national level and also on the personal level". The revelation comes as Netanyahu is due to visit the White House in the coming weeks as the US seeks to broker a long lasting peace deal in the war with Iran. Israel's ceasefire agreement with Lebanon, following fighting between Israel and Iran, has also been extended by three weeks.

Behind Nigeria's murky coup plot - the money, the prayers and a Nollywood arrest

AGENCY
Nigeria: For months rumours and secrecy have surrounded last year's alleged Independence Day coup plot in Nigeria - but with this week's indictment of six civilians accused of involvement comes the first details of what is said to have been an elaborate plan to oust President Bola Tinubu. It was due to take place on 1 October 2025 - the day Nigeria marked the 65th anniversary of its independence from the UK. But at the very last minute the celebratory parade, to be attended by the president, was cancelled - and the government and military were tight-lipped about why. It was only in January that the military announced, in a statement short on detail, that 16 unnamed senior military officers were to face a court-martial over an alleged plot - effectively admitting a coup attempt had been thwarted. Now court documents, filed by state prosecutors at the Federal High Court in the capital, Abuja, have revealed the name of the alleged mastermind and suggest that one of the major aims of the plotters was to destabilise the state ahead of the planned takeover. The six going on trial at the High Court cannot go before a military court as they are civilians, including a serving police inspector and retired military personnel. They have denied the 13 charges, including treason, terrorism and money laundering - and while they may not necessarily be the ring-leaders, their trial is likely to shed light on an alleged plan that is said to have involved all elements of Nigeria's security forces. Nigeria has a long history of military takeovers but has been under civilian rule since 1999. Several other West African countries have experienced coups in recent years and there has been speculation that Nigeria could be next, with economic hardship rising and accusations that the political system was rigged in favour of a small elite. Court documents point to Colonel Mohammed Ma'aji as the alleged chief strategist. Little is known about the 50-year-old, a Muslim born in western Niger state who spent much of his early army career in the southern oil-rich Niger Delta region and where he climbed the ranks in the mid-2000s.

AGENCY
Italy: Poisoning is suspected in the deaths of 18 wolves within a few days in a national park that straddles three regions of central Italy. After the carcasses of 10 wolves were found last week, another eight were found when patrols were stepped up in recent days in the Abruzzo, Lazio, and Molise National Park. The park authority said last week that traces of suspected poisoned bait had been found in an area where five of the wolves had been found dead and the latest deaths elsewhere raised "very strong suspicion" of further poisoning. The authority said it was working to determine the cause of death and collaborating with local public prosecutors. The park's initial suspicions appear to have been corroborated in tests carried out by the local animal health research institute IZS. Thirteen of the dead wolves were taken to the institute in Teramo, which found the "presence of pesticides for agriculture used in poisoned bait for animals".

No 10 says Falklands sovereignty rests with UK after report of US 'review'

AGENCY
London: Sovereignty of the Falkland Islands "rests with the UK", Downing Street has said, following a report the US could review its position on Britain's claim to the territory. An internal Pentagon email reported by Reuters suggested the US was considering options to punish Nato allies it believed failed to support its war on Iran. The options discussed also included seeking Spain's suspension from Nato over its opposition to the war. BBC News, which has not been able to review the document, has contacted the Pentagon about it. The Falkland Islands, a British overseas territory in the south-west Atlantic Ocean, remain the subject of a sovereignty dispute between Britain and Argentina. Asked about the report, a No 10 spokesman on Friday said: "The Falkland Islands have hugely voted overwhelmingly in favour of remaining a UK overseas

EPSTEIN HOUSED ABUSE VICTIMS IN LONDON FLATS

AGENCY
London: Sex-criminal financier Jeffrey Epstein housed women who say he abused them in several London flats in the years after UK police decided not to investigate him, the BBC can reveal. We found evidence of four flats, rented in the affluent borough of Kensington and Chelsea, in receipts, emails and bank records contained within the Epstein files. Six of the women housed in them have since come forward as victims of Epstein's abuse. Many of them - from Russia, eastern Europe and elsewhere - were brought to the UK after the Metropolitan Police decided not to investigate Virginia

