Strait of Hormuz attack: Iran strikes vessel, UN evacuation mission suspended

Washington (TSIT):

The UN's International Maritime Organization (IMO) has paused "immediate evacuation operations" for more than 11,000 sailors stranded in the Strait of Hormuz after Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) attacked a Singapore-flagged cargo vessel Ever Lovely, in an incident that tests the durability of a newly signed US-Iran agreement aimed at reopening the critical shipping lane and ensuring stabilizing maritime traffic and safety of seafarers in the Gulf. The vessel was reportedly struck by a "one-way attack drone" that maneuvered to the western side of the ship before impact, damaging its bridge on the starboard side, CNN reported. There were "no casualties" and no reported environmental damage, but maritime monitoring agencies confirmed the attack disrupted operations in one of the world's most strategically sensitive waterways. The incident came just hours after Iran warned that vessels would only be granted safe passage if they followed "specific routes sanctioned by Tehran," directly challenging Washington's assertion that the Strait has been reopened under the recent ceasefire framework.

Ram temple donation case: All 8 accused sent to police custody till June 29

AYODHYA (TSIT):

A court has granted police custody of all eight accused arrested in connection with the alleged embezzlement of donations at the Ram temple in Ayodhya till June 29, during which investigators will continue questioning them, an official said on Friday. Prosecution Officer K C Verma told reporters that they have been remanded in police custody till Monday and will be produced before the special court thereafter.

The eight arrested are Avinash Shukla, Anukalp Mishra, Lav Kush Mishra, Manish Kumar Yadav, Karunesh Pandey, Ram Shankar Mishra, Subhash Srivastava and Ramashankar alias Tinnu Yadav.

Verma said investigators have so far recovered Rs 79.85 lakh during the probe. He said appropriate provisions relating to criminal breach of trust by public servants and the Prevention of Corruption Act had been invoked as the accused were allegedly involved in embezzlement.

The prosecution officer said five to six of the arrested persons were bank employees who were deployed for counting cash donations received at the temple and were drawing salaries from the bank. He, however, declined to identify the individual bank employees at this stage of the investigation.

He said Tinnu Yadav was not a bank employee but worked as a driver, while Subhash Srivastava was in charge of the donation counting process. The case relates to the alleged embezzlement of cash and valuables offered by devotees at the Ram temple. An FIR was registered after a preliminary report by a Special Investigation Team (SIT), and the investigation is being carried out by both the SIT and Ayodhya police.

Cockroach Janta Party steps up protest, launches nationwide 'Pradhan Go Back' campaign

New Delhi (TSIT)

Stepping up attack against Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan, the Cockroach Janta Party founder Abhijeet Dipke on Friday announced the launch of a nationwide campaign to demand his resignation and exhorted students, farmers and civil society groups to join him at Jantar Mantar on June 28. Addressing a press conference here, Dipke said activist Sonam Wangchuk would also join the campaign at Jantar Mantar on Sunday and begin an indefinite fast. He, however, did not elaborate on what the campaign would entail.

The Cockroach Janta Party (CJP) founder urged Prime Minister Narendra Modi to ensure that Pradhan resigns, saying that he would be seen as an "incompetent prime minister" if he failed to do so.

The CJP, which started as a digital satirical outfit, has been holding a sit-in at Jantar Mantar since June 20 to demand Pradhan's resignation over alleged irregularities in exams and the NEET paper-leak controversy. "It has been a week, and Dharmendra Pradhan has not taken any responsibility for the paper leaks," Dipke said.

"Sonam Wangchuk will join the protest from Sunday. It is unfortunate that no one is being held accountable for student suicides, and an educator and a scientist like Wangchuk has to go on a hunger strike when 20 students have already died."

"It is not too late. Pradhan should resign because the blood of those students is on his hands. He was calling us terrorists, but he is the real terrorist because he is the reason for the death of these students," Dipke added.

Bengaluru (TSIT):

Expressing happiness over Karnataka achieving the second highest GST growth in the country, Chief Minister D K Shivakumar said he was confident that the state would exceed tax collection targets for the current financial year.

Holding a review meeting of the Commercial Taxes department at Vidhana Soudha, the CM said, "Officials of the Finance department, Finance Adviser L K Atheeq, and Additional Chief Secretary of the Finance department Ritesh Kumar have offered several suggestions to improve the department's performance. The responsibility of implementing them strictly now rests on all of you. I have full faith in the officials. I am also confident that all of you will strive to fulfil my expectations."

"No goods-carrying vehicles should cross a check-post at our state borders without the necessary documents. There must be no scope for tax evasion. There is no room for any kind of compromise or negligence in this,"

"No goods-carrying vehicles should cross a check-post at our state borders without the necessary documents. There must be no scope for tax evasion. There is no room for any kind of compromise or negligence in this,"

and your performance reports must match one another," he said.

"Achieve good coordination with the Commercial Tax departments and enforcement agencies of neighbouring states. Tax evasion must be effectively prevented through information-sharing and joint operations," he noted.

"Today we have information on about 12 lakh taxpayers. You have the capacity to analyse them from a 360-degree perspective using technology and data analytics. If you use this opportunity properly, you are capable not only of achieving the target set for you but of exceeding it," he said.

India's credit card spends surge 6.6 pc in May, 1 million new cards added

New Delhi, June 26 : Credit card spending in India surged to Rs 2,023 billion in the month of May, up 6.6 per cent year-on-year and 2.6 per cent month-on-month, a report said on Friday.

The sequential increase comes after a 10.1 per cent on-month decline in April, indicating that the recovery is not yet strong or structural, the report from Asit C. Mehta Investment Intermediates Limited said.

The industry added 1 million new cards during May, marking the second-highest monthly card issuance in the past 27 months. Total cards in force increased to 120.5 million, while YoY growth accelerated to 8.7 per cent, the highest recorded in the past 15 months.

