Giriraj calls Mehbooba 'terrorist'

Srinagar, Aug 5: A political controversy erupted on Wednesday after Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) Chief and former Jammu and Kashmir Chief Minister Mehbooba Mufti was seen holding the National Flag upside down during a protest in Srinagar, drawing sharp criticism from the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP).

Mufti had led PDP leaders and workers in a sit-in outside the party office in Srinagar to protest against the Centre's decision to revoke Jammu and Kashmir's special status by abrogating Articles 370 and 35-A in August 2019. During the demonstration, the former Chief Minister was seen holding both the National Flag and the flag of the erstwhile state of Jammu and Kashmir. However, the Tricolour appeared to have been held in an inverted position, with the saffron band at the bottom instead of the top. Under the Flag Code of India, the national flag must always be displayed in the prescribed manner. Any incorrect display, including holding it upside down, displaying incorrect proportions or using a damaged flag, amounts to a violation of the Flag Code. According to the prescribed rules, the saffron band must always remain at the top, followed by the white band with the navy blue 24-spoke Ashoka Chakra in the centre and the green band at the bottom.

Rahul holds press meet with student protestors

says they defended the 'idea of India'

New Delhi (TSIT):

Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi on Wednesday addressed a press conference with student protestors, including participants from the Jantar Mantar demonstrations and Mumbai-based student activist Riya Ahir, saying they had defended the Constitution and the 'idea of India.'

The press conference came amid controversy over a minor protester who had apologised after making abusive remarks against Prime Minister Narendra Modi during the Jantar Mantar protest. The apology followed a police case, with the Congress alleging that the student was pressured into issuing it. Rahul Gandhi said the students were exercising their democratic right by raising concerns over the country's education system and should not be harassed or forced to apologise. He described them as defenders of the Constitution and called for an end to alleged intimidation of protesters.

The Congress leader alleged that students were beaten, threatened and pressured after participating in peaceful demonstrations. He urged the Centre to address issues such as examination paper leaks and reforms to improve the education system and ensure a secure future for the youth.

Student activist Riya Ahir, who gained attention after stopping a police van during a protest in Mumbai, claimed she had tried to prevent the illegal detention of students and alleged that her complaint filed on July 27 had not yet resulted in an FIR.

Another protester, Farah Naaz, alleged that police baton-charged peaceful demonstrators at Jantar Mantar on July 20, detained them and labelled them traitors. She said the protesters would continue to raise their voice for their rights.

Calcutta HC denies permission to Abhishek Banerjee to travel abroad for eye treatment

Kolkata (TSIT):

A single-judge bench of the Calcutta High Court on Wednesday denied permission to the Trinamool Congress' general secretary and the party's Diamond Harbour Lok Sabha member, Abhishek Banerjee, to travel abroad for ophthalmic treatment. After a hearing in the matter, the single-judge bench of Justice Sougata Bhattacharya observed that he had earlier advised Banerjee to first consult experts from the state-run S.S.K.M. Medical College and Hospital in Kolkata, and on the basis of that report from the hospital, the court would take a decision in the matter.

CM Naidu Targets Rs.9.5 Lakh Crore Investment for Visakha Region

The South India Times, Visakhapatnam:

Andhra Pradesh Chief Minister N. Chandrababu Naidu on Wednesday reviewed the development plans for the Visakha Economic Region (VER) and directed officials to prepare a comprehensive roadmap to attract Rs.9.5 lakh crore in investments across key sectors.

During the review meeting, the Chief Minister said the State government would invest Rs.3.5 lakh crore to Rs.4 lakh crore, while mobilising Rs.5.3 lakh crore from the private sector to accelerate economic growth. He said the proposed Bay City Project should serve as the anchor project for the overall development of the Visakha Economic Region. Naidu stressed that the VER project should ensure integrated development through micro-level planning and asked officials to prepare region-wise and sector-wise strategies instead of focusing on standalone projects.

He identified AI data centres, port-based industries, tourism, green hydrogen and clean energy as priority sectors for investment. He also directed officials to integrate projects from Mulapeta Port to the Rajamahendravaram Akhanda Godavari Project into the VER framework to create a connected economic corridor.

The Chief Minister emphasised convergence of infrastructure projects and government schemes to maximise economic benefits. He instructed officials to utilise the Viability Gap Funding (VGF) scheme wherever required to support infrastructure development and encourage private investment.