Giuffrè's 2015 allegation that she had been a victim of international trafficking to London. The Met said it followed "reasonable lines of inquiry" at the time, interviewing Giuffrè on multiple occasions following her complaint and co-operating with US investigators. Some of the women housed in the London flats were coerced by Epstein to recruit others into his sex trafficking scheme, as well as regularly transported to Paris by Eurostar to visit him, according to emails in the files, searched through millions of pages of records gathered by the US Department of Justice in its investigation of the disgraced financier.

AGENCY
Ghana: has summoned South Africa's top envoy to the country over reported "acts of intimidation and harassment" against its citizens and other African migrants in the southern African nation. Earlier this week, video clips were shared online showing vigilante groups attacking and confronting people they believed were in South Africa illegally - in one of them they challenge a Ghanaian man over his status. Xenophobia has long been an issue in South Africa and has been accompanied by occasional outbursts of deadly violence.

Ghanaian officials have met the man in the video to offer him support and also urged citizens living abroad to continue being "law-abiding". The West African nation's foreign affairs ministry said it had also met South Africa's acting high commissioner to Ghana, Thando Dalamba, and raised a formal protest over the recent "xenophobic incidents" against foreigners, including its citizens. It cited a video clip showing a group of South Africans questioning a Ghanaian man. The group demand to see the man's documents and even when he produces them.

Nato says 'no provision' to expel members after report US could seek to suspend Spain

AGENCY
Kyiv: Nato says there is no provision for member states to be suspended or expelled from the military alliance after a report said the US could seek to suspend Spain over its Iran war stance. Reuters quoted a US official who said an internal Pentagon email had suggested measures for the US to punish allies it believed failed to support its campaign. The email also suggested reviewing the US position on the UK's claim to the Falklands islands in the south Atlantic, which are also claimed by Argentina. A Nato official told the BBC that the alliance's founding treaty "does not foresee any provision for suspension of Nato membership, or expulsion". Spain's leader has also dismissed the report. The BBC has contacted the Pentagon and UK government for comment. US President Donald Trump has repeatedly criticised Nato allies for their reluctance to play a greater role after the US and Israel attacked Iran on 28 February and Iran subsequently restricted shipping through the key Strait of Hormuz route. Spain has refused to allow the use of air bases on its territory for attacks on Iran. The US has two military bases in Spain, Naval Station Rota and Morón Air Base. Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez told reporters: "We do not work based on emails. We work with official documents and official positions taken, in this case, by the government of the United States." Sánchez added that Spain supported "full co-operation with its allies, but always within the framework of international law." Meanwhile, UK Prime Minister Keir Starmer has insisted that greater involvement in the war or the current US blockade of Iran's ports is not in the UK's interest. The UK has allowed the US to use British bases to launch strikes on Iranian sites targeting the Strait of Hormuz and RAF planes have taken part in missions to shoot down Iranian drones. The UK, France and others have said they would be willing to keep the Strait of Hormuz - a global oil shipping route - open after a lasting ceasefire or the end of the war.