Transaction volumes stood at 587 million, increasing 5.7 per cent sequentially and 25.8 per cent on an annual basis. The sequential recovery was largely attributable to the sharp decline witnessed in April.

Average spend per card eased 1.8 per cent YoY and increased by 1.7 per cent sequentially. SBI was the clear exception, with per-card spend up 12 per cent YoY, lifted by higher corporate spending.

Average spend per transaction declined on both measures, down 3 per cent MoM and 15 per cent YoY, continuing its downward trajectory due to increase in low value transactions.

The top four banks accounted for only 63.7 per cent of the incremental spending during the month despite holding an industry market share of roughly 76 per cent in spends, the report noted.

Among the top four banks, all broadly matched the industry's sequential growth except HDFC Bank, which grew by 4.2 per cent.

Another report has said that credit sourcing of new loans in Q3 FY26 grew 36 per cent YoY compared to 7 per cent a year earlier, driven by sustained demand from consumers and businesses. The report highlighted strong growth in lending activity, led by accelerated sourcing growth, rising secured lending, and improving asset quality.

6 soldiers martyred during 'Operation Sindoor' to be immortalised at National War Memorial

New Delhi, June 26 : Six bravehearts of the Indian armed forces, who laid down their lives during 'Operation Sindoor' – India's military response to the Pahalgam massacre, against Pakistan in May last year, are set to be immortalised at the National War Memorial.

The names of these martyred soldiers will be inscribed at the National War Memorial in the national Capital. Their names will be engraved on the granite bricks at the memorial.

The identities of the six fallen soldiers who made their supreme sacrifice for the nation have been made public for the first time. They include five soldiers from the Indian Army and one sergeant from the Indian Air Force. Two of the martyrs have also been honoured by the government for their bravery. They are Rifleman Sunil Kumar, who was awarded Vir Chakra posthumously while Sergeant Surendra Kumar was awarded the Vayu Sena Medal posthumously.

The six brave soldiers martyred in 'Operation Sindoor' include Subedar Major Pawan Kumar, Rifleman Sunil Kumar, Lance Naik Dinesh

Kumar, Agniveer Murali Naik, Havildar Sunil Kumar Singh, and Indian Air Force Sergeant Surendra Kumar.

Five of these personnel belonged to the Indian Army, while one belonged to the Indian Air Force.

Their names are being inscribed at the National War Memorial to ensure that their supreme sacrifice remains alive in the nation's memory forever.

Amaravati, June 26 : Eight persons were killed and 15 others injured in three separate road accidents in Andhra Pradesh since Thursday night, police said. End citizenship confusion, amend law, says Shashi Tharoor amid MEA passport statement row Thiruvananthapuram, June 26 : Congress MP Shashi Tharoor on Friday called for a legislative overhaul to end the controversy over the legal status of Indian passports, arguing that both passports and Aadhaar cards should be recognised as conclusive proof of Indian citizenship unless they are cancelled or withdrawn by the state.

Reacting to the Ministry of External Affairs' clarification on Passport Seva Divas that an Indian passport is primarily a travel document and not conclusive proof of citizenship, Tharoor said the government's explanation, though based on the Passports Act, 1967, has created widespread public confusion.

He noted that while Section 20 of the Act permits passports to be issued to non-citizens under exceptional circumstances in the public interest, the distinction was meaningless to the average citizen because passports are issued only after rigorous police verification and extensive scrutiny of documents. "For decades, the passport has been regarded as the gold standard of identity," Tharoor said, questioning how a document issued after such stringent verification could then be declared inadequate as proof of citizenship. "If a passport does not establish domestic citizenship, then what does?" he asked. he Thiruvananthapuram MP also pointed out that the Supreme Court had earlier held that the Aadhaar card serves only as proof of identity and residence, not citizenship. Together, he argued, the two positions leave millions of Indians possessing government-issued identity documents that are still not legally considered conclusive proof of nationality. To resolve what he described as an absurd legal paradox, Tharoor proposed amendments to the legal framework recognising both passports and Aadhaar as valid proof of citizenship.

Acknowledging that Aadhaar is currently issued on the basis of residence rather than nationality, he suggested that the Unique Identification Authority of India (UIDAI) introduce a visually distinct Aadhaar card for non-citizen residents.

Such a system, he argued, would clearly distinguish citizens from non-citizens, simplify domestic verification procedures, reduce bureaucratic disputes during exercises such as electoral roll revisions and provide every Indian with legal certainty over his or her citizenship status.

Indira Shobhan Hits Back at BRS Over Anganwadi Recruitment Allegations

Shobhan said the interviews are conducted by a special committee headed by the District Collector, ensuring fairness and eliminating the possibility of arbitrary evaluation. She added that similar recruitment practices are already in place in several other states. Launching a sharp attack on BRS leaders, particularly former minister Satyavathi Rathod, she alleged that the opposition was deliberately spreading misinformation to stall the Anganwadi recruitment process. She accused the BRS of being unable to accept the growing public support for Women and Child Welfare Minister Seethakka and warned against making what she called false allegations against the minister.

She said Anganwadi workers play a vital role in child care, nutrition, and maternal welfare, making it essential to assess candidates' aptitude and attitude in addition to their academic qualifications.

Claiming that the previous BRS government had delayed recruitments by creating technical hurdles, Indira Shobhan said the Congress government is committed to completing the appointments transparently and providing equal opportunities to all eligible candidates.

Karnataka's Dr Radhika Balakrishnan Becomes First Carnatic Vocalist to Receive Honorary Fellowship from Royal Birmingham Conservatoire, UK

Bringing international recognition to Karnataka's rich classical music heritage, renowned Carnatic vocalist, academic and educator Dr Radhika Balakrishnan has been awarded an Honorary Fellowship by the Royal Birmingham Conservatoire (RBC), one of the United Kingdom's most prestigious performing arts institutions. She is the first Carnatic vocalist to receive an Honorary Fellowship from the Conservatoire. The award was formally presented at a ceremony held at the Royal Birmingham Conservatoire. The honour recognises Dr Balakrishnan's significant contributions to arts, culture and education, as well as her work in introducing the depth and sophistication of Carnatic music to students, artists and audiences in the United Kingdom.

