Four cheetah cubs die in Kuno

Sheopur (TSIT): Four cheetah cubs born to female cheetah KGP-12 were found dead at Kuno National Park in Madhya Pradesh's Sheopur on Tuesday morning, in a setback for India's cheetah reintroduction project. Forest officials suspect the cubs may have been killed by a wild predator. The cubs, born on April 11, were about one month old. A monitoring team discovered their bodies near the den site during routine tracking in the Sheopur forest area, the Cheetah Field Director at Kuno said while confirming the report. It stated that the same team had seen all four cubs alive on Monday evening, making the deaths sudden. The Field Director of Project Cheetah, in an official statement on Tuesday, said the cubs' bodies were partially eaten, which suggests an attack by a carnivorous animal.

PM Modi's 'Work From Home' Call to Save Fuel Sparks Debate in the Real Estate

Hyderabad (TSIT)

Amidst escalating tensions in West Asia and soaring global fuel prices, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has urged citizens to reconsider adopting the 'Work From Home' (WFH) model wherever feasible. Intended as a strategic move to conserve fuel, this appeal has triggered fresh discussions within the Indian real estate sector, particularly regarding its potential impact on office leasing and residential property demand. Speaking at an event in Hyderabad on Sunday, the Prime Minister advised employees to work from home when possible to mitigate the economic strain of rising energy costs. Additionally, he urged citizens to pause gold purchases for a year, avoid unnecessary foreign travel, and prioritise domestic products. With India importing approximately 85% of its crude oil requirements, the government anticipates these measures will significantly ease the pressure on the nation's foreign exchange reserves. However, the Prime Minister's WFH suggestion is expected to have a direct ripple effect on the real estate market. Office leasing across India's top seven cities witnessed a massive resurgence during the recent times. Industry analysts now suggest that if corporate entities pivot back to remote or hybrid work models, the momentum of new office space leasing could slow down.

Expansion plans in major tech corridors, including Hyderabad's HITEC City, Bengaluru's Outer Ring Road, and Gurugram's Cyber City, may face delays.

Conversely, the residential real estate segment is poised to benefit from this shift. According to a Business Standard report, Santhosh Kumar, Vice Chairman of the Anarock Group, noted that even if the Prime Minister's appeal yields a temporary shift, it will further amplify the demand for larger homes with dedicated workspaces—a trend that initially gained traction during the Covid-19 pandemic. Echoing this sentiment, Ashish Jerath, President of Smartworld Developers, stated that their upcoming projects are already being designed to include dedicated work-from-home areas. Furthermore, Keerthi Chilukuri, Founder of the Stonecraft Group, explained that in tech-driven cities like Hyderabad, the demand for integrated communities offering superior connectivity and lifestyle amenities will only strengthen.

Despite these projections, some experts caution against expecting an immediate market disruption. Pankaj Kapoor, Managing Director at Liasen Foras, stated that unless the government issues official, mandatory directives, the real estate sector is unlikely to experience drastic immediate impacts. Currently, a majority of companies plan to maintain their existing hybrid work policies. Meanwhile, market observers predict that reducing expenditures on commodities like gold could prompt citizens to divert their savings into real estate, viewing it as a more stable long-term asset. Ultimately, the lasting impact on the property market will depend heavily on how the corporate sector responds to the Prime Minister's appeal and the duration of the ongoing global energy crisis.

Cong alleges ECI-BJP nexus in Bengal appointments

New Delhi (TSIT)

The Congress on Tuesday launched a sharp attack on the BJP and the Election Commission of India over key appointments in West Bengal, alleging "brazen collusion" between the ruling party and the poll body. Congress general secretary in-charge communications Jairam Ramesh alleged that former Chief Election Officer Manoj Agarwal and senior bureaucrat Subrata Gupta had been rewarded with top posts in West Bengal after allegedly helping the BJP gain electoral advantage through manipulation of electoral rolls.

In a post on social media platform X, Ramesh claimed that Manoj Agarwal, a 1990-batch IAS officer who oversaw the 2026 West Bengal Assembly election as the state's Chief Election Officer, had now been appointed as the new Chief Secretary to the Government of West Bengal. He further alleged that Subrata Gupta, also a 1990-batch IAS officer who served as Special Roll Observer overseeing deletions under the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls, had been appointed Chief Adviser to West Bengal Chief Minister Suwendu Adhikari.

"These appointments reflect the brazen collusion and connivance between the ECI and BJP. There is no longer even an attempt to keep the collusion discrete or concealed," Ramesh said in his post.

Leader of the Opposition Rahul Gandhi also attacked the BJP and the Election Commission in a separate post on X, writing: "In the BJP-EC's 'market of thieves,' the bigger the theft, the bigger the reward."

Claiming that the Election Commission acted in a partisan manner during the Assembly polls, the Congress leader alleged that "an entire state went to election with 27 lakh people being debarred from voting" and asserted that the exercise was "tactfully executed by the ECI to create an electoral advantage for BJP". The remarks come amid continuing Opposition criticism of the Election Commission over voter list revisions and alleged irregularities in several states.

Akhilesh slams BJP over economy & austerity call

PRAYAGRAJ (UP)

Samajwadi Party president Akhilesh Yadav on Tuesday called the BJP a "threat" to the country's economy, and claimed that Prime Minister Narendra Modi's recent appeal to people for austerity reflected the ruling party's "decline". Addressing mediapersons here, Yadav said the BJP-led government at the Centre has "ruined" the economy despite making tall claims over the years.

"The BJP is a threat to the country's economy. Prime Minister Narendra Modi's recent appeal to people reflected the ruling party's decline. The BJP has been in power at the Centre for 12 years. Why has the economy weakened and gone off track? Why is the government having to make such appeals to people?" he asked.

'NEET & unclean': CBI registers FIR over 'paper leak'

New Delhi (TSIT)

The CBI lodged an FIR on Tuesday in connection with the alleged leak of the NEET (UG) 2026 paper, officials said. The high-stakes entrance examination, held on May 3 for admission to undergraduate medical courses, was cancelled by the National Testing Agency (NTA) on Tuesday after allegations of malpractice surfaced.

After receiving a reference from the Centre, the CBI moved with alacrity, registering a case of criminal conspiracy, cheating and other offences, the officials said. The agency will soon dispatch a team to Rajasthan to collect material from the Special Operations Group (SOG) of the state police, which was investigating the case. The CBI had earlier solved the NEET paper-leak cases of 2024.

The Centre has referred the matter to the CBI for what the officials described as a "comprehensive inquiry" into allegations of paper leak linked to the examination. The NEET-UG 2026 was conducted in 551 Indian cities and at 14 overseas centres. Nearly 23 lakh candidates had registered for the test, which was administered by the NTA at centres across the country. According to the NTA, information relating to alleged malpractice was received on the evening of May 7, four days after the examination was held. The NTA said the inputs were escalated to central agencies the following morning for "independent verification and necessary action".

The Rajasthan Police's SOG had claimed that a "guess paper" for chemistry that was allegedly circulated among students ahead of the examination had approximately 410 questions, including roughly 120 questions that appeared in the test.

While the chemistry paper in the exam carries 45 questions, the test used four sets of question papers. "It is reported that this guess paper had been circulating among the students well in advance; it began reaching them as early as 15 days to a month prior to the actual examination. We are investigating on the basis of the guess paper and it is also available in open domain," ADG, SOG, Vishal Bansal, had said.