Key suspect in notorious Tadamon massacre during Syria civil war arrested

AGENCY
Syria: A key suspect in one of the most notorious killings of the Syrian civil war has been arrested, Syria's interior minister has said. Amjad Youssef was wanted over the mass killing of civilians in April 2013 in the Tadamon district of Damascus. Footage emerged in 2022 showing Syrian soldiers leading victims, bound and blindfolded, to a pit before shooting them. The video became one of the most direct pieces of visual evidence of extrajudicial killings by then government forces. Interior Minister Anas Khattab said Youssef was the main perpetrator of the massacre and was taken into custody after a "well-executed" security operation. Syria's state news agency said he was detained in Hama province. Footage published by the UK-based monitoring group the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights (SOHR) appeared to show Youssef after his arrest, sitting in a police car, his nose and forehead bloodied. The killings at Tadamon attracted widespread attention after video, filmed by the perpetrators, showing it taking place was leaked nine years later. In the film, victims are seen being led one by one to the pit and shot. It was one of several mass killings in Tadamon by government forces around that time. Human Rights Watch (HRW), which has visited the site, said there was evidence that 288 were killed in Tadamon, 41 in the incident in April 2013. It said 11 blindfolded victims shown in the video were shot at close range and pushed into a machine-dug grave. It has called the area "a huge crime scene". HRW senior researcher Hiba Zayadin said the leaked video "filmed by the perpetrators themselves who laughed as they killed their victims, shows the [former] Syrian government's callous disregard for people's lives." "This massacre is just one horrific incident in a pattern of state violence and apparent war crimes." The government at the time, led by President Bashar al-Assad, was toppled by rebels in December 2024. Assad's forces had fought jihadist and rebel groups in the civil war which began in March 2011 when security forces cracked down violently on peaceful pro-democracy protests.

Tehran should make a 'wise deal', Hegseth says, as Iran's foreign minister heads to Pakistan for talks

AGENCY
Iran's Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi says his trip to Islamabad, Muscat and Moscow is to "closely coordinate with our partners on bilateral matters and consult on regional developments". In a post on X, he says: "Our neighbors are our priority". Away from the Middle East, EU leaders are hosting a summit with their counterparts from Egypt, Syria and Lebanon in Cyprus. German Chancellor Friedrich Merz told fellow leaders that the EU is willing to gradually ease sanctions on Iran in the event a comprehensive agreement is reached, according to the Reuters news agency. "It is, so to speak, part of the contribution we can make to advance this process and, hopefully, lead to a lasting ceasefire," Merz said. AFP is reporting comments from European Council President Antonio Costa, who said the Strait of Hormuz must "immediately reopen without restrictions and without tolling", adding that this is "vital for the entire world". Speaking before the meeting, the bloc's foreign policy chief Kaja Kallas warned that the world could end up with a more dangerous Iran if talks did not produce as strong an agreement as the 2015 Iran nuclear deal President Trump withdrew from during his first term. We've been keeping an eye on two ships sanctioned by the US over their links to Iran as they travelled through the Strait of Hormuz today. Ship-tracking data from MarineTraffic shows a crude oil tanker named Yuri began crossing the strait overnight before coming to a halt to the east of Larak Island, where it has remained throughout today. The tracking site shows the ship is loaded with cargo and had previously broadcast its location close to Kharg Island, Iran's main oil export port. The ship's current destination is not known. A second ship, a chemical tanker named Avon, also transited through the strait early this morning. It had spent much of this month sitting off the coast of the UAE and ship tracking data shows it is laden with cargo. It now appears to be heading out into the Gulf of Oman, where the US last week implemented a blockade line.

AGENCY
Kenyan President William Ruto has faced a social media backlash after publicly suggesting that Nigerian-accented English was incomprehensible and required a translator. Addressing Kenyans living in Italy on Monday, Ruto said: "If you listen to a Nigerian speaking, you don't know what they are saying - you need a translator," while boasting that Kenyans spoke "some of the best English in the world". His remarks drew fierce condemnation from Nigerians and other Africans online who accused the Kenyan leader of demeaning a fellow African nation. "English is a colonial language, not a measure of intelligence, capability, or national progress," wrote Hopewell Chin'ono, a Zimbabwean journalist. As former British colonies, both Kenya and Nigeria share English as an official language, but each country has developed distinct spoken varieties with different phonetic structures. These differences reflect the influence of indigenous languages - Nigeria has more than 500 languages which shape its cadence and intonation, while Kenya's Bantu, Nilotic and Cushitic mix give rise to its own accents. But in his address to the diaspora gathering, Ruto said Kenya's education system produced strong English proficiency and that it was difficult to understand Nigerians when they spoke English.