The recognition marks a significant moment for Karnataka's classical arts community. The state has long been one of the principal centres of Carnatic music, with its deep-rooted guru-shishya traditions, influential composers, vibrant performance ecosystem and institutions that have nurtured generations of musicians and teachers.

Dr Balakrishnan's Fellowship further highlights the continuing global relevance of the Carnatic tradition and the role of Karnataka's artists and educators in preserving its foundations while enabling it to engage meaningfully with contemporary musical and academic environments.

Dating back almost a century, the Honorary Fellowship places Dr Balakrishnan among an esteemed cohort of recipients who have demonstrated exceptional excellence and made meaningful contributions to their respective fields. Among previous recipients was the late John Mayer (1930-2004) who served as Composer, Professor of Composition at RBC from 1990 to 2004, and a pioneer of Indo-jazz fusion and received the award in 1999.

Over more than 15 years, Dr Balakrishnan has brought traditional Carnatic music, infused with contemporary influences, to audiences across India, the United Kingdom and internationally. Her work demonstrates how ancient Indian musical systems can enrich modern conservatoire training and prepare students for careers in an increasingly interconnected creative world. As the inaugural ICCR Chair in Indian Studies at Birmingham City University in 2023, and through her continuing contribution to RBC as a visiting artist and professor, she has also positioned Indian classical music within a broader scholarly and diplomatic framework, strengthening institutional ties between UK higher education and India's rich cultural heritage. Dr Balakrishnan learned Carnatic music under the tutelage of celebrated vocalist and educator Vidushi Dr. R.N. Sreelatha of the distinguished Rudrapatnam music tradition.

Speaking on her achievement, Stephen Maddock, Principal of Royal Birmingham Conservatoire said, "It gives me great pleasure to honour Radhika with this award. Her achievements as a distinguished Carnatic vocalist and teacher, combined with her unwavering commitment to supporting our students and bringing Indian music into the core of RBC's work, have been transformative. Radhika embodies the kind of excellence and cultural generosity that we deeply value at the Conservatoire, and we are delighted to recognize her contributions with this prestigious honour."

Adding to this, Professor Shirley Thompson, Vice Principal (Music), Royal Birmingham Conservatoire stated, "Radhika's time with us has been nothing short of remarkable. When she joined us as our first Visiting Chair in Indian Music, I could never have predicted the profound impact she would have on both our students and staff. Her passion for sharing the depth and sophistication of Carnatic music, combined with her pedagogical skill and warmth, exemplifies what it means to bridge musical traditions. We are thrilled that she has continued her involvement with RBC, and this honour is thoroughly deserved."

In her own words Dr Radhika Balakrishnan says that "Receiving the Honorary Fellowship of Royal Birmingham Conservatoire is an honour that extends far beyond me. It represents recognition for the transformative power of Indian classical music in global artistic discourse. For centuries, Carnatic music has embodied a philosophy of learning, growth, and human connection. My work here at RBC has been about demonstrating that these ancient Indian music traditions as living.

Led by ACP Sadanandam, the rally was conducted at Ambedkar Crossroads, where participants pledged to support the government's vision of a drug-free Telangana. Addressing the gathering, the ACP called upon citizens to cooperate with the police in eliminating drug abuse in the Husnabad division. He appealed to young people to stay away from drugs and focus on building a healthy and productive future.

Drug-Free AP is Our Goal: Home Minister Vangalapudi Anitha

In the early 1990s, Mangalagiri was home to nearly 20,000 weavers. Today, only about 6,000 active handloom weavers remain. Rising costs, shrinking margins and competition from machine-made imitations have steadily reduced the community that once made Mangalagiri one of India's most vibrant weaving centres. That is why Vijay Chinthakayala Ayyannapatrudu's choice resonated far beyond symbolism. The gesture reflects the vision of TDP Minister Nara Lokesh who has been unambiguous about his commitment to this community. "Weavers are not workers. They are craftsmen. It is a God-given skill," Nara Lokesh once remarked, announcing a Rs. 250 crore market intervention fund for international branding of Mangalagiri cotton back in 2019. "It will be my responsibility to attend the grievances of each and every weaver," he pledged. When Vijay Chinthakayala Ayyannapatrudu took oath in the Rajya Sabha.

against those involved in drug consumption, possession, trafficking, or sale. She also urged citizens to report drug-related activities by calling the 1972 toll-free helpline or 112, assuring complete confidentiality for informants. The programme concluded with participants taking a pledge to work towards a Drug-Free India, while the Home Minister also visited awareness stalls and participated in the "Say No to Drugs" signature campaign.

target for Andhra Pradesh for the 2026-27 crop season has been fixed at approximately 81 million kilograms, taking into account domestic and international market demand, prevailing market conditions and farmers' interests.

He further announced that a high-level committee comprising all stakeholders would be constituted to strengthen the FCV tobacco marketing system, improve transparency in procurement and introduce necessary reforms in crop regulation, and ensure better returns for farmers.

The Invisible Import In Every Indian Thali

In 2025-26, India spent over US$ 19 billion on edible oil imports to meet 60% of its demand, making it vulnerable to global price shocks and supply disruption while straining the nation's exchequer of its forex reserves for what it could grow at home.

