Congress shares historical records to counter BJP's offensive on Vande Mataram

New Delhi (TSIT)

The Congress on Thursday reached into the archives of the freedom movement to counter Prime Minister Narendra Modi and the BJP in the renewed Vande Mataram row. The party has released 12 historical letters, notes and resolutions involving Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Subhas Chandra Bose and Rabindranath Tagore to defend the party's decision to adhere to its 1937 position on the national song. Congress MP Jairam Ramesh released the compilation a day after the Congress Working Committee (CWC) decided that the party would follow the position arrived at by its leadership in 1937 and sing the first two stanzas of Vande Mataram at official party programmes.

"To clear up all the misinformation that the PM and his acolytes have been spreading, this is a compilation of 12 letters and notes penned by the many founding fathers of the Indian Republic, documenting their thoughts on Vande Mataram," Ramesh said. The documents, dating from September 1937 to July 1939, record exchanges involving Gandhi, Nehru, Patel, Rajendra Prasad, Bose, Tagore, C Rajagopalachari, J B Kripalani and Govind Ballabh Pant at a time when the national movement was debating the place and manner in which Vande Mataram should be sung. At the centre of the compilation is the CWC resolution adopted in Kolkata on October 28, 1937, which dealt with the use of the song amid concerns over portions of its original text.

The historical trail begins with Rajendra Prasad's September 28, 1937, letter to Patel and includes Bose's correspondence with Tagore and Nehru in October that year. Tagore's October 19 response to Bose and his October 26 letter to Nehru also form part of the record. The compilation further contains correspondence from January 1939 involving Kripalani, Rajagopalachari, Patel, Govind Ballabh Pant and Nehru, besides a note by Gandhi. It concludes with Gandhi's note published in Harijan on July 1, 1939. The release comes amid a political contest between the Congress and BJP over Vande Mataram, with the Congress accusing the ruling party of distorting decisions taken by leaders of the freedom movement.

The CWC on Wednesday said there was no ambiguity in the party's position and resolved to abide by the decision taken by its leadership in 1937. The Congress maintains that the first two stanzas, centred on praise of the motherland, were accepted after deliberations involving some of the foremost leaders of the national movement. Written by Bankim Chandra Chattopadhyay and later incorporated into 'Anandmath', Vande Mataram became a rallying cry during the freedom struggle. The debate over its use, however, pre-dates Independence, with concerns then raised over the religious imagery contained in the later portions of the original composition. After Independence, Vande Mataram was accorded the status of the national song, while Jana Gana Mana became the national anthem.

Shivakumar seeks freeze on Lok Sabha seats

MAHABALIPURAM: Karnataka Chief Minister D K Shivakumar on Thursday urged the Southern Zonal Council to adopt a resolution seeking to retain the Lok Sabha's existing 543 seats for the next 25 years and use the 1971 Census as the basis for delimitation.

Addressing the 31st meeting of the Southern Zonal Council, Shivakumar said southern states should not be politically disadvantaged for successfully implementing population-control measures. He said the South's economic contribution and achievements in population stabilisation must be matched by adequate political representation. "We welcome the assurance that no southern state will lose seats. But representation is not only about numbers. It is about weight and voice," he said.

Shivakumar called for the 1971 population basis to be honoured during delimitation and urged the Union government to maintain the existing strength of 543 Lok Sabha seats. He also proposed that women's reservation be accommodated within the existing number of seats rather than waiting for a fresh delimitation exercise.

"Women have waited long enough for their rightful representation," he said, stressing that their reservation should not be delayed.

The Chief Minister appealed to other southern Chief Ministers to support the proposal, saying protection of the region's political voice was essential to maintaining fairness in India's federal structure. He also linked political representation with equitable distribution of resources.

New Delhi (TSIT) The Supreme Court has set up a five-member High-Powered Enquiry Committee (HPEC) headed by former top court judge Justice R. Subhash Reddy to look into alleged police excesses against student protesters and violence against police personnel during the CJP protests here last month.

The other members of the panel are former Punjab and Haryana High Court Chief Justice Ravi Shankar Jha, former Delhi High Court Judge Shalinder Kaur, former CBI director Rishi Kumar Shukla and ex-Meghalaya DGP L R Bishnoi.

An order to this effect passed by a Bench of Chief Justice of India Surya Kant, Justice Joyymalya Bagchi and Justice V Mohana passed on August 18 was made public by the top court on Thursday. The committee will examine use of excessive force and violence against protesters by the police, including the deployment of pellet guns, as well as the alleged use of force and violence by protesters against police officials and other security personnel and damage caused to public and private property. The points of reference also included "the desirability of banning the use of metallic kinetic projectiles or pellets fired from pump-action rifles or projectile-action guns, having regard to the grave and, at times, irreversible bodily harm occasioned by their deployment against protesters" and "the necessity of ensuring that police and security personnel wear proper uniforms and visible nameplates at the time of effecting arrests or using force during crowd-control operations, so as to secure accountability and enable the identification of individual officers."

The panel will also examine the allegations pertaining to the monitoring and surveillance of protesters by police personnel, and the extent to which such measures, if undertaken, were consistent with the protesters' constitutional rights to privacy and free assembly as also the provision of medical and other requisite support, including award of compensation, to victims of alleged police abuse, including the manner and adequacy of such support extended thus far. The injuries sustained by the police forces in the course of discharging their duties, as well as the consequent mental and emotional trauma borne by their kith and kin merits due recognition and consideration on a par with the grievances raised by the Petitioners shall also be examined. The order came on petitions seeking an impartial probe into the alleged disproportionate use of police force against protesters at Jantar Mantar and other locations across India.

VIETNAM: 8-year-old Yuti B has brought glory to the whole of India by becoming the runner-up in the World Junior Tourism Ambassador-2026 competition held in Vietnam.

An avid gymnast, dancer and model, Atul Suresh of Atul Academy and Joseph Sonia have been very supportive, says Yuti.B.

Yuti B said that India's tourism should be promoted in the world, foreigners should know our country, history, literature, culture, art and Indian way of life. It is the wish of the student. About 40 talented delegates from 15 countries participated in which I am proud of my country India that I competed from India and became the runner-up winner, she said.

Bhavishya Belaku Charitable Trust Chairman discusses 'Vidyanjali' scheme with MLA Allama Prabhu Patil

Kalaburagi: Girish Nalkudri, Chairman of Bhavishya Belaku Charitable Trust, met Allama Prabhu Patil, MLA of Kalaburagi South constituency, and had a long and meaningful discussion on the 'Vidyanjali' scheme, which is complementary to the development of the education sector.

During this meeting, discussions were held on the effective implementation of the 'Vidyanjali' scheme to strengthen government schools, improve infrastructure, and provide quality education and support to students.