Arvind Kejriwal sees 'political patronage' behind NEET paper leak

New Delhi, May 12 : Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) convenor Arvind Kejriwal on Tuesday slammed the Central government over the NEET-UG 2026 paper leak and questioned its 'silence and inaction' against the examination mafia. Speaking to newsmen in a press conference,

Kejriwal claimed that the large-scale collusion at top levels and political patronage to those involved in such crimes are primarily the reasons behind the paper leak of such magnitude. He said that the lives of lakhs of students are at stake because of the NEET paper leak, but the government is looking the other way, questioning whether it understands the scale of suffering that the children and their families go through during such times.

The NEET examinations, held on May 3, were cancelled on Tuesday by the National Testing Agency (NTA), the central body that conducts competitive exams, after incriminating inputs were received by the central agencies about irregularities in the examination process.

Kejriwal, accusing the Centre of gross failure as well as negligence, said that this was not the first time that the exam papers had been leaked.

APCC alleges cancellation of NEET exam is Centre's failure, demands action against those responsible

Vijayawada: Termination of the NEET UG 2026 entrance examination as unfortunate, Andhra Pradesh Congress Committee (APCC) has asked the Central government to take stringent action against those involved in the paper leak.

In a statement here on Tuesday, APCC Vice-president Kolanukonda Shivaji said that around 27.5 lakh students appeared for the NEET 2026 examination, which was conducted across 561 cities in India and 14 places abroad, while nearly 58,000 to 70,000 students attended the exam in Andhra Pradesh alone. "Grave injustice was meted out to the students by the Centre by cancelling the NEET UG 2026," the Congress leader regretted.

The Congress leader said that it is shameful that the question papers had been leaked prior to the examination, besides shocking allegations that the papers were sold for sums ranging from Rs 30,000 to Rs 3 lakhs. He further remarked that it was regrettable that the Central Government responded only ten days after the NEET examination was conducted on May 3rd. It is also unfortunate that the Centre responded after 10 days after conducting the NEET examination, the Congress leader lashed out.

"Under the Modi government, a series of paper leaks have occurred in various entrance and recruitment examinations, while leaks have taken place in nearly 89 exams to date, 48 of them had to be conducted again," Shivaji observed, pointing out that this serves as proof of the Central Government's administrative failure.

The APCC Vice-president expressed deep anguish stating that students are subjected to severe mental stress whenever exams are cancelled and rescheduled following a paper leak and that the hopes of those who studied sincerely and appeared for the examinations are being shattered.

The Congress leader demanded stringent action against those who were responsible for the paper leak and the union Ministers concerned should be held responsible for the paper leak. Shivaji also demanded that the Central government apologize to the students for paper leak and cancellation of the NEET examination.

Scar-Free Salivary Gland Surgery Saves Six-Year-Old at Apollo

Hyderabad, May 12: Doctors at Apollo Hospitals Jubilee Hills successfully treated a six-year-old child suffering from recurrent swelling and pain below the jaw caused by a salivary gland stone using advanced minimally invasive sialendoscopy. According to Dr. Manusrut, the child had repeated episodes of swelling in the submandibular gland region, particularly during meals, due to blockage of the salivary duct by a stone. Using a 1.3 mm miniature endoscope inserted through the natural duct opening, doctors removed the stone without any external incision or major surgery.

The gland was preserved completely, enabling quick recovery with minimal discomfort and no visible scar, the surgeon said. Dr. Manusrut described sialendoscopy as a significant advancement in the treatment of salivary gland disorders. The procedure helps diagnose and treat conditions such as salivary stones, ductal narrowing, recurrent gland infections, autoimmune-related salivary disorders, post-radioiodine therapy complications and juvenile recurrent parotitis. He said patients with salivary duct obstruction often experience recurrent swelling near the jaw, pain while eating, dry mouth and repeated infections. Earlier, severe cases frequently required open surgery or removal of the gland, but sialendoscopy now offers a scar-free, gland-preserving alternative with faster recovery and shorter hospital stay.

Tejasvi Veerapalli said the successful procedure underlines the growing importance of minimally invasive salivary gland endoscopy services and the need for greater awareness and timely referrals for such conditions.

The miracle of the guess paper "Guruji"

These days, the atmosphere surrounding the NEET exam is as if a web series full of mystery and thriller has been released. Every day, a new revelation, a new character, and a new story emerge. Some are saying that the question paper was circulating in advance, while others are claiming that the "guess paper" contained the same questions as the actual exam. Not only the questions, but the order of the options, the language, even commas and full stops are being reported as identical. Now, students and parents are wondering whether this was a "guess" or a miracle of some supernatural power?

If all this is true, then the people of the country certainly want to see the "Guruji" who performed this miracle. For years, large coaching institutes in Kota and Sikar have been building structures worth billions of rupees and claiming success. Thousands of teachers have been teaching day and night. Students have been risking their sleep, childhood, and even mental peace to prepare. But what lakhs of rupees in fees and years of hard work could not achieve, a single "guess paper" has accomplished. This is the most scathing satire on the education system.

It's being reported that 90 out of 90 questions in Biology and 45 out of 45 in Chemistry matched. If so, it can't be a mere coincidence. This is an insult to the hard work of millions of students who study diligently. It's a mockery of the struggle of a farmer father who sells his land to pay his child's fees. It's an attack on the hopes of a mother who sacrifices her dreams for her child's future.

An exam like NEET isn't just an exam; it's a door to millions of dreams. Here, a single mark can change the course of life. In such a situation, if there's a suspicion that the question paper has been leaked or is available in advance, trust is the first thing to be shattered. And when trust in the education system begins to wane, not just the exam, but the entire society is in crisis.

The most interesting thing is that the matter reached the police on the day of the exam. Some people were even arrested, but no FIR has been filed yet. This silence raises questions. Are influential people under attack? Has education become such a big business that people are afraid to expose the truth? Or is this the same old story where money and influence are more valuable than hard work? Today, the hardworking student feels betrayed. He spent years immersing himself in books, taking test series, and studying all night. But someone else "saw" the question paper before the exam. What value does all that hard work hold? It's natural for the student to wonder whether the mistake was his or her honesty's? This isn't just cheating on exams, but an attack on the morality of society.

When young people begin to see that the path to success isn't hard work, but rather through jugaad, networking, and leaks, the entire generation begins to lose faith.