Austerity reached Indian kitchens, when Hon'ble Prime Minister Narendra Modi urged its citizens to reduce edible oil consumption. The per capita consumption of edible oil stood over glaring 17 kg/year in 2024-25 (marketing year). With a large share of this demand unmet domestically, India's dependence on edible oil imports is nothing less than alarming. The domestic production is mainly concentrated in rapeseed, mustard, and soybean, while the consumption is majorly dominated by palm oil, followed by soybean oil. Since, highly water-intensive palm oil production is not feasible in the short-run, soybean, already produced by Indian farmers across the country should be the focus to bridge this demand-supply gap.India remains the fifth largest producer of soybean oil and the largest importer of soybean oil across the globe. The production of soybean has increased from 85.7 Lakh Tonnes (LT) in 2015-16 to 152.7 LT in 2024-25. While this growth is encouraging, it is not enough for the rapidly expanding consumption demand. India currently imports soybean oil more than 2.5 times of its production, as the existing production only meets around 30% of the domestic consumption. In 2025-26, India witnessed a marked surge in soybean oil imports alongside a decline in domestic production. India primarily imports crude soybean oil from Argentina and Brazil and in just 2025-26 itself, imports increased by 8% and 32%, respectively. Additionally, enabled by duty-free access to Nepal under the SAFTA, India's soybean oil imports from Nepal increased by staggering 147% alone in 2025-26. Further, the domestic outlook is concerning, the second advance estimates released by Department of Agriculture & Farmers Welfare (DA&FW) estimated soybean production to have moderated by 16% to 127.2 LT in 2025-26. Profitability is the primary driver of declining soybean production in India. The Government guarantees minimum prices for soybean, and the Cabinet has approved Minimum Support Price (MSP) for soybean for 2026-27 well in advance, in May, with an increase of ₹380 over the previous year and 123% over 2013-14 levels. Thus, pricing per se is not the issue. Rather, the concern lies in the relative uncertainty surrounding the procurement process. The domestic market is frequently flooded with duty-free imports of soybean oil, leading to a decline in market prices below the MSP, thereby preventing farmers from realising an effective price for their produce. Further, the intrinsic characteristic of soybean crop is a cause for concern. Its low productivity due lack of quality seeds remains a persistent challenge. According to ICAR's National Soybean Research Institute, India's average yields is stagnant at around 1,100-1,200 kg per hectare, significantly below the global average of over 2,700 kg per hectare, with considerable regional disparities. Additionally, the crop offers limited resilience, as its photoperiod sensitivity makes it vulnerable to unseasonal weather conditions, which are becoming more frequent due to climate change.

-Dr. Satyawan Saurabh

In India, the monsoon is not just a season, but the fulcrum of the country's economy, agriculture, water resources, and livelihoods. For centuries, the monsoon has been considered life-giving because its rains nourish fields, fill rivers and reservoirs, and provide relief from the scorching heat. However, in recent years, the nature of the monsoon has been rapidly changing. Now, it brings not only relief but also numerous risks. In some places, sudden cloudbursts occur, strong winds and thunderstorms disrupt life, and in others, lightning strikes claim lives. In an era of changing weather and climate change, the risks associated with the monsoon have become more serious and widespread than ever before. This is why weather-related risks have become not only a subject of scientific study but also a matter of social, economic, and humanitarian concern. Currently, it is clearly visible that the traditional nature of weather is changing. While rainfall used to be relatively regular and balanced, now prolonged droughts are followed by sudden bursts of excessive rainfall. Similarly, the incidence of thunderstorms and lightning is also increasing. Meteorologists believe that the Earth's rising temperatures have affected the structure and behavior of the atmosphere. With more energy and moisture available in the atmosphere, weather events are becoming more intense and unpredictable. This is directly impacting human life, agriculture, infrastructure, and natural resources. Lightning is one of the natural phenomena that affects thousands of people every year. In India, the number of deaths due to lightning strikes is higher than that of many other natural disasters. Of particular concern is that most of the victims are from rural areas, where a large number of people work in the open. Farmers, agricultural laborers, livestock herders, and construction workers are more vulnerable to these weather hazards. When clouds suddenly gather and thunderstorms begin, many people do not understand the severity of the danger and remain in open spaces. As a result, many people lose their lives due to lightning strikes. Scientifically, lightning is the result of complex processes occurring in the atmosphere. When the surface becomes extremely hot and the air above it is relatively cold, the warm, moist air begins to rise rapidly. This process is called convection. The rising air cools, condenses, and forms clouds. If the atmosphere is sufficiently humid and energetic, these clouds form large cumulonimbus clouds. Collisions between water droplets, ice particles, and hailstones within these clouds generate electrical charges. When the imbalance of charges becomes too great, lightning strikes, resulting in an electrical discharge between the ground and the clouds. During the monsoon, moist winds from the oceans reach much of the Indian subcontinent. These winds carry large amounts of water vapor, essential for cloud formation and rainfall. But this moisture, when combined with an extremely warm atmosphere, can also create powerful storms. This combination of moisture and temperature increases weather instability. This is why thunderstorms and lightning are more frequent during the monsoon months. Weather experts believe that as global temperatures rise, the atmosphere will hold more moisture, increasing the likelihood of such events. Climate change is the most important aspect of this entire scenario. Industrialization, excessive use of fossil fuels, deforestation, and uncontrolled urbanization have increased the amount of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. As a result, the Earth's average temperature is continuously increasing. This increase in temperature is not limited to increasing heat, but is affecting the entire weather system. A warmer atmosphere holds more moisture, which increases the likelihood of intense rainfall and thunderstorms. This is why today's weather appears more unpredictable and extreme than before. Urbanization is also playing a significant role in increasing weather risks. The abundance of concrete, asphalt, and buildings in large cities creates a heat island effect. This causes temperatures in cities to be higher than surrounding rural areas. Hotter surfaces cause air to rise faster, which can increase the likelihood of local cloud formation and storms. Additionally, inadequate drainage systems in urban areas can lead to waterlogging and flooding during heavy rainfall. India's geographical diversity also influences weather events. In the Himalayan region, mountains cause air to rise rapidly, leading to increased cloud formation. In Northeast India, high humidity and mountainous terrain combine to create conditions for intense rainfall. In Central India and the Gangetic Plain, the combination of heat and humidity gives rise to thunderstorms. In coastal areas, the interaction between sea breezes and land heat influences weather patterns. Thus, each region of India faces different risks due to its geographical and climatic factors. Weather hazards have the greatest impact on vulnerable sections of society. People living in rural areas often lack safe shelter and timely information. Even when warnings are issued for lightning or severe storms, the information doesn't reach the last person. Furthermore, economic limitations also force people to take risks. Farmers and laborers often continue working despite bad weather because their livelihoods depend on it. In such circumstances, natural hazards transform into social and economic risks. Technical solutions alone are not enough to reduce the damage caused by weather-related disasters. Increasing public awareness and weather literacy is also essential. People need to be made aware of the importance of moving away from open spaces when they hear thunder, the dangers of standing under tall trees, and the precautions to take during lightning. Schools, municipal councils, NGOs, and the media all have a crucial role to play in this regard. If society understands weather risks, many lives can be saved. Meteorology has made remarkable progress today. Satellites, Doppler radar, automated weather stations, and advanced computer models are making weather forecasts more accurate. In many cases, the likelihood of thunderstorms and lightning can now be predicted in advance.