Speaking on the occasion, Trust Chairman Girish Nalkudri said, "The main objective of our trust is to provide appropriate encouragement to the education sector and create a good learning environment for every child in the society."

Struggle against Minister Nagendra will continue; rights of 224 MLAs are being denied: Opposition Leader R. Ashoka

Bengaluru : We will continue the struggle until Minister B. Nagendra, who swallowed the funds of the Valmiki Development Corporation, resigns. For the sake of one minister, the rights of 224 MLAs are being denied, said Opposition Leader R. Ashoka.

Speaking in the House, he said: "We have continued the dharna even on the fourth day. Minister Dr. G. Parameshwara, speaking on this matter in the House, claimed there is no case. But there are 24 charge sheets against him. Parameshwara is giving false information to the House. I have the complete records of the cases against Minister Nagendra, and I will even provide the numbers." The wife of the officer P. Chandrasekharan, who committed suicide, has neither been given a pension nor a job. But Nagendra has been given a ministerial post. If the government has any self-respect, it should declare a drought. There is no need for discussion before that. The government itself has not accepted that there is a drought. The government should say how much money it is giving for drought and how much it has given for drinking water. There is no point in discussing drought without releasing even a single paisa of relief, he said.

Protection in the name of Dalits

Speaking to reporters outside the House, he said: "The Rs.187 crore of the Valmiki Development Corporation belongs to Dalits. Minister Nagendra is trying to seek protection in the name of Dalits. But the corporation's entire funds belong to Dalits. The Congress government has to decide whether it wants crores of Dalits or one Nagendra. Crores of poor Dalits are waiting to build houses and take loans. The minister's resignation must be obtained for the sake of such poor people."

Minister Dr. G. Parameshwara has lied by saying that Minister Nagendra's name is not in the CBI charge sheet. If that is the case, why was the Governor's permission sought for the investigation? We need to discuss issues such as drought, the KPSC scam, and pending pensions. For the sake of one minister, the rights of 224 MLAs are being snatched. Immediately obtain the minister's resignation and give an opportunity to begin the discussion, he demanded.

The BJP did not write the Vande Mataram song. Freedom fighters used to fully sing the Vande Mataram song written by the freedom fighter Bankim Chandra Chatterjee. It was a great inspiration for the youth of that time.

Lifelong learning may cut dementia risk by nearly 40%, study finds

New York, Reading, writing and learning new languages throughout life could reduce the risk of dementia by nearly 40%, according to a new study that suggests millions of people may be able to delay or even prevent the condition through sustained mental activity. Dementia is among the world's fastest-growing health challenges, with the number of people living with the condition projected to triple to more than 150 million globally by 2050. Experts warn that it poses a major and escalating burden on health and social care systems worldwide.

Researchers in the United States found that individuals who consistently engaged in intellectually stimulating activities — such as reading books, writing, visiting libraries or learning a foreign language — were less likely to develop Alzheimer's disease, the most common form of dementia, and experienced slower cognitive decline. The study, led by Andrea Zammit of Rush University Medical Center in Chicago, suggests that cognitive health in later life is "strongly influenced" by lifelong exposure to mentally enriching environments.

"Our findings are encouraging, suggesting that consistently engaging in a variety of mentally stimulating activities throughout life may make a difference in cognition," Zammit said. She added that public investments in early education programmes and access to libraries could play a significant role in reducing dementia incidence. The study tracked 1,939 participants with an average age of 80 who did not have dementia at the outset. They were followed for an average of eight years and completed surveys about cognitive activities during childhood, midlife and later years. Early-life enrichment — before age 18 — included being read to, reading books, access to newspapers and atlases at home and learning a foreign language for more than five years. Midlife enrichment involved income level at age 40, access to resources such as magazines, dictionaries and library cards, and cultural activities like visiting museums. Later-life enrichment, beginning at around age 80, included reading, writing, playing games and financial stability. During the study period, 551 participants developed Alzheimer's disease and 719 developed mild cognitive impairment (MCI), an early stage of memory loss. Among those in the highest 10% for lifetime cognitive enrichment, 21% developed Alzheimer's disease, compared with 34% in the lowest 10%. After adjusting for factors such as age, sex and education, researchers found that higher lifetime enrichment was associated with a 38% lower risk of Alzheimer's disease and a 36% lower risk of MCI. Participants with the highest enrichment levels developed Alzheimer's at an average age of 94, compared with 88 among those with the lowest levels

— a delay of more than five years. Similarly, mild cognitive impairment developed at an average age of 85 in the high-enrichment group, compared with 78 in the low-enrichment group.

India's UPI Miracle Has Created A Difficult, Rs 20,000-Crore Question

Parliament has reopened a question that the country thought was settled: should UPI ever charge? On August 6, the Lok Sabha passed the Taxation and Other Laws (Amendment) Bill, 2026, by a voice vote, and on August 10, the Rajya Sabha, since this is a Money Bill, returned it after discussion, completing the process. It now goes to the President for assent. The change reads small on paper and large in effect. It amends Section 10A of the Payment and Settlement Systems Act, 2007, which until now shielded UPI and RuPay debit from any charge because they were prescribed under the Income-Tax Act. That automatic shield is gone. From here, whether a payment mode stays free depends on what the government chooses to notify. The case for charging begins, reasonably enough, with a bill nobody disputes. Running the world's largest real-time payment network is not free. Every tap that looks instant sets off authorisation, settlement, reconciliation, fraud screening, dispute handling, cloud capacity, and round-the-clock monitoring, and all of it costs money. One estimate puts the yearly cost of running UPI and RuPay debit infrastructure as high as ₹20,000 crore. As volumes keep climbing - July 2026 alone saw 2,366 crore transactions worth ₹29.9 lakh crore - that bill only grows. So the question the new law opens is fair: if security and a coming wave of AI need real investment, must UPI finally charge? Right Problems, Wrong Solutions The costs behind all this are not imaginary. The National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI) chief has said AI will define UPI's next chapter, taking it from about 750 million daily transactions towards a billion, onboarding half a billion more users, and hunting the mule accounts that already run into lakhs of cases a year. Voice onboarding in many languages, models trained on financial data, and real-time fraud engines are not cheap, and all of it needs steady funding. The RBI Governor has put the question plainly: who, in the end, pays for the plumbing? It helps to recall how that plumbing was paid for, because "free" never meant "unfunded". UPI was built and run by NPCI as public infrastructure, not a profit centre, and its scaling and security were financed the way a public good is: from the exchequer. The government reimbursed banks through an incentive scheme, ₹1,389 crore in 2021-22 and a peak of ₹3,631 crore in 2023-24, paying 0.15% on low-value merchant payments. That model carried UPI from a standing start in 2016 to accounting for nearly half of all real-time payments on the planet. The strain is that this public funding has thinned even as the network has swelled. The Standing Committee on Finance found that incentive payouts of ₹8,730 crore over four years to 2024-25 covered barely 11% of the industry's cost. The 2026-27 budget set aside ₹2,000 crore, less than before, even as daily volumes touch record highs. So banks and processors now carry a rising share of a growing bill, and want durable revenue, not a subsidy that shrinks each year. Where It Hurts The Most And yet, the leap from "the costs are real" to "therefore charge each transaction" skips the harder question of design. Most of what UPI spends on is fixed, infrastructural cost, not something that rises neatly with each ₹40 payment to a vegetable seller. A per-transaction fee is a blunt tool for a largely fixed bill. Worse, it lands where it does the most damage: at the point of acceptance, on the smallest sellers, whose whole reason to accept digital money was that it cost nothing.