The NEET crisis and the credibility of the examination system

The repeated breakdown of trust in the name of transparency, and the inevitable challenge of reform. The uncertainty surrounding NEET-2026 and the fear of its cancellation have increased the anxiety of millions of students and parents. Competitive exams are not just a selection process, but the foundation of a young person's future, hard work, and faith. If the examination system is repeatedly questioned, it has the greatest impact on students who are preparing sincerely. In such a situation, the administration's responsibility is not limited to conducting the exam; ensuring transparency, timely information, and fairness becomes equally important. Maintaining trust in the examination system is the paramount responsibility of any democratic education system. India's competitive examination system is not just an admission process, but the foundation of social justice, opportunity, and talent testing. When irregularities, doubts, or cancellations occur in a national examination like the National Eligibility cum Entrance Test (NEET), it impacts not just one exam but also the trust, time, and mental balance of millions of students. An examination is not merely a technical event; it symbolizes the trust the state ensures that hard work, ability, and preparation are properly rewarded. Therefore, the credibility of the examination system is the backbone of any democratic education system. The most worrying aspect of cases like NEET is not just the fact that a single incident occurred, but why such incidents keep recurring. When a national exam comes under scrutiny, public confidence is shaken. Students, parents, teachers, coaching institutes, and the administration—all grapple with a question that cannot be answered by mere press releases. The question is: is our examination system truly robust enough to simultaneously deliver on all three fronts: transparency, fairness, and security? If not, the problem isn't just with one exam, but with the entire system. Crises in examination systems don't arise suddenly. They stem from small weaknesses that aren't addressed in a timely manner. If even one link at all these levels—question paper preparation, confidential material protection, logistics transportation, examination center monitoring, technical verification, identification procedures, and answer sheet handling—is weak, the entire system can be put under scrutiny. In modern times, examinations are no longer merely a pen-and-paper affair; they have become a system interconnected with a highly complex network of information, security, and control. Therefore, negligence at any level directly impacts the future of students. It must also be understood that trust in the examination system is built not only on transparency, but also on consistency. If a student lacks assurance that the value of their hard work is stable and secure, their preparation becomes uncertain. Even before an honest student reaches the examination center, many questions arise—will the question paper be secure? Will no one gain unfair advantage? Will the entire process be fair? When such questions become commonplace, it should be understood that the crisis is not merely administrative, but also moral. The fundamental objective of education is equality of opportunity, and if this is weakened, the system deviates from its purpose. This concern becomes even more acute in an examination like the National Eligibility cum Entrance Test, as it is not merely a professional entrance exam but the center of the socio-economic dreams of millions of families. Students from rural areas, lower-middle class candidates, and youth from small towns dream of advancing on the strength of their merit despite limited resources. But when the integrity of the examination is questioned, these same students suffer the most. Those with influence, resources, or networks often circumvent the system's weaknesses; but those with only hard work are the most affected. Therefore, examination transparency is not just a matter of administrative reform, but also a question of social justice. The crisis in the examination system also has a profound impact on students' mental health. Preparing for competitive exams is already extremely stressful. Students endure long periods of strict discipline, limited social life, family expectations, and uncertainty about their future. When the future of the exam itself becomes uncertain, the mental pressure increases exponentially. Some students become frustrated, some repeatedly change their strategies, and some even fall into deep depression. Therefore, the examination administration must understand that it is not simply announcing dates or establishing centers, but is also handling the future of young people. The digital age has brought both convenience and new challenges to examination administration. Systems like online registration, digital identity, CCTV surveillance, encrypted data, and centralized control have modernized the examination system. However, this has also increased technological risks. Data leaks, software tampering, internal collusion, cyber intrusions, and the spread of misinformation have all emerged as new challenges. Therefore, simply adopting technology is not enough; its security, audit, and accountability must also be equally robust. If the technology itself is weak, claims of transparency will prove hollow. Improving the examination system requires establishing accountability first. When an examination becomes controversial, attention often focuses solely on the incident. But the real question is whose negligence allowed the incident to occur. A review of the role of everyone—the exam-organizing body, the relevant ministry, security agencies, central-level officials, and local administration—is essential. Accountability means not just removing individual officials, but re-evaluating the entire system. If the culprits are not caught, the shortcomings in the process are not made public, and corrective steps are not taken.

The Taj Mahal Controversy: Myth vs. History

The Taj Mahal is a cultural heritage of India and one of the world's most famous historical buildings. Built by the Mughal Emperor Shah Jahan in memory of his wife Mumtaz Mahal, this magnificent monument is considered a symbol of love, art, and architectural beauty. Built between 1632 and 1653, this marble mausoleum is now listed as one of the Seven Wonders of the World. However, controversies have periodically arisen regarding its origin and construction. Some claim it to be a Hindu temple or a palace, and others question its historicity based on the so-called "Tejo Mahalaya" theory. In recent years, the film "The Taj Story" has reignited this debate. Therefore, it is essential to understand this topic based on historical facts, archaeological evidence, and authenticated documents, rather than on emotions or rumors. The Taj Mahal is located on the southern bank of the Yamuna River in Agra. Contemporary historian Abdul Hameed Lahori, in his famous work "Padshahnama," detailed that after Mumtaz Mahal's death, Shah Jahan commissioned the construction of this mausoleum in her memory. According to historians, approximately 20,000 artisans and craftsmen worked for 22 years to complete the building. Persian, Turkish, Indian, and Central Asian artisans played a role in the construction. The use of white marble from Makrana (Rajasthan) and precious stones from various regions makes its grandeur unparalleled. The Taj Mahal's architecture is considered a fine example of the Mughal style, showcasing a beautiful blend of Islamic arches, Persian domes, and Indian architectural elements. Its Charbagh-style garden, its surrounding minarets, its intricate marble carvings, and its artistic inscribing of Quranic verses make it a world-class heritage site. UNESCO declared it a World Heritage Site in 1983, calling it "the finest example of Mughal architecture." The Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) also clearly considers it a Mughal-era mausoleum. The modern controversy surrounding the Taj Mahal is believed to have begun in 1989 with Purushottam Nagesh Oak's book, "Taj Mahal: The True Story." Oak claimed that the Taj Mahal was actually a Shiva temple called "Tejo Mahalaya," which Shah Jahan captured and converted into a mausoleum. He cited the Sanskrit etymology of the word "Taj," certain architectural features, and enclosed chambers in his arguments. However, historians and archaeologists dismissed these claims as baseless. Most importantly, no contemporary Hindu text, inscription, official document, or British-era survey mentions a temple named "Tejo Mahalaya." If such a massive structure had existed as a temple in the past, references to it would surely be found in some historical record. Courts have also dismissed these claims from time to time. In petitions filed in 2000, 2005, and 2017, the courts stated that such claims were inconsistent with historical facts. The Supreme Court also rejected these claims due to the lack of concrete evidence. The so-called "22 Closed Rooms" of the Taj Mahal have long been a subject of curiosity and controversy. These rooms, located in the basement area of the Taj Mahal, have long been kept closed for security reasons. Some groups claim that Hindu idols, Shivalingas, or other religious relics are hidden in these rooms. However, the Archaeological Survey of India has clarified that these rooms are auxiliary chambers built for the structural strength of the building. They were kept closed to the public due to concerns about damage to the marble from high humidity, carbon dioxide, and tourist activity.

Several experts, including archaeologist K.K. Mohammed, have inspected these rooms. They say there's nothing unusual inside, except for the typical walls, arches, and damaged plaster. Even the photographs released in 2022 showed no religious symbols or idols in these rooms. This makes it clear that most of the rumors about these rooms are based on imagination and sensationalism. Recently, the film "The Taj Story" revived this controversy. The film attempts to portray the Taj Mahal as a Shiva temple and presents the mystery of the 22 locked rooms in a mysterious manner. However, historians believe this portrayal is driven more by imagination and political discourse than by historical facts. Art and cinema enjoy freedom of expression, but when presenting history, factual responsibility becomes equally important. The Taj Mahal is not just a building, but a symbol of India's shared cultural heritage. Its architecture reflects a remarkable blend of Indian and Persian artistic traditions. The use of Indian symbols such as the lotus indicates that Mughal architecture was influenced by local art and culture. Limiting it to a single religion or community would be a narrowing of the breadth of history. Today, the Taj Mahal attracts millions of tourists every year and contributes significantly to India's tourism economy. Challenges such as pollution, acid rain, the Yamuna's declining water level, and environmental damage are already raising serious questions about its preservation. At this time, the need for conservation and promotion of this World Heritage Site is greater than baseless controversies. Ultimately, the Taj Mahal is an immortal masterpiece of history, art, and human sensibility. History should be evaluated based on evidence and research, not rumors and political pressures. Rising above myths and controversies, we must view this monument as a symbol of India's cultural unity and shared heritage. This approach is the hallmark of a society that is responsible for its history and aware of its future.