Which Document is Ultimately Valid for Proving Citizenship?

Saurabh Varshney

The national debate regarding citizenship in India has intensified once again. After the Ministry of External Affairs clarified that a passport is not, in itself, the final and conclusive proof of citizenship, the opposition has questioned the government; meanwhile, the government maintains that citizenship is determined not by a single document alone, but through a comprehensive examination of the law and available evidence. This dispute is not merely legal; it is also linked to democratic rights and the trust of citizens. The common citizen's primary question is this: if Aadhaar, Voter ID, PAN card, and even the passport are not conclusive proof, then how exactly is Indian citizenship to be established? In a democracy, the greatest strength lies in the trust of the citizens. If citizens remain in a state of uncertainty regarding the proof of their own rights, the situation cannot be considered appropriate for any democratic system. Therefore, the need of the hour is to make the citizenship certification process clear, easily accessible, and free from controversy, ensuring that no Indian has to face uncertainty regarding the question of proving their citizenship. First, it is essential to understand that identity and citizenship are not the same thing. An Aadhaar card serves as proof of identity and residence. A Voter ID is proof of the right to vote. A PAN card establishes identity for income tax purposes. A driving license grants permission to drive a vehicle. A passport is a document for foreign travel and international identification. However, none of these documents, in isolation, is considered the final legal proof of citizenship. How, then, is citizenship determined? In India, citizenship is governed by the Citizenship Act, 1955. According to this law, the primary grounds for acquiring citizenship are: by birth, by descent, by registration, by naturalization, and by the incorporation of territory into India. If a person's citizenship is called into question, the relevant authority conducts a comprehensive assessment of available documents—such as birth records, parental citizenship details, government records, and other legal evidence. No single document is considered conclusive in every situation. In recent years, the birth certificate has emerged as a crucial foundational document, as it provides a record of both the date and place of birth. However, for individuals born decades ago who lack birth certificates, documents such as school certificates, land records, family records, government service records, and other official papers can serve as vital evidence depending on the circumstances. Following a clarification from the Ministry of External Affairs, the opposition raised a question: if a passport is not definitive proof of citizenship, then which document should an ordinary citizen rely upon? Conversely, the ruling dispensation argues that in many countries worldwide, a passport is not the sole legal basis for determining citizenship; in cases of dispute, original citizenship records are the deciding factor. This debate has extended beyond Parliament to political parties and social organizations. The primary reason for this entire controversy is the absence of a single national citizenship certificate in India that is accepted as conclusive in all situations. Consequently, people often mistake documents like Aadhaar, Voter ID, ration cards, and passports for proof of citizenship, even though each serves a distinct legal purpose. In a democracy, the mere existence of a law is insufficient; clear and simple communication regarding it is equally essential. If confusion persists among citizens regarding which documents are valid and which are not, it can lead to unnecessary fear and the spread of rumors. The government should issue clear guidelines on citizenship verification, specifying which documents will be accepted under various circumstances. This would reduce administrative disputes and bolster public confidence. Every citizen should safeguard original government documents related to their birth, education, family, and property. Digitizing these documents and keeping them updated is also crucial, as these records could prove invaluable during any future legal proceedings. Citizenship is not merely a legal status but the foundation of the rights and duties conferred by the Constitution. Therefore, this issue requires clarity and transparency rather than politics. Instead of confusing citizens, the government should develop a simple, unified, and transparent system for citizenship certification. The central government now needs to determine exactly which documents are valid for proving citizenship—documents that citizens can present to establish their status. The only solution to this entire matter is for the central government to first hold a press conference to provide clarity on the issue of citizenship, ensuring there is no confusion in the minds of the people across the country. Arithmetic, Alliances And The Quest For Constitutional Power