Manmohan Singh, Bachchans, And Other Secrets Of 10 Janpath: The Sonia Gandhi Story

Political memoirs are often written twice: first by memory, then by self-preservation. The best ones resist the temptation of the second. In this context, Sonia Gandhi's forthcoming memoir, titled Belonging: A Journey of Love and to be published by Alfred A. Knopf on November 10, comes with an unusual burden of expectation. At 544 pages, the memoir promises to travel from her childhood in post-war Italy and her meeting with Rajiv Gandhi in Cambridge to life inside India's first political family, the assassinations of Indira and Rajiv Gandhi, her reluctant entry into politics, and her years at the helm of the Congress. Sonia herself says she wants to reach the motivations, actions, and "very human failings" of a family about which much has been written. Few Indian politicians have wielded so much influence while revealing so little of themselves. Sonia has been the Congress president, Leader of the Opposition, UPA chairperson, National Advisory Council chairperson, and, for ten years, the political pole around which a coalition government revolved. Yet, we know surprisingly little about how she understood her own power. In the mouths and pens of others, Sonia Gandhi's story is usually compressed into one convenient word: dynasty. But dynasty alone does not explain it. She did not grow up inside the Congress, inherit its political vocabulary, or possess unquestioned legitimacy within it. She entered that world through Rajiv Gandhi and, after losing him, had to negotiate it herself. Over the years, she had to fight, win, cajole, reconcile, absorb rebellion, and repeatedly act as matriarch to a party whose veterans were often older, more experienced, and more rooted in politics than she was. Belonging has an opportunity to tell us how she did it. Before Politics Came Family The early chapters may prove among the most revealing precisely because Sonia Gandhi was not born into politics. Politics came looking for her. The geographical arc itself is remarkable: from Orbassano, the comune near Turin where she grew up, to Cambridge; from marriage into the Nehru-Gandhi household to 1 Safdarjung Road, 10 Janpath, and eventually the very centre of Indian power. But the more interesting journey is psychological. At what point did a woman who fiercely guarded her private life begin to regard stewardship of the Congress almost as a familial obligation? She arrived in India as Sonia Maino, married Rajiv in 1968, and entered a household where the private and the political were almost impossible to separate. The publisher's account makes clear that Sanjay Gandhi's death in the 1980 plane crash - and Rajiv's subsequent movement towards politics - will be central to the story. Sonia had herself written of resisting Rajiv's entry with extraordinary intensity, saying she had "fought like a tigress" for their family and their freedom. But Belonging can take us further. What exactly were Sonia's relations with Sanjay? How did she view his enormous influence over Indira Gandhi? Did she merely fear politics for Rajiv, or did she have reservations about the political culture he was inheriting? The Bachchan Saga And then there are the Bachchans. Amitabh Bachchan was not simply another celebrity friend of Rajiv Gandhi. The two families were once extremely close, and Amitabh entered electoral politics in 1984 as Rajiv's friend, winning Allahabad spectacularly. Yet, over time, the friendship disintegrated. What happened? Was the rupture political, financial, personal - or an accumulation of all three? A memoir called Belonging cannot entirely avoid the story of people who once belonged almost to the family and then abruptly did not. Nor can an account of Sonia's political evolution easily bypass 1998-99. Her arrival at the top of the Congress was hardly a coronation without resistance. What did she really make of Sitaram Kesri and the circumstances in which she replaced him? Then came a much more personal challenge. In 1999, Sharad Pawar, PA Sangma, and Tariq Anwar questioned her suitability for the highest office on grounds of her foreign origin - from within the Congress itself. Sonia resigned as party president; the organisation rallied behind her; the rebels were expelled and went on to establish the NCP. It was a defining test of authority. How did she experience it: as humiliation, betrayal, political challenge, or proof that she had finally acquired a constituency of her own? Political memoirs by powerful women - from Golda Meir and Margaret Thatcher to Benazir Bhutto and, more recently, Jacinda Ardern - become historically valuable when they reveal the human calculations beneath public decisions. Sonia's life contains more than enough for a compelling personal narrative. The question is whether she will stop at that fascinating human story - or open the political files as well. Rao, Natwar, And Trust The most intriguing political relationship to revisit may well be Sonia Gandhi's with PV Narasimha Rao. Rao was no outsider to the Gandhi establishment. He had served Indira and Rajiv, and, after Rajiv's assassination, emerged as Congress President and Prime Minister. Yet Sonia and Rao went from a relationship of trust to an estrangement that became one of the defining internal conflicts of the Congress in the 1990s. Why? One answer has long centred on Sonia's dissatisfaction with the investigation into Rajiv Gandhi's assassination. Accounts from Congress figures say she felt the probe was moving too slowly and suspected that the full conspiracy had not been uncovered; she publicly expressed unhappiness in 1995. Her memoir should tell us what she actually believed. The Rajiv assassination itself deserves a fuller reckoning. The LTTE's responsibility for the killing was established through investigation and trial, but Sonia's reported dissatisfaction went beyond the immediate perpetrators. What did she believe remained unresolved? Then comes Natwar Singh, another relationship where affection hardened into hostility. Natwar was more than a foreign-policy adviser. A diplomat, writer, Nehru-Gandhi loyalist, and bibliophile, he belonged to Sonia's intellectual and political circle and often functioned as an informal literary counsellor as well. The rupture followed his exit from government amid the UN Oil-for-Food controversy, after which his memoir One Life Is Not Enough offered an unflattering account of Sonia and disputed her version of why she declined the Prime Ministership in 2004. = What turned intimacy into permanent estrangement? Sonia has so far largely allowed Natwar's version to stand unanswered. Now she has her turn. The Mannohan Mystery When it comes to Sonia's powerplays, nothing will be scrutinised more closely than 2004, and why she chose Manmohan Singh. Once Sonia decided not to become Prime Minister, the choice of the leader was hers. Pranab Mukherjee was senior, vastly more experienced politically and, by Manmohan's own admission, had reason to feel aggrieved. Arjun Singh, too, represented an older Congress order with considerable organisational weight. Was Manmohan chosen because Sonia trusted him? Because he had no faction? Because his integrity and economic credentials reassured India and the world? Or because he was the rare leader who could exercise governmental authority without creating an alternative political centre inside the Congress? There is an intriguing counterfactual. Madhavrao Scindia, who died in a plane crash in 2001 at only 56, had been widely regarded as prime-ministerial material and was effectively Sonia's deputy in the Parliamentary party. Had Madhavrao lived, would Manmohan Singh still have been Sonia's choice in 2004? Her answer would tell us much about how she understood leadership. So would also her account of the UPA arrangement. Critics described her as a "super PM"; admirers argued that the division was perfectly legitimate - Manmohan ran the government while Sonia managed the coalition, party, and political mandate.