Greedy owners extract milk and leave them to shovel in the garbage

A horrifying scene is becoming commonplace in almost every city, big or small, in India—cows searching for food in garbage heaps, calves swallowing plastic, animals wandering the streets, and a population struggling with filth. On one hand, society worships the cow as "mother," while on the other, those same cows are dying on the streets due to hunger, disease, and negligence. This is not just a failure of the sanitation system, but a living testament to our social insensitivity and duplicity. Today, the morning scene in most cities across the country is nearly identical. After milking, cattle owners let their cows loose. These animals then wander the streets, markets, and garbage dumps, searching for food. Rotten vegetables, plastic bags, medical waste, and toxic garbage enter their stomachs, gradually leading to their deaths. Many times, kilograms of plastic are removed from cows' stomachs during operations, yet society's sensibilities remain unabated. The biggest question is with those cattle breeders who consider animals merely "milking machines." Cows are worshipped as long as they generate income, but as soon as they are abandoned on the streets, their responsibility is considered over. This is the ugliest face of greed and inhumanity. What culture or religion is it to abandon the animal that sustains the household, pays the children's fees, and provides the family income, to forage in the garbage? Ironically, the cow is the most rousing emotion in the country. From political to religious platforms, "Mother Cow" is hailed. People post videos on social media of themselves feeding cows, claiming to be great animal lovers. But if there was true love and respect for the cow, no cow would be seen hungry, injured, or eating plastic on city streets. Today, the situation has deteriorated so much that stray animals in cities are not only losing their own lives but also posing a threat to the lives of ordinary people. Thousands of people are injured in road accidents every year. Animals suddenly appearing in the dark of night often cause fatal accidents. But neither the administration nor society seems serious. The municipal corporation and local administration periodically talk about launching campaigns, but the problem is never addressed at its root. Some animals are captured and sent to cow shelters, action is shown for a few days, and then everything returns to normal. The real problem is that animal owners are not held accountable. Why is there no strict action taken against someone who abandons their animal on the street? This crisis isn't limited to animals. The waste and filth spread across cities has become a major threat to public health. Open garbage heaps are breeding grounds for mosquitoes, flies, and infections. During the rainy season, this garbage clogs drains, causing waterlogging and a disease crisis. Yet, we still try to shirk our responsibilities by considering cleanliness solely a government responsibility. India makes grand claims about "smart cities" and modern development. Shining roads, sprawling malls, and tall buildings have become symbols of progress. But true development is where both humans and animals can live with dignity and security. In a city where cows search for food in garbage and people pass by, taking the scene for granted, development is merely a sham. Our biggest problem is that we've turned sensitivity into a performance. It's easy to show compassion in front of the camera, but it's harder to demand systemic change. People donate to temples, go on pilgrimages, and debate cow issues, yet remain silent about the filth and plight of animals around them. Politics has also been solely focused on this issue for emotional gain. Elections are marked by speeches about cows and religion, but there's no concrete policy in sight to address the dying cows on the streets. Crores of rupees are claimed to be spent on cow shelters, yet the number of stray animals in cities continues to grow. Where is this money going? Who will hold accountable? The saddest thing is that generations of children are becoming accustomed to this inhumane sight. The daily sight of injured animals on the streets, cows searching for food in garbage, and the filth of the environment slowly kills their senses. A society that cannot even be kind to its animals cannot remain humane towards humans for long. The solution is clear, all that is needed is willpower. First, the responsibility of livestock owners must be established. Registration of every animal should be mandatory, and heavy fines should be imposed for abandoning animals on the street. Municipal bodies should implement modern waste management systems. Strict action is needed against the open use of plastic and improper waste disposal. Transparent audits of the actual condition of cow shelters should be conducted. Society must also change its behavior. Throwing garbage on the streets, leaving plastic in the open, and blaming the government for every problem is an easy way out. Cities change through civic discipline and collective responsibility. Today, the garbage strewn across the streets and cows searching for food in it isn't just a spectacle of mismanagement. They reflect the moral decline of our society. There's a lot of noise about cows, but the silence about their real suffering is even greater. Until this double standard is eradicated, neither will cities be truly clean, nor will animals be safe, nor will our society remain worthy of being called sensitive.

COWS DYING ON THE ROADS

Musk and Tim Cook among CEOs expected to accompany Trump on China trip

AGENCY
Washington: US President Donald Trump is expected to bring a host of top business and technology industry executives on his trip to China this week.

Among those set to join the president on his official trip to Beijing are Tim Cook of Apple, Elon Musk of Tesla and SpaceX, Larry Fink of BlackRock, as well as other executives from Meta, Visa, JP Morgan, Boeing, Cargill and more.

In total, 17 US executives will join Trump on the trip, a White House official with knowledge of the plans told the BBC. The trip is seen as important for the US, as Trump will meet with President Xi Jinping at a time of growing economic and technological animosity between the two countries.

In addition to Musk, Cook and Fink, the full list of the executives set to join Trump as part of the official US delegation to China is as follows: Dina Powell McCormick, president and vice chair of Meta; Kelly Orberg, president and chief executive of Boeing; Ryan McInerney, chief executive of Visa; Stephen Schwarzman, chief executive of Blackstone Brian Sikes, chief executive and chairman of Cargill; Jane Fraser, chief executive of Citigroup; Jim Anderson, chief executive of Coherent; Henry Lawrence Culp, chief executive of GE Aerospace; David Solomon, chief executive of Goldman Sachs; Jacob Thaysen, chief executive of Illumina; Michael Miebach, president of Mastercard. Absent from the list is Nvidia boss Jensen Huang, whose company is central to the rivalry between the US and China over computer chips and artificial intelligence (AI). The BBC has contacted Nvidia for comment. Last week, Huang told business news channel CNBC that it would be a "privilege" to represent the US in China if he was invited on the trip. It is also notable that Sanjay Mehrotra, the CEO of Micron Technology, will be part of Trump's delegation. His presence is interesting as Beijing restricted the use of some Micron chips in critical infrastructure in 2023 on national security grounds - a move the firm has said negatively impacted its business in China.

Semiconductors remain central to the US-China economic relationship, despite ongoing tensions over technology and export controls. Chuck Robbins, chief executive and chairman of Cisco, had been invited to be a part of the trip "but is unable to due to earnings," according to a company spokeswoman. Together, the executives represent a swath of US business interests, from social media and consumer hardware, to computer chips and commercial manufacturing. A spokeswoman for Illumina, a biotechnology company based in California, said Thaysen "is honored to be part of the delegation" and that the company hopes the trip will be "an opportunity to strengthen relationships and shape the future of precision medicine." Representatives of the other companies did not immediately respond to requests for comment. Trump's visit to China will be the first by a US president in nearly a decade and marks a key test of a fragile trade truce between the two countries, following a tit-for-tat trade war which saw them roll out tariffs which at times topped 100%. The tariffs were paused in October 2025 after Trump's last meeting with Xi, which took place in South Korea. Looming large over the upcoming meeting will be the US and Israel's war in Iran, which has already forced a delay to Trump and Xi's meeting. Trump is expected to push China, which relies on Iran for cheap oil, to help facilitate an agreement between Tehran and Washington to end the war. China also wants the conflict to end. It has limited the supply of oil to the country, hitting the buying power of other countries around the world that import Chinese goods.

eBay rejects $55.5bn offer from GameStop

Highlights

Online marketplace eBay has rejected a $55.5bn (£40.9bn) takeover offer from video game retailer GameStop, calling it "unsolicited" and "neither credible nor attractive".