The resignation of Union Minister of State for Minority Affairs George Kurien after the end of his Rajya Sabha tenure has revived speculation over a long-awaited reshuffle in Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government. While cabinet changes are routine in any administration, the circumstances surrounding this exercise suggest that political arithmetic rather than administrative performance may dominate the calculations. The BJP enters the second half of Modi's third term facing a different reality from 2014 or 2019. Unlike the years of an outright majority, the party today operates in a coalition environment. Yet it also faces an ambitious legislative agenda involving constitutional amendments and electoral reforms that require numbers far beyond a simple majority. This makes the impending reshuffle – any time before the start of the monsoon session slated for the second half of July – a parliamentary strategy as well as an imperative governance exercise. The forthcoming reshuffle also appears less about individual ministers and more about the BJP's larger political project. Rewarding new allies The NDA today is broader and more dependent on allies than during Modi's first two terms. Regional partners expect adequate representation and influence. Cabinet berths remain the most visible mechanism for maintaining coalition harmony. Managing these allies while accommodating defectors and retaining party veterans creates a complicated equation. Too much emphasis on one category risks upsetting another. One factor likely to influence the cabinet reshuffle is the accommodation of recent entrants and breakaway groups from opposition parties. Indian politics has traditionally rewarded defectors with positions of influence. The BJP itself has done so in states ranging from Maharashtra to Assam and Madhya Pradesh. The emergence of splinter groups from the parties like AAP, Trinamool Congress and Shiv Sena (UBT) has naturally generated expectations of representation. Cabinet berths have often served two purposes- rewarding loyalty and signalling to others that political migration carries incentives. However, there is a delicate balance. Excessive accommodation of newcomers risks alienating long-serving BJP leaders who have spent decades building the party. The experience of Maharashtra after the induction of leaders from rival camps showed that cadres sometimes resent the prominence accorded to recent converts. Thus, any induction of defectors will probably be calibrated rather than overwhelming. The two-thirds majority imperative Perhaps the most important consideration is numbers in Parliament. Constitutional amendments require a special majority. The BJP-led NDA recently improved its position in the Rajya Sabha through strong performances in upper-house elections, bringing the alliance closer to the two-thirds mark. Earlier this year, the government's attempt to push legislation connected with delimitation and accelerated implementation of women's reservation fell short of the required strength in the Lok Sabha. The proposed constitutional amendment failed to secure the necessary 352 votes among members present and voting. Consequently, the accompanying bills had to be withdrawn. This setback underlined an uncomfortable reality - electoral dominance does not automatically translate into constitutional dominance. Hence, expanding support through new allies and defectors assumes importance. Each MP matters when pursuing measures that require extraordinary majorities. The BJP has invested considerable political capital in projecting itself as the champion of women's political representation. The 106th Constitutional Amendment Act was passed in 2023, but its implementation is legally tied to the completion of both a future census and a subsequent delimitation exercise. The government attempted to expedite the process through additional legislation in 2026, but opposition resistance prevented success. For the BJP, delivering women's reservation before the 2029 election would carry immense symbolic and electoral significance.

FIFA World Cup 2026 Knockout Race

The 2026 FIFA World Cup has already delivered everything fans hoped for, with Lionel Messi rolling back the years and scoring a tournament hat-trick to become the competition's all-time leading scorer, Kylian Mbappe firing France into the knockouts, Germany rediscovering their old swagger, and surprise packages announcing themselves on football's biggest stage. With the expanded 48-team format introducing a Round of 32 for the first time, the group stage has produced drama, upsets and historic firsts. As the final round of group matches concludes, 18 teams have already secured their place in the knockout rounds, while several others have seen their World Cup dreams come to an end. Teams That Have Qualified For The Round Of 32 (As Of 26 June) Mexico (Group A) The co-hosts became the first team to book their knockout berth after defeating South Korea 1-0. Mexico began their campaign with a 2-0 victory over South Africa and finished top of Group A. USA (Group D) The Americans followed close behind after a commanding 4-1 win over Paraguay and a 2-0 victory against Australia secured qualification. Germany (Group E) After back-to-back group-stage exits in 2018 and 2022, Germany have announced their return as contenders. A stunning 7-1 demolition of Curacao followed by a 2-1 win over Ivory Coast sealed their passage. Argentina (Group J) The reigning champions have looked every bit the defending title holders. Lionel Messi opened the tournament with his first-ever World Cup hat-trick against Algeria before scoring twice against Austria to become the tournament's all-time leading scorer with 18 goals. Argentina have also secured top spot in Group J. France (Group I) Pre-tournament favourites France eased into the Round of 32 after beating Senegal 3-1 and Iraq 3-0. Kylian Mbappe has already netted four goals in two games. Norway (Group I) Back at the World Cup after a 28-year wait, Norway have made an immediate impact. Comfortable wins over Iraq and Senegal have booked their place in the knockouts. Colombia (Group K) Victories over Uzbekistan and DR Congo ensured Colombia joined the growing list of qualified nations. Switzerland (Group B) The Swiss topped Group B with seven points, confirming qualification after defeating co-host Canada 2-1. Canada (Group B) The hosts recovered from an opening draw by thrashing Qatar 6-0 before doing enough to finish second despite losing to Switzerland. Bosnia and Herzegovina (Group B) A convincing 3-1 victory over Qatar helped Bosnia finish among the tournament's best third-placed teams. Brazil (Group C) Brazil sealed qualification in style as Vinicius Junior scored twice in a 3-0 win over Scotland to finish top of Group C. Morocco (Group C) One of the tournament's most consistent teams so far, Morocco advanced unbeaten with two wins and a draw. South Africa (Group A) One of the stories of the tournament. Bafana Bafana stunned South Korea to become the first South African side to reach the World Cup knockout stages.

WHY HAS TRUMP STAYED AWAY FROM THE WORLD CUP?

United States President Donald Trump was expected by many to regularly feature at the World Cup. But he is yet to attend a single match, despite the United States team winning two of their three group games and qualifying for the knockout stages. So is it a surprise? Why may he have stayed away? And will he appear before the final? BBC Sport takes a closer look. "My fellow Americans, citizens of the world, the United States is honoured to play host to this magnificent celebration. The World Cup has captured the imagination of our country, as has the game itself in the last few years...So I welcome all who have come from all countries and all continents and all who will watch these games in the United States for the next 30 days." Those were the words of President Bill Clinton on 17 June, 1994 at Soldier Field in Chicago when attending the opening match of the first World Cup to be held in the United States. The day is remembered more for Diana Ross' missed 'penalty kick' during the pre-match festivities than Clinton's address, but his presence now seems more notable. Because 32 years on, the country is once again staging the event, and yet, with the halfway point of the tournament passed, the current president has stayed away. Earlier this month, Trump hailed the number of tickets sold by Fifa, labelling it "the most successful World Cup they've ever had", and reinforcing the widely held view that he would be a highly visible and enthusiastic presence. After all, in the build-up, the tournament had seemed very important to him. He even referenced it, external in an address at a rally staged on the eve of his presidential inauguration early last year. And Trump then played a central role at the draw in Washington DC in December, where he was awarded Fifa's inaugural Peace Prize by the governing body's president Gianni Infantino.