IPL 2026: Gujarat Titans Set 205/3-Run Target for Royal Challengers Bengaluru

AGENCY
Mumbai: Virat Kohli was dropped on duck by Washington Sundar in the first over of RCB's 206-run chase against GT in Bengaluru. Earlier, Sai Sudharsan's third IPL century powered GT to 205/3 against RCB. Sudharsan slammed 100 off just 58 balls to lead GT's charge, slamming 11 fours and five sixes to lit up the Chinnaswamy Stadium. During his knock, Sudharsan broke Chris Gayle's record to become the fastest player to score 2,000 runs in IPL. Put in to bat, Shubman Gill had a 128-run opening stand with Sudharsan, the last season's Orange Cap winner with 759 runs, getting into his rhythm hitting 11 fours and five sixes. Gill made a quiet 24-ball 32. Making his GT debut, Jason Holder (23 not out; 10 balls) smashed two sixes and one four in the final over to prop up the total. Kohli dropped on 0! Massive blunder from Sundar as he fumbled bles an easy catch at mid-wicket. Kohli went for the flick and hits it straight at Sundar, who absolutely shells it. Huge let-off for Kohli! 18 runs off the final over and GT reach 205/3! This is the highest total for GT vs RCB, bettering 200/3 at Ahmedabad in 2024. Decent cameos from Sundar, Buttler and Holder take GT past the 200-run mark after Sai Sudharsan's anchored the innings with a 58-ball 100. Big chase coming up in Chinnaswamy! Now Krunal has gone down! Holder is having a laugh about it, perhaps at the sheer absurdity of another injury delay. The physio has charged down to the middle once again. After a brief wait, Krunal has decided to soldier on. Holder clearly sees the humorous side to all the drama! Holder goes bang! Patidar gives the ball to Krunal and regrets it straightaway. Holder welcomes him back with a towering six—just clearing his front leg to heave the ball over cow corner. A top-tier shot from the big man! Drama in the final over! Rasikh Salam Dar goes down, clutching his right leg. The physio has rushed out straightaway. He was just about to deliver the first ball of the innings' finale but had to pull out late in his run-up. This looks like a serious concern for RCB! Gujarat Titans opener Sai Sudharsan scripted history with his batting on Friday night during a match against Royal Challengers Bengaluru (RCB) at the M Chinnaswamy Stadium. The southpaw, who started the season poorly with just one fifty in six matches, slammed a sensational century (100 off 58) against RCB. During the knock, Sudharsan also reached the milestone of 2,000 IPL runs. He achieved the feat in his 47th innings, surpassing the previous record held by Chris Gayle. The former West Indies opener had reached the milestone in 48 innings. RCB skipper Rajat Patidar won the toss and opted to field against GT in the game. It's the Royal Challengers Bengaluru's final home game of the season at the M Chinnaswamy Stadium. The Gujarat Titans came into this clash on the back of a heavy 99-run loss to the Mumbai Indians.

Sai Sudharsan Regains Form In Style, Slams Century For Gujarat Titans Against RCB

Gujarat Titans batter Sai Sudharsan regained form in style as he slammed a century off 57 balls during the IPL 2026 match against Royal Challengers Bengaluru on Friday. The knock consisted of 11 fours and five sixes. It has been a modest season for the batter as he scored just 135 runs in his first six innings of IPL 2026 with just one half-century. However, he looked in complete control against the RCB bowlers as he played brilliant cricket to keep the scorecard ticking. He looked completely at ease against the likes of Bhuvneshwar Kumar and Josh Hazlewood as he faced the majority of balls in the powerplay and made sure that GT was well on its way to a big total.