HARASSMENT OF GIRL STUDENTS IN SCHOOLS

-Dr. Priyanka Saurabh

(Crisis of trust in the temple of education)

Schools are not just places for learning. They lay the foundation for children's personality development, values, discipline, and a secure future. When parents send their children to school, they trust that teachers will not only impart knowledge but also ensure their child's safety and dignity. But when, under the guise of this trust, a teacher molests, behaves inappropriately, or sexually harasses a student, it's not just the child who suffers the consequences; the entire educational system is put on trial. Reports of inappropriate behavior by teachers toward female students in schools have surfaced from time to time. The nature and facts of each incident may be different, so it's unfair to blame someone based solely on an allegation. However, suppressing a complaint once it's made, attempting to silence the girl, or delaying the matter to protect the institution's reputation is an even more serious problem. The reputation of any school cannot be more important than the safety of its children. The relationship between a teacher and a student is fundamentally based on trust. A teacher possesses both knowledge and authority. Students naturally value their teacher's words and often consider them the most trustworthy adult after their parents. This is why, if a teacher abuses this trust and authority, it is difficult for a child to protest. During adolescence, children often cannot discern whether an adult's behavior is normal or inappropriate. Fear, shame, social pressure, worries about exams and the future, and the fear of whether their voice will be believed can prevent them from complaining. Therefore, simply asking, "Why didn't the child complain earlier?" is not enough. The real question should be: Has the school created a safe environment where the child can speak out without fear? The most dangerous element in such cases is often silence. Many families, fearing social stigma, are reluctant to complain. Some suppress the matter, fearing that the child's education will be affected. School administrations, too, may sometimes try to resolve the complaint internally, fearing a tarnished image of the institution. However, such silence can encourage abuse. If a child's complaint is not taken seriously, it can send the message that the institution's reputation is more important than her safety. This message is deeply concerning for any civilized society. Therefore, parents, teachers, and school management must understand that filing a complaint is not a disgrace, but a step toward safety. Allegations should be investigated impartially, and if proven guilty, action should be taken in accordance with the law and institutional rules. The role of school administration should not be limited to taking action after an incident occurs. Security arrangements should be robust in advance. Proper verification of teachers and staff, a clear code of conduct, rules for dealing with students, and a secure complaint system are essential. Schools should educate children about appropriate and inappropriate touch, how to recognize uncomfortable behavior, and how to report it to a trusted adult. This education should be provided not only to female students, but to all children. They should also be made aware that they are not responsible for any inappropriate behavior. Schools should have a complaint system where children can express their concerns without fear. The availability of female teachers, trained counselors, or other trusted adults can be crucial in this regard. The POCSO Act, 2012, exists in India to protect children from sexual offenses. This law provides important protections in cases of sexual offenses against children under the age of 18. Schools and their staff must have a basic understanding of this law. It is not appropriate to suppress a serious complaint simply by considering it an "internal school matter." Depending on the nature of the case, it may be necessary to inform and cooperate with the appropriate authorities. The purpose of the legal process is not only to punish the accused, but also to protect the safety, dignity, and rights of the victimized child. Even today, after such incidents, questions are often raised in society about a girl's behavior, clothing, time, friendships, or social media activities. This thinking is wrong and harmful. A girl's clothing, her conversation, or her trust in a teacher does not give an adult the right to behave inappropriately. The responsibility lies with the person who abuses their position, age, and authority. Instead of scaring girls in the name of safety, they must be given confidence. They must be assured that if someone makes them uncomfortable, they can speak up without shame or fear. Most teachers shape children's futures with complete honesty and dedication. Therefore, it is unfair to tarnish the entire teaching community with the alleged or proven misconduct of a few individuals. However, this very reason increases teachers' professional conduct responsibilities even more. Teachers have constant contact with children, so they must be especially mindful of boundaries and professional decorum. Schools should have clear rules regarding situations such as personal messages, inappropriate comments, unnecessary physical contact, or private conversations. Teachers' behavior should reflect respect, equality, and security. School administrations should send a clear message that any form of sexual or inappropriate behavior toward children is unacceptable. However, "zero tolerance" should not mean taking action against anyone without investigation. It truly means taking every complaint seriously, following a fair process, ensuring the safety of the child, and taking appropriate action based on the investigation's findings.

An India-Pakistan War Test: How Far Would Saudi Arabia And Turkey Go?