Germany Players, Manager Stand On Opposite Sides After Bitter Defeat To Ecuador

After two consecutive exits from the FIFA World Cup, Germany are through to the knockouts in the 2026 edition of the quadrennial event. However, the Germans' road to the next round wasn't the smoothest, despite the fact that they secured the top spot in the group. After a nervy victory over the Ivory Coast, Julian Nagelsmann's side was stunned 1-2 by Ecuador in their final Group E match on Thursday. While the defeat is supposed to work as a wake-up call for the four-time champions, there seems to be a divide in the team as far as the reason behind the loss is concerned. Germany captain Joshua Kimmich and striker Deniz Undav are of the opinion that their team wasn't as hungry for three points against Ecuador as their South American opponents. After Leroy Sané's second-minute strike, Germany failed to live up to expectations and were outrun by Ecuador, who needed a win to stay in the hunt for a spot in the Round of 32. "I had the feeling that they wanted it more than we did," Germany striker Undav told Magenta

TV. "Ecuador were more aggressive, more tenacious. We have to learn from this that we also have to give it our all. They gave 100% in every action; they were involved in every challenge." Kimmich echoed Undav's sentiments as he spoke to the media after the game. "The difference today was that the opponent wanted to win more than us. This is why they won today. It was really deserved," the German captain said. Germany manager Nagelsmann, however, stands on the opposite side of the reasoning given by Kimmich and Undav. He refused to accept that his players didn't give their all on the field, calling the lack of hunger talk 'nonsense'. "No, please stop with this nonsense, honestly," the Germany coach said. "We got off to a great start. Unfortunately, right after scoring, we started committing tactical suicide with our positioning. "Ecuador had everything to play for, and you could tell. They had their foot on the gas. But I also can't say that any of my players didn't give it their all. That's too simplistic."

Captain Shreyas Iyer's Reply On Not Picking Vaibhav Sooryavanshi For 1st India vs Ireland T20I

Vaibhav Sooryavanshi had the world's attention from the time he was picked for India's T20I squad against Ireland for a 2-match series that began on Friday. Sooryavanshi had an extended net session on Thursday, where he was seen talking with Gautam Gambhir and other senior India coaching staff. However, Sooryavanshi has not been named in the playing XI for the 1st T20I against Ireland. Had Sooryavanshi been picked, at 15 years, 91 days, he would have been the youngest debutant in Indian cricket (men's or women's). "Unfortunately no (Sooryavanshi is not playing). He's a gun player but we have some tremendous players who have done well for us so we are backing them. He will get his chance when the time comes," Shreyas Iyer, new India captain, said at the toss. Iyer opted to bowl in the match. Shafali Verma is the youngest (15 years, 239 days) to play for India. In men's cricket, Sachin Tendulkar (16 years, 205 days) holds that record. Sooryavanshi not getting picked has a lot to do with the strong top order that India possess. Abhishek Sharma, Sanju Samson and Ishan Kishan were part of the T20 World Cup, and dropping any one of them to accommodate Vaibhav Sooryavanshi would have been a big decision. India batting coach Sitanshu Kotak on Thursday had said:

"And I am sure that he will get his dues and his opportunities. So I don't think that just to give him an opportunity, we should drop someone who has already been scoring runs. "That also won't be right. I think there is a very thin line between trying to give somebody an opportunity and being unfair to some other player," said Kotak. With so much T20 talent ready for the highest level, Kotak felt even selectors have a very tough job at hand. He is relieved that he is not part of the team selection process. "If you ask me, there is so much talent in India that even the selectors have a headache. Honestly, I don't have such a big headache because I am not the head coach and the captain.

Serena Williams To Face Maya Joint In Wimbledon Return After Four-Year Absence

Serena Williams was on Friday drawn to play Australia's Maya Joint in the Wimbledon first round as the American legend returns to singles action after four years. Williams retired in 2022 but the 23-time Grand Slam singles champion made a sensational comeback by playing in the Queen's Club and Berlin Open doubles earlier in June. The 44-year-old was given a wild card entry in the Wimbledon singles - a tournament she has won seven times. If Williams beats world number 53 Joint, a 20-year-old who has won just one of her past 14 matches, the American could face 29th seed rising star Alexandra Eala of the Philippines in the second round. A victory in the second round would raise the possibility of a potential blockbuster third round tie against reigning champion

Iga Swiatek, who starts her title defence against American Taylor Townsend. Williams, who has been practising at Wimbledon for the past week, last played a singles match nearly four years ago at the US Open in what had appeared to be her farewell to the sport. She said at the time she was "evolving away" from tennis. But just prior to the Wimbledon warm-up event at Queen's this year, Williams announced her stunning return, a move motivated by a desire to play in front of her two young daughters. She has not played at Wimbledon since losing to Harmony Tan in the first round in 2022. Her last Grand Slam match was the US Open third round defeat against Ajla Tomljanovic that seemed to have brought the curtain down on her astonishing career. It remains to be seen if Williams can cope with the physical demands of singles competition after so long away from the sport. She looked solid in her two doubles matches at Queen's and Berlin, winning one in London with Victoria Mboko and losing her opening tie with Karolina Muchova in Germany. But Williams has not won a Grand Slam crown since the 2017 Australian Open, with her last major final appearance ending in defeat at the 2019 US Open.