Ex-New Zealand Star, Who Played 28 Tests, Banned From County Cricket For Cocaine Use

AGENCY
New Zealand: Former New Zealand cricket team pacer Doug Bracewell was banned from county cricket after he tested positive for cocaine on for a second time. The cricketer was handed a two-year suspension by the England Cricket Board (ECB)'s Cricket Regulator for the violation during a match in September 2025. The sample was collected during a Division One match between Essex County Cricket Club and Somerset County Cricket Club in Chelmsford on September 25. According to reports, the World Anti-Doping Agency-accredited laboratory in London confirmed the presence of cocaine. Bracewell did not possess a Therapeutic Use

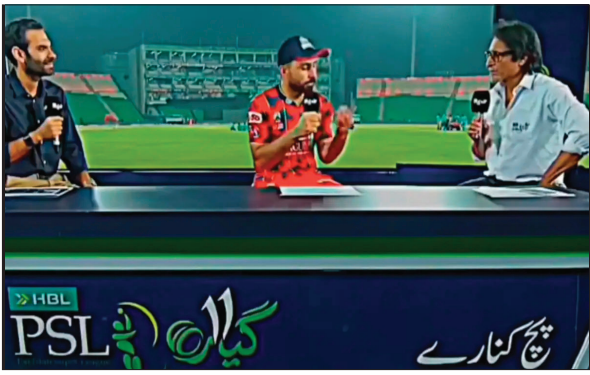

Exemption and he also admitted to using cocaine on the evening of September 24 and into the early hours of September 25. The charge, brought under Articles 2.1 and 2.2 of the ECB Anti-Doping Rules, related to "both the presence and use of a prohibited substance". However, the cricket regulator said that the substance use was unrelated to sporting performance and that led to the two-year suspension which is in line with the punishment for substance abuse. Bracewell accepted the punishment and as a result, no hearing took place in the matter. The suspension was backdated to November 24 and it will run to November 23, 2027. All results recorded between the date of the test and the provisional suspension were disqualified. Bracewell, who played 28 Tests for New Zealand, announced his international retirement in December. "The Club supports the Cricket Regulator's decision to impose a period of ineligibility of two years. All employees are required to meet the highest standards of professional conduct. While the Club does not condone Bracewell's behaviour, we are committed to supporting him through rehabilitation in line with our policies and procedures. Essex County Cricket Club will not be sanctioned as part of the decision," the official statement from the county side read.

AGENCY
Islamabad: Pakistan cricket team batter Khushdil Shah questioned the team management and the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) over his exclusion from the national side despite enjoying a brilliant run of form. Khushdil, who currently plays for Karachi Kings in the Pakistan Super League (PSL), slammed an unbeaten 44 off just 14 deliveries to guide his team to victory over Lahore Qalandars at the Gaddafi Stadium in Lahore on Thursday. Following the win, Khushdil spoke to Pakistan great Rameez Raja and opened up about not being considered for the Pakistan cricket team. "Sab players se main alag hoon. Na main social badi innings kheli hain. Phir bhi, itne sab ke baad mujhe team se drop kar diya gaya [I scored 700, 800 runs at number 5 or 6 in domestic cricket, yet I was dropped from the team]," he said in the post-match interview. Meanwhile, he Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) has withdrawn the No Objection

Certificate (NOC) issued to pacer Mustafizur Rahman for the Pakistan Super League 2026, following a medical review after the third ODI against New Zealand. According to a BCB statement, Mustafizur will undergo an immediate scan to assess his condition. He will then begin a rehabilitation programme under the supervision of the board's medical team, ruling him out of the remainder of this season's PSL. "The Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) wishes to inform that, following the conclusion of the 3rd ODI against New Zealand, the team's medical staff has reviewed the condition of national team pace bowler Mustafizur Rahman,"

He partnered with Madrid goalkeeper Thibaut Courtois in a friendly session against world No. 1 Jannik Sinner and Madrid midfielder Jude Bellingham. Bellingham was at the Madrid Open on Wednesday watching young Spanish sensation Rafael

"It was very special to enjoy this unique court at the Bernabeu," Nadal wrote on Instagram. Iga Swiatek, ranked No. 4 on the women's tour, also was at the Bernabeu event.