The trilateral Mecca security pact between Saudi Arabia (KSA), Turkey, and Pakistan wasn't really a bolt from the blue. For months, there had been confluences between these three countries and Egypt, and the air was abuzz with a new regional security arrangement that was being worked out. This new arrangement is in addition to the bilateral Strategic Mutual Defence Agreement (SMDA) between the Saudis and Pakistan. The reaction in India to this new strategic realignment in West Asia has swung between two extremes. While some analysts see it as a very negative development with serious strategic implications for India's security, others have expressed deep scepticism about this arrangement working effectively, if at all. Both sides of the argument have made valid observations in support of their assessment of the Mecca Pact. But regardless of which assessment proves accurate, India cannot afford to ignore, much less dismiss, this realignment of two enemy countries (Pakistan and Turkey) with a third friendly country (Saudi Arabia); But nor does India need to get flustered over it. What India needs is a strategy that will not only counter the negative aspects of the Mecca alliance if it works on the ground but also improve its strategic space if the sceptics of the Mecca Pact prove correct. Unsteady Ground While the pact is an outcome of a breakdown of the security architecture that has prevailed in the region over the last 100 years, it is rather premature to imagine whether this alliance is laying the foundation on which a new regional security framework will be built. To call the Mecca Pact an "Islamic NATO" or equate it with the Baghdad Pact (CENTO) is quite a stretch. Both those alliances were led by a dominant power, the US. There is no such power that provides the necessary ballast to the Mecca Pact. If anything, traditional rivalries between Turkey and Saudi Arabia haven't entirely been resolved. Just a few years ago, Erdogan was viciously twisting the knife into the Saudi Crown Prince Mohammad bin Salman (MBS) over the Khashoggi killing. That they subsequently papered over their differences means very little, because in this region, all alliances are temporary and can change virtually overnight. The third leg of the stool, Pakistan, is in it for the money, naturally. Hardly a new NATO - which, by the way, is in total disarray itself. A lot is being made about "collective deterrence against any act of aggression, and...any armed attack against any one of the three States shall be regarded as an attack against them all". But there is no clarity about what this really means. While Article 5 of the NATO agreement defines how the collective defense will kick in, the Mecca Pact has kept the agreement secret. Is this to keep some wiggle room for the signatory countries to opt out of this collective defense clause? Or is the secrecy being kept because the obligations enjoined on each country in the event collective defense is invoked are different and could thus evoke sharp opposition and criticism? In other words, the Saudis, who were unable to defend themselves against Iranian or Houthi attacks, cannot realistically be expected to send in their forces for the defence of Pakistan. Speaking of Houthis, within a few hours of the Mecca Pact, the Houthis fired missiles on Saudi Arabia, and there wasn't even a squeak from the new and much-vaunted security partners of the Saudis. Perhaps Saudi obligation under the pact will be limited to giving money, diplomatic and political support to Pakistan to fight its own war. But what is expected of the Pakistanis? So far, at least, they haven't really delivered on their commitments to Saudi Arabia. Also, why would Turkey, which is a member of NATO, need Pakistan and the Saudis to come to its aid in the event of an attack? A Reality Check While it can be argued that these three countries have militaries with different offensive and defensive capabilities, none of them has the capacity and capability required for out-of-area operations of the kind that the US possesses. Even a significant power like China would be hamstrung in conducting and sustaining operations outside its immediate neighbourhood. Given their current capabilities, for any of these countries to marshal troops to go to another country's aid and fight its wars is a bit far-fetched. It is also not clear if the Mecca Pact is a return to the kind of alliances that existed in the 19th and early 20th centuries, when a bunch of countries, mostly in Europe, would enter into wars on behalf of their alliance partners.

EX-ZAMBIAN MINISTER KILLED IN SECURITY RAID ON OPPOSITION

A former Zambian minister was killed in last week's raid by security forces on a house linked to opposition leader Brian Mundubile a day after the presidential election, the authorities have said. A police spokesman said Mutotwe Kafwaya was fatally wounded by law enforcement officers during what officials have described as an exchange of fire in a security operation in the capital, Lusaka, on Friday. Eleven people were arrested in the raid, with the authorities accusing Mundubile's party, the NRPU, of being "involved in insurgency" and "militia activity" and storing "high-grade" weapons. Mundubile, who has since gone into hiding, rejected the allegations as "total fabrications". According to official results, incumbent President Hakainde Hichilema won a second five-year term with a 60% share of the vote. Mundubile, who trailed behind with 38%, plans to challenge the outcome in court after alleging the tallying process had been tampered with. Speaking about Kafwaya on Tuesday, the opposition leader said he had had no information of his whereabouts after he had been shot during the raid, which he said took place at his house. The police confirmed Kafwaya's death late on Wednesday amid growing demands for information about him. They said the 49-year-old was killed in a shootout during the raid by a joint security task force, adding that they encountered "gunfire and resistance from unknown individuals, resulting in [them] returning fire". "In the process one unidentified male person was fatally wounded, and the firearm was recovered," the police said, adding that family members had subsequently identified him. Kafwaya first became a lawmaker in 2016 and was appointed by then-President Edgar Lungu as the for minister for works in 2018 and moved to the transport ministry the following year. He served there until 2021, when Lungu lost to Hichilema in the presidential election of that year. He continued serving as an opposition member of parliament.

Donald Trump vows tougher economic measures on Iran and supporting countries

Donald Trump has said he will launch tougher economic measures against Iran, as well as any country that helps or does business with it. The US president wrote in all capital letters on Truth Social that he was launching "the most crushing economic operation ever taken against any country", without providing further details or the names of any nation other than Iran. It comes after a 60-day ceasefire formally expired on Monday without any sign of a diplomatic settlement to the war the US and Israel began at the end of February. Tehran said Trump's threat would only bring further animosity. If realised, it would extend a campaign of economic pressure on Iran aimed at forcing it into submission. The US launched a wave of sanctions on foreign banks and firms that do business with Iran in April when it became apparent that military action had not led to the overthrow of the regime in Tehran nor its surrender, as Trump had initially hoped. Conversely, since the start of the war, Iran has been able to stem the flow of marine traffic through the Strait of Hormuz, raising energy prices globally. Ahead of the US midterm elections in November, Trump is facing pressure over how much the war is costing American consumers. The US president wrote on Wednesday evening that he was launching "economic D-Day" on Iran because it had failed to make a deal with the US. "ANY country that allows its financial institutions, businesses, airports, or government entities to provide any type of lifeline to Iran will itself face TREMENDOUS Economic Consequences," Trump said. He did not specify what punishment countries might face. Trump continued: "Oil smuggling, swap lines, cash transfers, exchange houses, ship registries, front companies - it all needs to stop NOW. You know who you are." It comes a day after the United Arab Emirates (UAE), a US ally, announced it would be severing all financial and economic ties with Iran, following a new missile threat from the country. The UAE's defence ministry said it had detected two ballistic missiles launched from Iran targeting maritime traffic, both of which landed in the sea. Iranian entities have long used Dubai's financial system to transfer money through exchange houses and shell companies.

Australia 'outraged' after Israel decides not to open criminal investigation into killing of aid worker in Gaza

Australia's foreign minister has said she is "outraged" over an Israeli military decision not to launch a criminal investigation into the death of aid worker Zomi Frankcom, who was killed in an air strike in Gaza. Frankcom was an Australian aid worker with World Central Kitchen (WCK) who was killed with six other colleagues in an Israeli attack in April 2024. Foreign Minister Penny Wong said in a statement the decision "falls far short of the accountability we expect" and summoned the Israeli ambassador. After meeting Wong, Ambassador Hillel Newman defended the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) and its investigation, saying "there was no criminal intention" and therefore "no criminal responsibility". Frankcom's family said in a statement on Thursday that they were "deeply disappointed" by the IDF's decision. "As a family, we do not believe this to be accurate, and we continue to call for an independent investigation," the statement said. Three British nationals, a Palestinian, a Polish national and a dual US-Canadian citizen were also killed in the attack. The UK has yet to comment on the Israeli decision. Speaking to reporters after meeting Newman, Wong said there were still many "unanswered questions", including why if the first strike on the convoy was "a catastrophic error", two further strikes followed, just minutes apart. She also said the removal of two officers from their positions and the reprimanding of three after an initial probe was "insufficient accountability" for the death of seven people. Drone audio from the attack had still not been handed over despite requests from the Australian government, she said. In its statement on Wednesday, the IDF said the presence of an armed guard with the convoy had not been flagged with it before the convoy set off, and that he was falsely identified as a Hamas fighter. It also claimed the convoy had deviated from the route that had been coordinated with the military. Notwithstanding "serious failures" in the process that led to the killings, "the decisions of the commanders did not raise reasonable suspicion of criminal misconduct," the IDF said. In the same statement, the IDF also said it had also failed to find grounds for criminal investigation into the killing of four employees of Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF), who were killed in two separate attacks in November 2023 and February 2024. In her earlier statement, Wong said the Australian government had learned of Israel's decision late on Wednesday night, adding that the outcome was "especially insulting" as it occurred on World Humanitarian Day.