AGENCY
Washington: Online marketplace eBay has rejected a $55.5bn (£40.9bn) takeover offer from video game retailer GameStop, calling it "unsolicited" and "neither credible nor attractive". Analysts had expected the offer to be rejected as GameStop is much smaller than eBay, which said there was "uncertainty" over how the deal would be financed. Although eBay has suffered in recent years, partly due to more competition from online sellers like Amazon, Etsy and Temu, it insisted its turnaround plan was working. GameStop rose to prominence as a "meme stock", which sees retail investors buy up shares in unloved companies that professional investors have bet against, causing the share price to rise and fall sharply. In a letter to GameStop chief executive Ryan Cohen rejecting the surprise offer, eBay's Board of Directors said the online auction giant was a "strong, resilient business". It cited as a reason for rejection "the impact of your proposal on eBay's long-term growth and profitability", adding it had also considered the offer's "operational risks, and leadership structure of a combined entity". It also cited "GameStop's governance" in the list of factors it had determined before rejecting last week's bid. But it wouldn't be the end of the line for GameStop if it chooses to take its proposal directly to eBay shareholders - which Cohen said last week he would do if faced with a "no" from the board.

eBay's net profit in 2025 rose to $418.4m which, despite a fall in sales, was up from the previous year's $131.3m. GameStop is worth about a quarter of online auction giant eBay. It has around 1,600 stores globally, mostly in the US. When it made its offer, GameStop said that it had a commitment letter from TD Securities to provide around $20bn in debt to help finance the takeover. Cohen said eBay could be much more successful under his leadership and even rival Amazon. But analyst Sucharita Kodali, a retail analyst at research firm Forrester, told the BBC at the time that the proposal did not sound like a "terribly good offer" as it would saddle eBay with GameStop's debt. The BBC has approached GameStop for comment.

ASCI Releases Draft Guidelines for Responsible Labelling of AI-Generated Content in Advertising

TSIT DESK
Mumbai, May 12, 2026: The Advertising Standards Council of India (ASCI) today released draft guidelines for the responsible labelling of synthetically generated content in advertising. The guidelines are aligned with the Information Technology (Intermediary Guidelines and Digital Media Ethics Code) Amendment Rules (2026), amended on February 10, to ensure transparency while avoiding consumer label fatigue around synthetically-generated information. As brands increasingly turn to Artificial Intelligence (AI) to power their campaigns, the draft guidelines advocate a risk-based approach, focusing on consumer outcomes rather than regulating the technology itself. AI use in advertising is considered misleading or harmful only when it creates unfulfillable expectations, exploits vulnerable populations, depicts unsafe situations, or replicates a real person's likeness without consent.

on the risk it poses to consumers. The guidelines classify AI-generated advertising content into three risk categories:
1. High Risk (Prohibited Content): High-risk advertisements are those that are illegal, infringe on rights, make misleading claims, or violate the ASCI Code. These will violate the code even if an AI label is used. Examples include:
· Fabricating endorsements or testimonials
· Exaggerating product results or features through claims or visual representations to create a misleading impression
· Creating fake locations that appear realistic to the consumer
· Using deepfakes, copy-righted work or a person's likeness without consent
· Using AI to generate fictional authority figures with identifiable cues, such as an AI-generated fake doctor promoting a supplement, implying medical endorsement/expertise, etc advertisements are those where AI use materially influences consumer decisions, and the lack of disclosure would mislead consumers. Labelling is mandatory in these cases to help consumers understand the nature of the representation. Examples include:

· Using virtual or synthetically generated influencers and ambassadors
· Replicating a real person's likeness or voice even with their consent for personalised messaging · Using synthetically generated visuals for product performance unless the visuals replicate how the product actually performs · Creating realistic events, settings or situations entirely with AI · Demonstrating a product that does not currently exist
· Creating AI-generated exaggerated sound effects that are highly relevant to the product's core features · Using AI for paid or sponsored product suggestions, which must specifically be labelled as 'sponsored by'

3. Low Risk (No Labelling Required): Low-risk advertisements feature minor modifications or use AI in ways that have no material impact on a consumer's ability to make an informed choice. No label is required for:
· Minor Enhancements: Routine editing, colour correction, noise reduction, standard blemish removal, and minor lighting tweaks that do not alter the substance or core claims of the ad
· Background and Ambient Elements: Purely decorative AI-generated backgrounds, abstract skylines, ambient music, jingles, or background sound effects (like crowd cheers) that are unrelated to the product's actual capabilities or promise
· Fantastical Elements: Obvious, unrealistic effects that audiences recognise as not depicting reality, such as dragons or fairies · Administrative and Text Uses: Generating or enhancing advertising copy, creating audio descriptions for the visually impaired.

The requirement to label AI-generated content is based

2. Medium Risk (Labelling Required): Medium-risk

Asian shares trade mixed after Wall Street rally despite Iran war worries

AGENCY
Tokyo: Asian shares traded mixed early Tuesday, May 12, as optimism encouraged by a record rally on Wall Street clashed with anxiety about surging oil prices and a possible AI bubble. Japan's benchmark Nikkei 225 added 0.7 per cent to 62,881.03. South Korea's Kospi dropped 1.2 per cent to 7,726.30, in what analysts are categorising as fallout from overreliance on fraying AI hopes. "Global equities remain dangerously dependent on a tiny cluster of AI leaders, creating a rally structure that looks powerful on the surface but increasingly fragile underneath," said Stephen Innes, analyst with SPI Asset Management. He believes South Korea may be among the first major economies that will undergo what he called "the political redistribution phase of the AI boom." Australia's S&P/ASX 200 dipped 0.3 per cent to 8,676.60. Hong Kong's Hang Seng gained 0.2 per cent to 26,467.50, while the Shanghai Composite lost 0.4 per cent to 4,208.00. Oil prices continued to rise, as the war with Iran threatens to drag on. Benchmark US crude rose 91 cents to USD 98.98 a barrel. Brent crude, the international standard, climbed 90 cents to USD 105.11 a barrel. Adding to worries were comments from President Donald Trump that the US-Iran ceasefire was on "life support" after rejecting Iran's latest proposal to end their war. That raises the stakes for Trump's trip this week to China. China is the biggest buyer of Iran's sanctioned crude oil. The war has already sent the price for a barrel of Brent racing up from prewar levels of roughly USD 70 and delivered inflation through the global economy. The war has shut the Strait of Hormuz and kept oil tankers stuck in the Persian Gulf instead of delivering crude to customers worldwide. Still, some companies are reporting bigger profit than analysts expected, which means the US economy is holding up even though households are feeling discouraged by expensive gasoline and tariffs. On Wall Street, the S&P 500 rose 0.2 per cent from its prior all-time high set on Friday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 95 points, or 0.2 per cent, and the Nasdaq composite added 0.1 per cent to reach its own all-time high. All told, the S&P 500 rose 13.91 points to 7,412.84. The Dow Jones Industrial Average added 95.31 to 49,704.47, and the Nasdaq composite gained 27.05 to 26,274.13. In the bond market, Treasury yields ticked higher. The 10-year yield rose to 4.40 per cent from 4.38 per cent late Friday. In currency trading, the US dollar rose to 157.57 Japanese yen from 157.12 yen. The euro cost USD 1.1761, down from USD 1.1787. Japan's benchmark Nikkei 225 added 0.7 per cent to 62,881.03.