Korda takes Chevron lead as England's Rhodes impresses

AGENCY
NYC: American Nelly Korda leads the Chevron Championship - the first women's major of the year - by two strokes after posting a sublime seven-under-par 65 in the first round. The two-time major winner, who claimed this title in 2024, looked back to her imperious best in a bogey-free round at Houston's Memorial Park Golf Course. "The wind was picking up here and there," said Korda. "Through the trees it was definitely gusting so I had to lock in on a couple of yardages here and there. "Overall, I just felt really good, though, out there." England's Mimi Rhodes, who won three times during last season's Ladies European Tour, is fours shots off the top on her tournament debut. The 24-year-old had five birdies and two bogeys in an impressive 69 and is one of 10 players on three under par. "I felt ready," said Rhodes. "Getting here on Sunday, it was probably a benefit to me that I was able to see the course a bit more. "I did as much prep as I could and felt comfortable coming into this round. It was more about coming in and being confident around there, which I thought I did." South Korea's Somi Lee and Thailand's Patty Tavatanakit, who won this tournament in 2021 when it was in California, both carded 67s and are joint second on five under. England's Charley Hull, who is fourth in the women's world rankings, is on level par following a round that included three birdies and three bogeys.

TURKEY TO RETURN TO F1 CALENDAR IN 2027

AGENCY
Turkey: The Turkish government says Formula 1 is to return to the country next season for the first time since 2021, on a five-year agreement. The government said the agreement was due to be announced Friday at an event featuring Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, Formula 1 chief executive Stefano Domenicali and FIA President Mohammed Ben Sulayem. Erdogan said the deal would be for "at least five years". The Istanbul Park circuit first hosted F1 from 2005 through 2011, and next year's race would be the first since Turkey returned to the calendar in 2020 and 2021 during disruption caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. Valtteri

Bottas won the most recent race for Mercedes. Hosting F1 would "demonstrate to the world that our country is the safe haven of its region," Erdogan said. There was no immediate confirmation from F1 or the FIA. The news comes after the Iran war caused widespread disruption to sports in the region and forced F1 to call off races in Bahrain and Saudi Arabia scheduled for this month. That left a large gap in this year's schedule. The Miami Grand Prix next week will be the first F1 race since the Japanese Grand Prix on March 29. F1's return to Istanbul had been widely expected since Domenicali said in February that it was a candidate to return.

‘Kara Official Telugu Teaser’ Unveiled - Dhanush Headlines a Grit-Driven Drama Set for April 30, 2026 Release

The makers of Kara, starring Dhanush and directed by Vignesh Raja, have released the Kara Official Telugu Teaser, marking a decisive push into the Telugu market ahead of the film’s theatrical arrival on April 30, 2026. With this, the film sharpens its presence among Telugu audiences, who have already been tracking its content across languages. Presented in Telugu by CH Sathish Kumar & Rajesh Kumar Bobbara under Vigneswara Entertainments - R Star Logistics, the film is set for a wide theatrical rollout across the Telugu States. Backed by Dr. Ishari K. Ganesh under Vels Film International Ltd, in association with Think Studios and Vigneswara Entertainments, Kara has been steadily positioning itself as a cross-market film drawing attention beyond its primary language. The Kara Official Telugu Teaser stands apart in its approach. Instead of revealing plot details, it establishes mood, terrain, and character. Framed within a stark, lived-in landscape, the teaser introduces Dhanush in a stripped-down, unembellished form, where stillness and observation replace conventional hero-driven beats. The emphasis is not on spectacle, but on the weight carried by the character himself, suggesting a figure shaped by circumstance and consequence. Director Vignesh Raja, who earned critical recognition for Por Thozhil, appears to extend his preference for controlled storytelling here as well. The teaser signals a film that leans into atmosphere and character dynamics, rather than overt exposition, allowing intrigue to build through suggestion rather than declaration. Audience engagement around Kara has been gradually intensifying. The Telugu track from the movie, Kannamma Naa Kannamma has crossed 4.1 million views, indicating a strong emotional response. In parallel, Telugu viewers have been actively following Tamil-language songs, promotional material, and interviews, reflecting the film’s growing resonance across linguistic boundaries. With a proven connection to Telugu audiences through films like Raghuvaran B.Tech (VIP), Asuran, and Saar (Vaathi), Dhanush returns with a role that appears to prioritize internal conflict and performance depth. The film also stars Mamitha Baiju alongside an experienced ensemble including Jayaram, K. S. Ravikumar, Karunas, and M. S. Bhaskar. Technically, Kara is supported by a team known for craft-driven work. Cinematographer Theni Eswar brings a grounded visual approach, while editor Sreejith Sarang shapes the film’s rhythm with precision.