Founder of collapsed Chinese property giant Evergrande sentenced to life in prison

The founder of Evergrande, the property giant at the centre of China's housing market slump, has been sentenced to life in prison and had all of his personal property confiscated. Hui Ka Yan pleaded guilty in April to several charges, including embezzlement of assets and corporate bribery. Shenzhen Intermediate People's Court also fined his former companies a total of 15.82bn yuan (£1.73bn; $2.35bn) over multiple crimes, including falsifying records and concealing debt. Hui's sentencing marks a key moment in the fallout from Evergrande's collapse, which shook China's property sector and hit investors and domestic banks hard. Hui and his businesses "seriously disrupted" the Chinese property market, resulting in significant economic losses, the court said. Other Evergrande executives, including Hui's two sons Xu Zhijian and Xu Tenghe, were also sentenced to jail terms ranging from 22 months to 18 years, according to state media. Once ranked Asia's richest man, Hui has seen his wealth and influence dwindle as his company unravelled. Hui, also known as Xu Jiayin, rose from humble beginnings in rural China, where he was raised by his grandmother before venturing into property development and setting up Evergrande in 1996. He oversaw the company's rapid rise through an aggressive expansion programme funded with large amounts of borrowed money. Evergrande became China's biggest real estate developer, with a stock market valuation of more than $50bn (£36.7bn). Hui was once estimated to be Asia's richest person. The firm was dealt a huge blow when Beijing introduced measures in 2020 to control debt in the country's property sector. As the company struggled to meet interest payments on its debts it sold properties at huge discounts to stay afloat before collapsing in 2021. In April, the court heard that the company had taken millions of dollars in pre-sale funding from potential house buyers that were not used for construction. The money had instead been channelled to new property developments, resulting in hundreds of unfinished projects. In March 2024, Hui was fined $6.5m and banned from China's capital market for life for his company overstating its revenue by $78bn. Evergrande's stock market valuation shrank by 99% before its shares were removed from the Hong Kong exchange in August 2025 after more than a decade and a half of trading. Evergrande's implosion has often been blamed for triggering a broader slump in China's property market that continues to weigh heavily on the economy. At its height, Evergrande was the biggest firm in the country's real estate industry, which made up about a third of China's gross domestic product at the time. The property market was a significant driver of growth and an important revenue source for local governments. The industry's ongoing problems have weighed heavily on the world's second largest economy as several other major developers faced financial woes.

Missing teen hiker found dead in Australian bush after eight-day search

The body of a woman has been found in Australian bushland, following an eight-day search for a Sydney teenager reported missing last Wednesday. Police said that while the body was yet to be formally identified, it was believed to be that of 18-year-old Lily Hooper. The confirmation came after the state premier told the New South Wales parliament that she had been found alive before later retracting the statement. The teenager left her home in Sydney to go walking in a nearby national park on 12 August. Her family reported her missing later that night, after she failed to return home by 22:00. Her car was found in a car park at the bottom of a challenging trail in the Nattai National Park. Police said that the body was found in the Southern Highlands at approximately 11:30 local time on Thursday. Hooper's body had been found in dense vegetation and would likely have to be carried out on foot. There was initial confusion as to Hooper's condition, after New South Wales Premier Chris Minns told a parliamentary hearing that she had been found alive. Local media suggested that her family had also been informed that she was alive.

Belgian car salesman becomes prince after royal parentage confirmed

Belgium's Prince Laurent has legally recognised 26-year-old former car salesman Clément Vandenkerckhove as his son and heir. Vandenkerckhove, the result of a relationship between the royal and Belgian singer Wendy Van Wanten, was quietly brought into Prince Laurent's family at a town hall ceremony six months ago, although details have only just emerged. While he formally becomes a prince, he will not receive a royal allowance. The new prince has had several years to get used to the idea of having a royal father, and he said recently he was not yet sure he would begin using his father's name Saxe-Coburg. "I might want to do that, but I am proud of the name Vandenkerckhove," he told Het Nieuwsblad. "If I were to sacrifice that family name, it would be a betrayal of everything my mother has done for me." He will not be part of Belgium's royal line of succession, unlike his half-sister Princess Louise and half-brothers Prince Aymeric and Prince Nicolas. Nor will he take part in public royal activities. Vandenkerckhove is already well known to Belgians, having been the focus of a Flemish TV documentary last September, in which he described how he got to know his father. His father had been in a relationship with Wendy Van Wanten, whose real name is Iris Vandenkerckhove, before he went on to marry Princess Claire in 2003. During the VTM documentary, Clément described meeting the prince unexpectedly in a shopping centre in 2013, without realising who he was. It was only when he was 16 that his mother revealed his father's identity. Four years later he plucked up the courage to ring him up, and after several more calls they met in person and eventually Prince Laurent suggested they take a DNA test. "We went to the hospital together and I remember him saying 'I'll go first so you're feeling at ease'," he told VTM. Then he received an email from the laboratory which told him of a 99.5% DNA match. Prince Laurent's DNA test is reminiscent of his father, former King Albert II, who had a test after a lengthy paternity battle. Albert admitted in 2020 that he had fathered a daughter during an affair and eventually recognised her as his own.

"TEST OF MIND, NOT CHESS":

Vidit Gujrathi On D Gukesh's World Championship Battle

Grandmaster Vidit Gujrathi believes reigning world champion D Gukesh's title defence against Uzbek challenger Javokhir Sindarov will be a test of mental strength more than chess ability, with the Indian needing to put behind him a difficult run and rediscover the form that made 2024 an exceptional year. Gukesh has endured an inconsistent phase since his World Championship triumph, while Sindarov heads into the marquee clash in excellent form. Vidit, however, said a dip in results does not necessarily indicate a decline in a player's ability. "In chess, performances, if you are not Magnus Carlsen, come in stages. For example, 2024 was an exceptional year for Gukesh. Every tournament, he had the Midas touch. Whatever he played, he was winning," Vidit told PTI. He said form among elite players is influenced by several factors beyond their chess strength. "Their strength is very high. A lot of things affect form - mindset, physical condition and pressure. Sport is about whether you can bring your best on that day." According to Vidit, Gukesh continues to work hard and has brought fresh ideas to his games but has struggled to produce the efficiency that characterised his rise to the world title. "Usually he would convert very well, but now he is missing those wins. He is coming under time pressure a lot. He is working very hard. That's very clear from the games. But something is missing." Vidit, however, felt Gukesh could still return to his best, provided he can overcome the mental baggage of his recent results. "That doesn't mean that in the World Championship, he cannot go back to his 2024 version. It will require a lot of inner strength because when you don't do well, you struggle mentally."