Who Is Jai Moondra? Rajasthan-Born Pacer Who Dismissed Sanju Samson On Debut For Ireland Against India, Amid Vaibhav Sooryavanshi Hype

The first T20I between India and Ireland in Belfast on Friday was a historic one for Jai Moondra. While the entire world queued up in anticipation of 15-year-old Vaibhav Sooryavanshi's long-awaited senior India debut, which would have made him the youngest debutant in Indian cricket history, another sensational story took place on the other dugout. 29-year-old pace-bowling all-rounder Jai Moondra, who is of Indian origin, made his debut for Ireland and dismissed Sanju Samson on his first ball. Born in Rajasthan, Moondra has taken the unconventional route to international cricket. Moondra was born on January 10, 1997, in the town of Tonk in the Indian state of Rajasthan. It's in Rajasthan where Moondra began his cricketing journey, joining an academy where he developed his fast-bowling skills. However, by the age of 16, he had transformed into a top-order batter and left-arm spinner. Eventually, Moondra rediscovered his love for fast bowling. While academics took over, Moondra did decide to give cricket one final shot in 2019. "After college in 2019, I thought my cricket journey would be over if I got a full-time corporate job. I wanted to give myself a last chance with cricket. So, I quit!" Moondra told Cricket Ireland. In 2021, Moondra moved to Ireland on a student visa to pursue an M Tech degree. During his stay there, he also continued to play cricket, joining the Leinster Cricket Club in Dublin. As a part of the team, he won the Irish Senior Cup in 2023.

Rainbow flags await Egypt and Iran at awkward World Cup Pride Match

Iran's head coach Amir Ghalenoei says he will not address "things that do not exist" as his team prepares to play Egypt in the Pride Match in Seattle. Local organisers have designated the game as a Pride Match because it falls on the Friday before Pride Weekend, which celebrates diversity and the LGBTQ+ community. Drag performances and Pride watch parties are planned across the city while rainbow flags - a symbol of LGBTQ+ pride, diversity, and social inclusion - will fly inside the stadium. Despite complaints from Iran and Egypt, countries where homosexuality is illegal, the event will still take place. Both teams say they are purely focused on football, with both coaches avoiding questions about gay pride at their news conferences before the match, which kicks off at 04:00 BST on Saturday. "We are here to play football, not for other things," Ghalenoei said. "As for things that are forbidden in our religion and do not exist, we do not want to talk about them. We only talk about the match, football and the beauty of the game." Across the street, Seattle host committee officials insisted that the timing of the Pride Match was not designed to provoke. Pride weekend had been planned before the draw paired Egypt and Iran, they told the BBC, adding that the answer to discomfort is curiosity rather than retreat. "We're thrilled," Hedda McLendon, from Seattle's World Cup organising committee, told the BBC after the city's 'Pride Match Day' press briefing. "It might not be how you want to live or how things are in your country but this is something that makes us unique and we want you to experience it and be curious." With a stunning view overlooking Seattle's football stadium, McLendon and other host committee officials repeatedly said it did not matter who was playing - that the match was scheduled before the teams were announced and they would celebrate the beauty of football and gay pride no matter what.

Ferrari's Lewis Hamilton Faces Mercedes In Austria Hoping To Turn F1 Win Into A Title Shot

The Formula 1 title race is turning into the ultimate battle of youth against experience. On one side, Lewis Hamilton, who at 41 just became F1's oldest race winner since 1970. An eighth world title would make him the oldest champion since 1957. On the other, Kimi Antonelli, the 19-year-old Italian who leads the standings, on course to be the youngest-ever to take the title. "I've been here before. I know what I have to do, and there's a long way to go," Hamilton said Thursday ahead of this weekend's Austrian Grand Prix, set to take place as a "heat hazard" race as hot weather bakes Europe. "We have a real battle on our hands, and it's going to take everyone for the rest of the year to even come close to competing with (Mercedes), but I don't think it's impossible." Hamilton's win at Barcelona two weeks ago, his first with Ferrari after a year and a half of frustration, brought together smart strategy, Mercedes' reliability issues and innovation at Ferrari with key car parts that rivals have rushed to copy. Ferrari's bringing an upgraded engine to Austria, too. Antonelli's teammate George Russell said he was surprised how fast Ferrari is developing its car under F1's strict spending rules, but "at the end of the day, we're still the team to beat. So this will be another good weekend to see if Ferrari are still on that good form or if that was a one-off." Hamilton's win just showed that anyone "writing him off" was wrong, said Russell, his teammate at Mercedes in 2024. "For sure, he is a big threat. Ferrari are a huge threat. Kimi is still very much the driver out front and is performing really incredibly and consistently," Russell said. "Ferrari feel like they're coming and Lewis is at forefront of that." What a difference a year makes. Three corners into last year's Austrian Grand Prix, Antonelli smashed into Max Verstappen, ending the race for both. Verstappen accepted Antonelli's apology, saying "every driver has made a mistake like that". though the points he lost that day arguably ended up costing him the title. It was part of a disastrous run of summer results at European tracks for Antonelli, who admitted he felt overwhelmed by frustration. After Mercedes team principal Toto Wolff repeatedly called Antonelli's performance "underwhelming" at his home Italian Grand Prix, it prompted speculation about his future. Then came the turnaround. Antonelli used Wolff's criticism as "fuel to do even better" and he did, scoring more points in the final eight rounds of the season than he had in the previous 16.

Even before completing production, Haiku achieved a significant milestone by securing its post-theatrical digital streaming rights with Netflix. At a time when digital acquisitions have become increasingly selective, the early OTT deal reflects the confidence in the film's storytelling and universal emotional appeal. With principal photography now complete, the makers have shifted their focus to post-production; more updates on the film are expected in the coming months.