“THEATRES ARE IN THE HANDS OF FOUR DEMONS”

Actor-director Sheraz Mehdi has expressed deep anguish over the lack of theatre allocation for the re-release of his film O Andala Rakshasi, alleging that small films are being systematically sidelined in the Telugu film industry. Speaking at a press meet held at the Telugu Film Chamber, Sheraz Mehdi said that despite planning a re-release of the film on April 24 following audience demand, not a single theatre was allotted in the Nizam region. He described the situation as unfair and discouraging for independent filmmakers. “This is not the first time our film has been denied theatres. Small films are being suppressed,” he said. He further alleged that the theatre distribution system in the Telugu film industry is concentrated in the hands of a few individuals. “Movie theatres are in the control of four powerful people who are blocking small films from releasing. I will fight this legally,” he stated.

ances regarding screen allocation.

“SMALL FILMS ARE BEING KILLED”

He warned that the current environment is extremely difficult for small producers and filmmakers. “Small filmmakers are suffering. Good films are being killed before they reach audiences. Such a situation does not exist anywhere else in the world—not even in Bollywood,” he remarked. He added that unless equal opportunities are provided to smaller productions, emerging talent will struggle to survive in the industry.

POSITIVE RESPONSE TO O ANDALA RAKSHASI
According to the film’s team, O Andala Rakshasi, directed by Sheraz Mehdi and featuring him in the lead role, had earlier received a positive response from audiences.

Spirit Schedule Change, Prabhas To Vacation

A key schedule of Prabhas’ Spirit that was supposed to happen this month was pushed to May. We do not know the reasons and Prabhas headed to Europe for a vacation in this gap. In all probability, there may be change in Kalki 2 schedule planned next month as a result of this change. A leaked picture from the sets of Prabhas’ upcoming film Fauzi has gone viral on social media, forcing the makers to issue a strict warning. Director Hanu Raghavapudi urged fans not to share such images and spoil the cinematic experience. The team warned that accounts circulating the leaked photos could face legal action and be treated as cybercrime. Rebel star Prabhas is currently one of the busiest actors in Indian cinema, with multiple projects lined up. Amid this packed schedule, new developments have emerged regarding potential collaborations being discussed behind the scenes. We at Gulte reported earlier that Dinjith Ayyathan, who gained attention with the films like Kishkinda Kaanda and Eko, recently narrated a script to Prabhas. According to reliable industry sources, the story is said to be a larger-than-life concept designed on a grand scale that could suit the actor’s pan-Indian image. However, the final approval from Prabhas is still awaited. Interestingly, Dinjith is not the only filmmaker who has pitched an idea to the star. Rajkumar

Periasamy, who directed the successful film Amaran, has also reportedly narrated another story to Prabhas a few days ago. As of now, the actor has not made a final decision regarding either of the scripts. Both projects were reportedly pitched by Hombale Films, the production house that has been closely working with Prabhas on multiple ventures. Fans are now eagerly waiting to see if the actor will give the green signal to either of these scripts. If even one of these projects moves forward, it could turn into another big-ticket pan-Indian film featuring the Baahubali star.