INDIA-PAKISTAN PLAYERS SKIP HANDSHAKES BEFORE MATCH

The Indian men's hockey team swept past their arch-rivals Pakistan in emphatic fashion, beating them 5-3 in their final Pool D match of the FIH Hockey World Cup in Amstelveen, Netherlands, on Wednesday. However, the intense battle on the field did not stop the teams from exchanging pleasantries, as the players shared high-fives before the start of the match. While politics often threatens to overshadow India-Pakistan encounters, the clash in Amstelveen showcased a modern display of sportsmanship. After their respective national anthems were played, the two sets of players lined up and exchanged quick high-fives to show mutual respect, skipping the traditional pre-match handshakes. In the aftermath of Operation Sindoor, the India and Pakistan cricket teams have refrained from shaking hands with each other. However, hockey does not appear to be following cricket's path, at least for now. Even during the Sultan of Johor Cup last year, the two teams shook hands after their match. After full-time in Amstelveen, the India and Pakistan players did shake hands, having skipped the customary gesture before the start of the match. As far as the action on the field is concerned, skipper Harmanpreet Singh and striker Abhishek scored a brace each as India extended their decade-long unbeaten run over arch-rivals Pakistan with a 5-3 win. The defeat ended Pakistan's campaign in the tournament. Playing their first World Cup in eight years, Pakistan fought back after conceding three goals but India held their nerve to seal a memorable win in front of a packed 10,000-capacity Wagener Stadium. Captain Harmanpreet (5th, 21st) scored twice from penalty corners, while Abhishek (11th, 24th) struck two fine field goals and Hardik Singh (34th) converted a penalty stroke for India. Hannan Shahid (22nd, 46th) scored twice for Pakistan, with Sufyan Khan (24th) adding the other from a penalty corner.

INDIA STAR TOLD 'NOT TO PLAY IN IPL' IN BIG VERDICT: "DON'T CHANGE YOUR STRENGTH"

Manav Suthar left everyone impressed with a sensational bowling performance as India registered a commanding 165-run victory over Sri Lanka in the first Test of the two-match series in Galle on Wednesday. The 24-year-old spinner, playing only his second Test for India, picked up six wickets in the second innings to finish with a remarkable 10-wicket match haul. Having made his Test debut against Afghanistan in June, Suthar had already announced his arrival on the international stage with a five-wicket haul. He followed it up with another outstanding display in Galle, playing a key role in India's victory. With India taking a 1-0 lead in the two-match series, former India batter Cheteshwar Pujara urged Suthar to remain focused on red-ball cricket rather than chasing an IPL contract. Pujara also appealed to the Indian team management to "preserve" the young spinner for the longest format of the game. "Try to preserve him. We have had this discussion in the past that, yes, all the young players might want to play the shorter format, but India should be looking to preserve him for the Test format. Yes, he might want to play the IPL, but don't go there. I mean, yes, if he gets the opportunity to play the IPL, that's fine, but don't change your strength," Pujara said on the Sony Sports Network. "I think he doesn't need to change his bowling much. Just when it comes to white-ball cricket, you need to have that flatter trajectory, and I don't mind him playing in the IPL. If he plays in the IPL, that is fine, but don't change your strength," he added. Pujara further stated that Suthar does not need to alter his bowling action, as his natural ability and skill set are already helping him thrive in red-ball cricket. "For someone like Manav Suthar, who is fighting the ball, who is willing to go a little slower, when it comes to red-ball cricket, you don't need to change that. Don't change yourself just for the IPL. I can understand, but don't change your natural ability, which is to flight the ball," said Pujara. Speaking about Suthar's T20 credentials, the Rajasthan-born spinner has featured in five IPL matches and picked up two wickets.

FC Goa Drawn In Tough Group For AFC Challenge League

FC Goa were clubbed with Tajikistan in a tricky group in the AFC Challenge League 2026-27 after the draw was held in Kuala Lumpur on Thursday. After losing to FK Arkadag of Turkmenistan in the AFC Champions League 2 preliminary stage last Wednesday, FC Goa dropped to the group stage of the AFC Challenge League, Asia's third-tier men's club competition. Qadsia SC and Fortis FC finished third in the Kuwaiti Premier League 2025-26 and the Bangladesh Football League 2025-26 respectively, while FC Regar-TadAZ were the Tajikistan Cup 2025 winners. The draw saw 20 teams divided into five groups of four - three in the West and two in the East. They will compete in a single round-robin centralised league format in the group stage from October 17 to 24, 2026. The Gauris will travel to Kuwait, where Qadsia SC will host all Group C matches. In the West, the three group winners and the best ranked runners-up among all groups will qualify for the quarter-finals. In the East, the group winners and runners-up will make it to the last eight. The quarter-finals and semi-finals - both double-legged affairs - are set for March 3-18 and April 7-15, 2027, respectively, with the final slated for May 8.

Treesa Jolly-Gayatri Gopichand Enter World Championships Quarters

Indian women's doubles pair of Treesa Jolly and Gayatri Gopichand stood one step away from a medal after reaching quarterfinals with a straight game win over Japan's seventh seeds Rin Iwanaga and Kie Nakanishi at the World Championships in New Delhi on Thursday. The Indian unseeded pair, which is on a comeback trail after Treesa recovered from an injury, dished out a dominating performance to outwit world No 7 Japanese Rin and Kie 21-16 21-12 in a lop-sided contest. Treesa and Gayatri, who were awarded the Arjuna Award for 2025, had made it to the All England Open semi-finals in back-to-back years in 2022 and 2023.