Trump says Iran ceasefire is on 'massive life support'

AGENCY
Washington:
US President
Donald

Trump has said the month-long ceasefire between the US and Iran is on "massive life support". He told reporters in the Oval Office on Monday that while the ceasefire remained in place, it was "unbelievably weak". Following Trump's comments, Iranian parliamentary speaker Mohammad Ghalibaf wrote on X that Iran's armed forces were "ready to respond and to teach a lesson for any aggression." Iran laid out its demands to end the war and reopen the Strait of Hormuz in a counter-offer sent to the US on Sunday.

Trump rejected the proposal, calling it "totally unacceptable" and a "piece of garbage". After Trump's comments, Esmail Baghaei, a foreign ministry spokesperson for Iran, said Tehran's proposals were "responsible" and "generous". After his comments saying Iran's armed forces ready to respond, Ghalibaf said in a separate post on X that there was "no alternative but to accept the rights of the Iranian people as laid out in the 14-point proposal". "The longer they drag their feet, the more American taxpayers will pay for it," he said. Tehran's offer includes an immediate end to the war on all fronts - a reference to the continued Israeli attacks against Iran-supported Hezbollah in Lebanon - a halt to the US naval blockade of Iranian ports and guarantees of no further attacks on Iran, according to Iran's semi-official Tasnim news agency. It also reportedly includes a demand for compensation for war damage and an emphasis on Iranian sovereignty over the Strait of Hormuz. Trump criticised the proposal, writing on Truth Social on Sunday: "I have just read the response from Iran's so-called 'Representatives.' I don't like it - TOTALLY UNACCEPTABLE." In response to Trump's comments, Baghaei said Iran would act "in any way necessary to secure our interests". Speaking in the Oval Office later on Monday, Trump addressed the ceasefire between the two countries which has largely been observed since April despite occasional exchanges of fire. He told reporters: "I would say the ceasefire is on massive life support... when the doctor walks in and says, 'Sir, your loved one has approximately a 1 percent chance of living.'" The US president said Iran's leaders were "very dishonourable people", adding: "Look, I've had to deal with them four or five times - they change their mind." "That piece of garbage they sent us - I didn't even finish reading it," he said. Trump also accused Iran of going back on an agreement to allow the US to remove its supply of enriched uranium. He insisted that Iran would "never have a nuclear weapon". Iran's Tasnim news agency quoted a source close to the negotiating team as saying: "There is no such thing in Iran's proposal as accepting taking out enriched nuclear material." Earlier this week, Trump repeated that the war in Iran will be "over quickly". But Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said that Iran's stockpile of enriched uranium must be "taken out" before the war can be considered over. "There's still enrichment sites that have to be dismantled," Netanyahu said in an interview on CBS's 60 Minutes show.

No sign of larger hantavirus outbreak, says UN health agency

AGENCY
Washington: There is "no sign" of a larger hantavirus outbreak after the evacuation of the last passengers from a disease-stricken cruise ship, the head of the UN health agency has said. But the World Health Organization's chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus warned "the situation could change" and there could still be more confirmed virus cases. The MV Hondius left Spain's Tenerife island on Monday and is sailing to the Dutch port of Rotterdam. Two flights with the final group of 28 passengers landed in nearby Eindhoven on Tuesday. Three people have died after travelling on the ship. An American and a French national who previously returned home have tested positive. Overall, seven cases have been confirmed. Twelve employees at a Dutch hospital are now in quarantine over possible exposure to the virus after treating one of the evacuated passengers. The hospital in the city of Nijmegen said on Monday this was a precautionary measure, as the workers did not follow strict protocols while handling the patient's blood and urine samples. At Tuesday's press conference in Madrid, Ghebreyesus said: "At the moment.

UGANDA'S PRESIDENT SWORN IN FOR RECORD SEVENTH TERM

AGENCY
Uganda's President Yoweri Museveni, 81, has been sworn in for a record seventh consecutive term following his landslide victory in disputed elections in January, extending his tenure as one of Africa's longest-serving rulers. Heavy security, including armoured tanks, were deployed in the capital, Kampala, ahead of the inauguration in what police said were measures intended to maintain public order. Museveni told the crowd that his new term should be regarded as a time for "no more sleep for all Ugandans". He added that people should focus on creating more wealth and jobs - and build on the progress made over last 40 years through the achievement of peace and the development of infrastructure. Museveni was declared the winner of the election with more than 70% of the vote, with his term expected to end in 2031. His main rival, pop star turned politician Bobi Wine, rejected the result, saying the poll was marred by "ballot-stuffing". Election officials denied the allegation. The 44-year-old opposition leader, whose real name is Robert Kyagulanyi Ssentamu, fled the country after the election, saying he feared that "the regime wanted to eliminate me". Museveni first came to power as a rebel leader in 1986 but since then has won seven elections. He is among the few African leaders in power for more than 40 years. Others include Congo-Brazzaville's Denis Sassou Nguesso, Equatorial Guinea's Teodoro Obiang and Cameroon's Paul Biya. The government declared the day a public holiday and the president's supporters thronged to the Kololo Independence Grounds in Kampala for the swearing-in ceremony. In his address, Museveni said that his government would use revenue from planned oil production to grow the economy and alleviate poverty. "We must protect what has been achieved, correct what still needs improvement and move forward together as one country," he added. African leaders who attended the ceremony included Congo's Félix Tshisekedi, South Sudan's Salva Kiir and Somalia's Hassan Sheikh Mohamud.

MEXICO CANCELS PLANS TO END SCHOOL YEAR EARLY FOR WORLD CUP

AGENCY
Mexico: The Mexican government has cancelled plans to end the school year more than a month early to ease traffic during the Fifa World Cup and an anticipated heatwave. Mexico is due to co-host the football tournament with the United States and Canada from 11 June to 19 July. The reversal comes after an outcry by parents who warned that it would disrupt their children's studies. Many families also said that they had been thrown into a tailspin, trying to arrange for weeks of childcare to cover the early finish. After the U-turn, classes will now finish on 15 July - and not on the proposed earlier date of 5 June. The row was brought about by an announcement by the education minister on 7 May, when Mario Delgado said that "an extraordinary heatwave.

is at its highest level since July 2022, at $4.50 (£3.33), according to data from the AAA motoring group. The rise in April's inflation figure, from 3.3% in March, makes it increasingly unlikely the Federal Reserve will cut interest rates this year. Isaac Stell, investment manager at the Wealth Club, said the inflation increase even left possible interest rate hikes "firmly on the table". It comes