MIRAI GIRL BREATHED IN THE DARK

Ritika Nayak just shared stunning new pictures, and they are impossible to scroll past. Shot in dramatic low light, the Mirai actress wears a simple black scoop-neck bodysuit paired with loose cargo trousers, and proves that less is always more. In the black and white shot, she leans back with both arms raised above her head, eyes looking straight into the camera with a confidence that hits hard. The moody shadows and sharp contrast make the photo look like a professional magazine spread. The other pictures switch to warm golden tones and the result is breathtaking. Same outfit, same pose, but the rich amber lighting wraps around her like fire, making her glow from within. Hair loose and wild, red earrings adding a tiny pop of colour, she gazes upward looking effortlessly stunning. Ritika debuted with Ashoka Vanamlo Arjuna Kalyanam in 2022 and scored her biggest hit yet with Mirai in 2025. She has films with Anand Deverakonda and the Indo-Korean horror comedy Korean Kanakharaju lined up next. These pictures are just more proof that her star is firmly on the rise.

Yami Gautam spent 4 months learning Quran

While Aditya Dhar continues to make headlines with his high intensity storytelling and the buzz surrounding Dhurandhar, it is his wife Yami Gautam who is now drawing attention for a very different reason. During the making of Haq, Yami reportedly underwent an intense preparation process for her role as Shazia Bano. According to the film’s director Suparn Verma, the actress spent close to four months studying the Quran to better understand the character and her world. The preparation was not limited to reading alone. It involved grasping the context, emotional depth, and cultural nuances required to portray a character inspired by the Shah Bano case. The film itself deals with sensitive subject matter, making authenticity a key aspect of the performance. In an industry where quick turn-arounds are often the norm, such a detailed approach to a role stands out. Yami’s effort reflects a commitment to craft that goes beyond the surface, focusing on immersion rather than just execution. What makes this even more noteworthy is the contrast it presents. While Dhar’s films are known for their scale and impact driven storytelling, Yami’s preparation process for Haq highlights a quieter, more internal method of approaching a character. Two distinct creative approaches, yet a shared dedication to storytelling. And perhaps that is what makes this story resonate, not just the preparation itself, but the intent behind it. Filmmaker Suparn S Varma opened up about the extensive research that went into making Haq. He revealed that the team spent nearly a year and a half understanding Islamic law to bring authenticity to the story, while lead actor Yami Gautam also learnt the Holy Quran to prepare for her role. In a recent conversation with BBC Asian Network, Suparn spoke about the preparation behind the film and praised Yami’s commitment to her character. “I literally had Yami learn the Quran. She spent four months understanding the dialect, the way we are using Quran,” he said. The director said the research process was particularly important given the current climate of misinformation.

While Aditya Dhar continues to make headlines with his high intensity storytelling and the buzz surrounding Dhurandhar, it is his wife Yami Gautam who is now drawing attention for a very different reason.

JAITLEY' IS A GOOD ENTERTAINER WITH HUMOR, SUSPENSE AND THRILL. AUDIENCE WILL BE SURPRISED: DIRECTOR RITESH RANA

Bollywood’s favorite duo Satya and director Ritesh Rana are going to entertain with 'Jaitley'. Produced by Chiranjeevi (Cherry) Hemalatha Peddamallu under the banner of Clap Entertainment, this film is being presented by Mythri Movie Makers. Miss Universe India Rhea Singh is making her debut in Telugu cinema as the heroine. Vennela Kishore and Ajay are playing key roles. The teaser trailer of this film has created a good buzz with a wonderful response. 'Jaitley' is going to be released in theaters on May 1st as a world wide grand. On this occasion, director Ritesh Rana shared the features of the film in a press conference.

I developed this story with a writer named Jayendra during Covid in 2020. We have been planning to make this film since then. We finally started it last November and are now bringing it to release.

Did you originally want to make Jetli an intense thriller with a big hero?
We wanted to make it not just a thriller but a thriller with some humor. The entire shooting will take place on a flight. It is an experiment. When I spoke to some people, I got opinions about whether such an experiment is necessary at this time. Later, I felt like doing this film with Satya. After 'Mathu Vadalaru', I got that budget and market scope. We changed the character to suit Satya and made it.

What was Satya's reaction when he told the story?
When I first told him this story, his character was a flight attendant. Then when I told him, 'You are the hero,' he was shocked. At first, he said it was a risk. But after I explained in detail how I would make it, he got very excited. His character has seriousness, humor, suspense... everything.