Manav Suthar Shares Details Of His Practice After Demolishing Sri Lanka In 1st Test

India's young left-arm spinner Manav Suthar revealed that he practised with the Kookaburra ball at home before the Sri Lanka series to adapt quickly to the conditions, and his preparation paid off in the first Test at the Galle International Stadium. Suthar produced a match-winning performance in only his second Test, claiming 10 wickets as India defeated Sri Lanka by 165 runs in the opening Test on Wednesday. The spinner returned figures of 6-55 in Sri Lanka's second innings to finish with match figures of 10-101 and help India take a 1-0 lead in the two-match series. Speaking in a video released by the BCCI, Suthar said he had focused on adapting to the Kookaburra ball following India's game against Afghanistan and had spent considerable time practising with it both at home and in the nets. "I take cricket very seriously. My focus is to improve day to day when I go to practice. I practice as much as I can. My focus after the Afghanistan game was to adapt as soon as possible. I practised a lot with the Kookaburra ball. I practised in nets and at home. I was focusing on in-house games. It was very important," Suthar said. Suthar also credited India's arrival in Sri Lanka 10 days before the Test for giving him valuable time to understand the conditions and get comfortable with the Kookaburra ball. "We came to Sri Lanka ten days ago, and it helped a lot in adapting to the environment and how to play with the Kookaburra ball. I get time to adapt. It has helped me a lot," he said. The 22-year-old said patience was another important factor on a Galle pitch that offered assistance to the bowlers. He revealed that he, Ravindra Jadeja and Kuldeep Yadav discussed the need to remain patient, knowing that new batters could find it difficult to settle.

Top Seeds Aryna Sabalenka, Alexander Zverev Stunned In Cincinnati Fourth Round

Top seeds Aryna Sabalenka and Alexander Zverev crashed out of the Cincinnati Masters in a matter of hours on a rainy Wednesday of fourth-round action. American Tommy Paul saved a match point on the way to a 4-6, 7-6 (8/6), 6-4 upset of Germany's Zverev. But the biggest shock came on the women's side where Czech Sara Bejlek, ranked 35th, stunned world number one Sabalenka 7-6 (9/7), 6-4 in a gritty match that finished up shortly after the clock ticked past midnight into Thursday morning. Former champion Sabalenka led by a break in the opening set and was up 5-1 in the tiebreaker before Bejlek roared back to pocket the set in 65 minutes. Bejlek broke the Belarusian three times in the second set, rallying from 4-1 down and securing the win with a love game capped by an ace. "I lost my words - it feels incredible," Bejlek said after her first win over a top-10 player. "I was playing what I was feeling and not really thinking. I was trying not to be nervous and just play. I believed in myself no matter what," Bejlek, who won the Abu Dhabi hard court title in February as a qualifier, booked a quarter-final clash with American Madison Keys. It was yet another setback for Sabalenka as the start of the US Open looms on August 30. The four-time Grand Slam champion was ousted in the fourth round of the Toronto Masters last week, having lost in the same round at Wimbledon and in the quarter-finals at Roland Garros.

Mumbai Indians' New Post Sparks 'Hardik Pandya' Rumour Ahead Of IPL 2027

Ahead of the next season of the Indian Premier League, there has been a huge buzz regarding Hardik Pandya. Multiple reports have claimed that Mumbai Indians are looking to trade the player before IPL 2027. The all-rounder, who made his IPL debut for MI in 2015, left the franchise ahead of the 2022 season and joined Gujarat Titans. Hardik led GT to the title in their debut season and continued as captain for another year before MI reacquired his services through the transfer window. This time, Hardik was handed the responsibility of leading Mumbai Indians. However, the results did not go as expected, with Mumbai finishing at the bottom of the IPL 2024 points table. The following season, MI reached Qualifier 2 before ending IPL 2026 in ninth place. Amid the ongoing rumours regarding Hardik's potential trade, Mumbai Indians took to social media to post some pictures of the player. Commenting on IPL transfers and trades, former India captain Sunil Gavaskar made a direct appeal. "...there's some speculation in the media about the possible switching of players from one franchise to another. There's, of course, still some time before that window closes. However, while the transfer of a player from one franchise to another is in the public domain, when a trade takes place, the numbers are known only to the two franchises, the player and the BCCI," Sunil Gavaskar wrote in Mid-Day. "In such a situation, the other franchises don't know whether the salary cap that every franchise has for its squad was maintained or breached. That's why it's important for full transparency that the numbers are also made public." He added that full transparency would help maintain the high profile of the IPL. "The IPL is the greatest T20 league in the world and it's therefore crucial that full transparency is maintained so that there's no finger-pointing at it from those jealous of it," he wrote further. Ahead of the next season of the Indian Premier League, there has been a huge buzz regarding Hardik Pandya. A single Mumbai Indians social media post has sent the IPL rumour mill into overdrive, reigniting speculation over whether Hardik Pandya will still be wearing the franchise's colours come the 2027 season. The Mumbai franchise shared a post captioned "Memo: Make it HP coded," accompanied by two images.

Viswanath & sons’ is a film that lived up to suriya sir’s faith: director Venky Atluri

Tamil star Suriya's latest film 'VISWANATH & SONS', directed by acclaimed filmmaker Venky Atluri, features Mamitha Baiju as the female lead. Presented by Srikara Studios and produced jointly by Suryadevara Naga Vamsi and Sai Soujanya under Sithara Entertainments and Fortune Four Cinemas, the film hit theatres on August 14, 2026. With its natural humour, heartfelt emotions and relatable family drama, 'VISWANATH & SONS' is receiving an overwhelming response from audiences. The film has crossed the ₹150 crore gross mark worldwide within just four days and is continuing its successful run. In a recent interaction with the media, director Venky Atluri shared his happiness over the film's success and spoke about Suriya's faith in the story, the writing process, the film's art work, Trivikram Srinivas's reaction, Mamitha Baiju's casting and several other interesting aspects of the film.

What was Suriya sir's reaction when he first heard the story?

Suriya sir immediately liked the story. In fact, he was looking for a family-oriented film, and he had mentioned that to me. I already had this story ready, so I narrated it to him. He really connected with it. He felt that we should tell the story honestly without unnecessarily adding comedy or commercial elements. That is why we were particularly careful with the climax. We also made sure that no character was compromised in the process. Suriya sir watched the film a few days before its release. He was very happy because what he had believed in was exactly what he saw on screen. I feel very happy that we could live up to the faith he placed in the story. You are being praised for having the strength of writing seen in Trivikram Srinivas's films. How do you feel about that comparison? Mani Ratnam sir and Trivikram sir are two of the biggest inspirations behind my decision to enter the film industry. So, being compared with Trivikram sir is a great honour for me. I also understand the responsibility that comes with such a compliment, and I will work even harder to live up to it. I particularly love Trivikram sir's 'Nuvvu Naaku Nachav'. The dialogues are entertaining and humorous, yet they convey profound truths about life. That film inspired me tremendously, and I enjoy writing in a similar space.

How did the story of 'VISWANATH & SONS' originate?

Initially, I wanted to write a story around a relationship involving a significant age difference. If a person reaches the age of 40 without getting married, there has to be a strong reason behind that decision. The story evolved around that idea.