US INFLATION JUMPS TO 3.8% AS ENERGY COSTS SURGE FROM IRAN WAR

AGENCY
Washington: US prices rose in April at their fastest rate since May 2023 as the impact of the war in Iran was increasingly felt by consumers. A jump in the cost of gasoline and groceries pushed the consumer price index (CPI), showing the rate prices rose by in the past 12 months, to 3.8%. It is the highest level since inflation hit 4% three years ago. The Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) said almost half of the rise was driven by surging energy costs, while housing and food costs also contributed. The US-Israel war in Iran, and the resulting effective closure of the key Strait of Hormuz shipping lane, has led to a jump in oil prices and this has caused a surge in the price of gas in the US. The national average price for a gallon of unleaded is at its highest level since July 2022, at $4.50 (£3.33), according to data from the AAA motoring group. The rise in April's inflation figure, from 3.3% in March, makes it increasingly unlikely the Federal Reserve will cut interest rates this year. Isaac Stell, investment manager at the Wealth Club, said the inflation increase even left possible interest rate hikes "firmly on the table". It comes days before Trump appointee Kevin Warsh is set to take over from Jerome Powell as chair of the US central bank. Stell said the incoming chair would enter the role with "little room for manoeuvre" and may be forced to take a more conservative approach. Trump had clashed with Powell over his reluctance to cut the central bank's interest rate, which the president hoped would spur on the US economy, and has made it clear he expects Warsh to push for cuts. It also poses a challenge for US President Donald Trump and the Republicans ahead of November's midterm elections, after Trump's 2024 re-election campaign focused largely on his plans to cut inflation. Air fares and clothing also increased in the year to April, while the price of new cars fell slightly. April's inflation figure also marked the first time in three years that Americans' pay packets are no longer growing faster than prices are rising. While prices rose by 3.8% for the year to April, average paychecks grew by just 3.6%. US stock markets opened lower on the news with the S&P 500 falling 0.6% and the Dow Jones Industrial Average down 0.7%.

Canvas hack: Company pays criminals to delete students' stolen data

AGENCY
Washington: The company behind the popular Canvas software, which was hacked last week causing major disruption at thousands of universities and colleges, has paid the hackers not to publish stolen data online. The cyber-attack affected an estimated 9,000 institutions in the US, Canada, Australia and the UK, with exams disrupted after the Canvas service went down. The hackers threatened to publish 3.5 terabytes of student and university data they had stolen in the breach. Instructure, the maker of Canvas, has now confirmed it has "reached an agreement" with the hackers, who have said they deleted the data and promised not to extort any students or institutions. Paying cyber criminals goes against the advice of law enforcement agencies around the world, as it can fuel further attacks and offers no guarantee the data has been deleted. In previous cases, criminals have accepted ransom payments but lied about destroying stolen data, instead keeping it for resale. For example, when the notorious LockBit ransomware group was hacked by the National Crime Agency, police found stolen data had not been deleted even after payments had been made. Instructure said in a statement on its website that protecting students' and education staff data was its primary motivation. "While there is never complete certainty when dealing with cyber criminals, we believe it was important to take every step within our control to give customers additional peace of mind, to the extent possible," the company said. Instructure did not set out the terms of the agreement but said that it meant that the data was returned to the company it received "digital confirmation of data destruction" it had been informed that no Instructure customers would be extorted as a result of the incident the agreement covers all affected customers.

EU needs to delay social media access for children - von der Leyen

AGENCY
Russels: European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen has proposed a "social media delay" for children in Europe and has said new legislation could be put forward in months. She told an EU summit in Copenhagen that an expert panel was due to come up with steps on how to protect minors online by July. Several countries in Europe and around the world have already introduced social media bans for minors, and von der Leyen did not rule that out. "The discussion about a minimum age for social media can no longer be ignored," she said. Denmark, where Tuesday's summit was being held, and nine other EU member states including France have proposed various minimum age limits for access to platforms. Australia became the first country in the world to introduce a ban for under-16s last December and European countries are planning to follow suit. In the UK, plans are under way for strict social media regulations, also for under-16s. This entails potential bans, age verification and content restrictions. A major national consultation is due to close on 26 May 2026. France is pushing to ban social media access for children under 15, aiming for implementation by September this year. In Spain, there are plans to ban social media access for under-16s, to combat addiction, pornography, and harmful content. The Portuguese government passed a bill earlier this year requiring parental consent for users aged 13 to 16 and strengthening restrictions on those under 13. The plan includes mandatory age-verification technology. Plans are being formed by the German government focusing on a potential ban for children under 14, with restrictions for teenagers up to 16. Key measures include enforcing strict age verification, creating "safe" youth versions, and removing addictive algorithms. Norway plans to introduce a strict social media ban for under-16s by the end of 2026. The legislation will require technology companies to implement age verification systems. New Zealand, Malaysia and India have all proposed social media bans for children as well.

TEXAS ACCUSES NETFLIX OF SPYING ON USERS, INCLUDING CHILDREN

AGENCY
Washington: Netflix has been sued in Texas over claims it collects data belonging to children and adults in the US state without their consent, and uses "addictive" design to keep them hooked. Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton accused the streaming giant of "spying" on citizens saying it "records and monetises billions" of pieces of information about how users behave on the platform, despite suggesting otherwise. "Every interaction on the platform became a data point revealing information about the user," his office said. Netflix has rejected the claims and says it will challenge them in court, according to a statement shared with Reuters. "Respectfully to the great state of Texas and Attorney General Paxton, this lawsuit lacks merit and is based on inaccurate and distorted information," a Netflix spokesperson told the news agency. "Netflix takes our members' privacy seriously and complies with privacy and data protection laws everywhere we operate."

The BBC has approached Netflix for comment. "When you watch Netflix, Netflix watches you," says the complaint filed on Monday by Texas' top prosecutor. According to the filing, the streaming company championed itself as unlike other big tech firms in how it processed data and advertised to users. It quotes the company's former boss Reed Hastings as having said in 2019 and 2020 that it did not and would not collect or monetise user data, such as to sell ads. But the filing says Netflix used a combination of "addictive" design features, like auto-playing content, and extensive "logging" of user activity to keep people on the site. Among billions of technical events it recorded were what users would click and linger on, and for how long, the filing adds. In 2022, it says, the company also began "leveraging the mountains of data it quietly extracted from the children and families it kept fixated on their screen" - sharing this with commercial data brokers to help raise billions of dollars in revenue.

Snack giant switches to black and white packaging as Iran war hits ink supplies

AGENCY
Moscow: Japanese snack giant Calbee says it will temporarily switch to black and white packaging for some of its best-known products as supplies of an ingredient used in ink have been disrupted by the Iran war. The firm says new-style packets for 14 of its products, including crisps and prawn crackers, will start to appear in shops in Japan from 25

May. It marks the latest example of how everyday goods are being impacted after Iran effectively closed the key Strait of Hormuz waterway in retaliation for US and Israeli strikes on the country. In recent weeks, companies around the world have warned that supply disruptions to things like fuel, plastics and helium are pushing up costs for their businesses.

Where problems started with 2026 rules & calendar congestion

AGENCY
Washington: Rule changes have continued to be a big focus in Formula 1, with the previous race in Miami the first since a series of tweaks designed to address concerns about the 2026 engine regulations. Since then, F1 bosses have agreed to further changes to engine design for the 2027 season. With plenty to talk about, BBC F1 correspondent Andrew Benson answers your latest questions. How did the people who run F1 make such a mistake when implementing the new regulations? Having watched F1 for decades, this is the worst regulation change I can remember. - Michael Before answering this question directly, it's important to point out that not everyone views the new rules in such a negative way. There is an acceptance in F1 that qualifying has been significantly negatively affected, in terms of the driving experience of being on the limit. Efforts have already been made to address that up to a point this year, and larger steps are in the making for next year. At the same time, most senior figures in F1 - including some of the drivers - agree that there has been a positive effect on the racing, even if some of the increased number of overtakes that have been seen can be argued to be artificial and down to offsets between states of charge. TV figures over the first three races were up by more than 20% - all three of Australia, China and Japan had significant increases. Miami's are not available yet. Now, as for the genesis of the new regulations, the target when talks started five or so years ago was to attract more manufacturers. At the time, the direction of road-car technology was firmly electric, so it was decided in concert with the manufacturers to increase the amount of electrification. A nominal 50-50 split between internal combustion and electric was agreed. Fully sustainable, carbon-neutral fuels were added for further environmental credibility. The MGU-H, a part of the hybrid system that recovered energy from the turbo, was removed.

'WON'T BE ABLE TO RETURN TO PAKISTAN':

Bangladesh Star's Brutal Taunt At Mohammad Rizwan Caught On Stump Mic

AGENCY
Dhaka: Bangladesh wicket-keeper Litton Das was caught on a stump-mic taking a brutal dig at Pakistan batter Mohammad Rizwan during the first Test match in Mirpur, Dhaka, on Monday. The incident took place during the 38th over of Pakistan's innings when Litton mocked Rizwan by claiming he has a "bad reputation" back home. "They are now trying to save the Test. They have no chance of winning. Rizwan's reputation is really bad back in Pakistan. If he gets out trying to hit a big shot, he won't even be able to set foot back in the country - his reputation is that bad," Litton was heard saying. The fightback was short-lived as Rizwan was dismissed for 15. While Pakistan looked set to salvage a draw, a five-wicket haul from Nahid Rana triggered a dramatic collapse, and Bangladesh clinched the match by 104 runs. He (Mohammad Rizwan) already has a poor reputation in his own country. If he tries to play aggressively and gets out, he may find it difficult to return home. Meanwhile, Pakistan's under-fire Test captain Shan Masood advised against pressing the panic button after the loss to Bangladesh. Masood, who has been Test captain since December 2023 and seen his team suffer 11 defeats in 15 games, said he would not offer excuses but Pakistan were playing Tests after too many long gaps. "Definitely there should be accountability and everyone has to take responsibility and I don't believe in blaming anyone but it is disappointing to lose the Test in this manner as at one stage I felt we were in a position to get a draw," Masood told a media conference in Dhaka. "We played South Africa last year after nearly 12 months after hosting the West Indies at home.

Why Gujarat Titans Are Wearing Lavender Jersey Against Sunrisers Hyderabad

AGENCY
Mumbai: Gujarat Titans are wearing a special lavender-coloured jersey for their match against Sunrisers Hyderabad on Tuesday. The special jersey has been worn to raise awareness about cancer. The initiative was started in 2023. Lavender is the universal symbol representing support against all forms of cancer. Talking about the match, Sunrisers Hyderabad won the toss and elected to field first against Gujarat Titans in a clash of former winners in the Indian Premier League (IPL) 2026 at the Narendra Modi Stadium in Ahmedabad on Tuesday. The clash could prove pivotal in the IPL 2026 playoff race, with both sides firmly in contention for a top-two finish. SRH briefly occupied the top spot before being overtaken by Royal Challengers Bengaluru, but their turnaround this season has been remarkable. After managing just one win in their first four matches, the side led by Pat Cummins has won six of its last seven games to emerge as one of the strongest teams in the competition.

Krunal Pandya's Stunning Revelation On Virat Kohli: "Those Eyes Don't Lie"

AGENCY
Mumbai: Royal Challengers Bengaluru all-rounder Krunal Pandya said that he has learnt a lot by watching Virat Kohli-both as a teammate and as an opponent. Krunal pointed out that the intensity in Kohli's eyes has remained the same over the years and that the star batter's preparation for every tournament is something the all-rounder has gained a lot from. Although Kohli was dismissed for ducks in his last two matches, he has already scored 379 runs this season at a strike rate of 163.36. Krunal, who was the match-winner in the previous game against Mumbai Indians, revealed that Kohli still possesses that same 'hunger to improve.' "I have learned a lot just by watching Virat Kohli, the way he prepares for a tournament and the intensity he brings to every practice session. I have played with him for India when he was captain, and I have also played against him," Krunal said on JioStar's Superstars. "Now, I am lucky to share the same dressing room with him again. What I have realized is that his hunger is still unbelievable. Those eyes don't lie. The same intensity in every net session, the same hunger to improve," he added. Krunal Pandya also credited mentor and batting coach Dinesh Karthik for Royal Challengers Bengaluru's improved batting approach. This followed Krunal's gritty knock against Mumbai Indians.

Mike Vrabel and Dianna Russini's old Family Feud clip sparks another viral NFL moment. A recently resurfaced clip shared on X by the account @CollegeFBPortal showed Dianna Russini and Mike Vrabel appearing remotely on a Barstool Sports version of "Family Feud."

I'm so excited." The exchange immediately caught the attention of NFL fans online, especially because the pair have already been surrounded by public controversy in recent weeks. The resurfaced video comes after reports and photos involving Russini and Vrabel spread widely across social media earlier this year. ## World Heavyweight Champion Roman Reigns vs. Jacob Fatu

AGENCY
Cranberra: At WWE Backlash, World Heavyweight Champion Roman Reigns will battle his dangerous cousin Jacob Fatu. For the first time in more than two years, Reigns claimed a championship when he defeated CM Punk for the World Heavyweight Title in the main event of WrestleMania. The following night, The OTC reemerged on Raw with The Usos to celebrate a new era by expressing an interest in once again doing business with The Usos. As they raised their ones to the sky united, however, Fatu suddenly interrupted and shocked the WWE Universe when he challenged The OTC to a title showdown at Backlash. Fatu doesn't think The OTC has ever done anything for him and his family because Solo Sikoa was the one who brought Fatu to WWE to help destroy Reigns. For this reason, Fatu is determined to take the World Heavyweight Title. Reigns knows he needs to put down this dangerous family threat and make The Samoan Werewolf acknowledge him. Don't miss WWE Backlash, streaming live Saturday, May 9, at 7 ET/4 PT on the ESPN App with an ESPN Unlimited plan in the United States and Netflix internationally. The next chapter in wrestling kicked off with Backlash 2026, with WWE turning the page on its calendar while also dealing with the fallout of WrestleMania 42. Newly crowned World Heavyweight Champion Roman Reigns had his first title defense, and it was a family affair with Jacob Fatu challenging his cousin for the title in a thriller that had a wild ending. Four other matches took place and most of them were great performances. Asuka and Iyo Sky delivered, while Seth Rollins and Bron Breakker stole the show. But the question is, who won, and how will it carry the momentum forward? Reigns learned very early on Fatu isn't easy to take down, absorbing the early hits and knocking the champion down. He would be able to bounce back with some of his own hits, just for Fatu to get right back to unleashing his punishing arsenal. The champion landed his patented Superman punch that has taken out so many stars before, but when he went for the pin, Fatu kicked out before the count could begin and immediately got up, shocking his cousin. A second Superman punch still wasn't enough.