CM Revanth Reddy seeks Centre's irrigation support

Hyderabad TSIT BUREAU:

Chief Minister A.Revanth Reddy on Wednesday urged the Union Government to expedite approvals for major irrigation projects in Telangana, including the Tummidihetti Barrage, Palamuru-Rangareddy, Seethamma Sagar, Dindi, and Gouravelli projects, during separate meetings with Union Ministers in New Delhi. Accompanied by Irrigation Minister Capt. N. Uttam Kumar Reddy, the Chief Minister met Union Jal Shakti Minister C.R. Patil and requested him to facilitate a meeting between the Telangana and Maharashtra governments to resolve the long-pending issue of increasing the height of the Tummidihetti Barrage on the Pranahita River. Revanth

Reddy explained that increasing the barrage height to 150-152 metres would enable gravity-based water supply, reduce electricity consumption and significantly benefit irrigation in the erstwhile Adilabad district. Responding positively, C.R. Patil assured that the Central Water Commission (CWC) would first convene a meeting of officials from both states, followed by discussions between the Irrigation Ministers of Telangana and Maharashtra.

Education takes centre stage in TVK's maiden budget; Rs.44,527 Crore allocated for school sector

Chennai (TSIT): Education emerged as a major focus of the Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay-led TVK government's maiden Budget for 2026-27, with Finance Minister N. Marie Wilson on Wednesday allocating 44,527 crore for the school education sector and announcing a slew of initiatives ranging from modern residential schools and improved campus facilities to drug abuse awareness programmes.

Under the Perunthalaivar Kamarajar Model Schools initiative, the Chief Minister Vijay government will establish modern residential schools for students from Classes IX to XII.

Students will be provided education, food, uniforms, accommodation and textbooks free of cost. The government has earmarked 125 crore for developing infrastructure under the programme.

The Budget allocated 129 crore for the 'Super Clean, Super Campus' scheme, which will initially cover 10,000 government schools and focus on improving cleanliness, drinking water, sanitation and other essential facilities. For higher education, the government earmarked 2,000 crore for the Vetri Laptop Scheme, under which laptops will be provided to college students. The government also announced measures to tackle drug abuse among students, allocating 7 crore for awareness programmes in schools. Wilson said the Drugs Free Tamil Nadu mobile application would be strengthened to enable members of the public to report incidents involving the sale and circulation of narcotic substances.

Alongside its education push, the TVK government unveiled several welfare schemes. An allocation of 560 crore has been made for the Thaimaman Thanga Modhiram Scheme, under which babies born in government hospitals will receive a one-gram gold ring. The government also proposed a marriage assistance programme under which the brother of a bride will be provided an eight-gram gold coin and a silk saree on her wedding day.

A total of 812 crore has been earmarked for the scheme. Presenting the government's fiscal road map, Wilson said Tamil Nadu's debt had doubled over the past five years and the State was paying high interest on its borrowings. The government expects to mobilise an additional 16,000 crore in revenue, including 1,000 crore through a liquor production cess. A Revenue Enhancement Committee will also be constituted to identify measures to strengthen the State's finances. The Budget is the first comprehensive fiscal policy statement of the TVK government.

Sindhu Hospitals Performs First Advanced HITHOC Cancer Procedure

Hyderabad, Aug. 5 (TSIT): Sindhu Hospitals has successfully performed its first Hyperthermic Intrathoracic Chemotherapy (HITHOC) procedure, marking a significant milestone in advanced thoracic cancer care.

The complex surgery was carried out on a 40-year-old patient diagnosed with Stage IVA Type B Thymoma involving the left hemithorax. After showing a partial response to neoadjuvant chemotherapy, the patient underwent a left total pleurectomy with segmental lung resection, followed by the HITHOC procedure despite having poor pulmonary function.

Hospital officials said the advanced multidisciplinary treatment offers carefully selected patients with Stage IVA thymoma an improved chance of long-term disease control and, in some cases, a potential cure.

The patient has recovered well following the surgery and has been discharged in stable condition. The successful procedure was made possible through the coordinated efforts of the Departments of Oncosurgery, Anaesthesia, and Medical Oncology, highlighting the hospital's multidisciplinary approach to managing complex cancer cases.

Sindhu Hospitals said the achievement reinforces its commitment to bringing advanced cancer care and cutting-edge treatment options closer to patients.

Kidney transplant recipient beats rare cancer

Hyderabad, Aug. 5: Doctors at KIMS Hospitals, Secunderabad, have successfully treated a rare intestinal cancer in a 42-year-old woman while preserving her transplanted kidney, which has been functioning well for the past 17 years.

The patient underwent a kidney transplant in 2009 with a kidney donated by her mother and had been on immunosuppressive medication since then.

She was diagnosed with high-grade intestinal lymphoma after developing severe abdominal pain, recurrent vomiting and significant weight loss. A multidisciplinary team from nephrology, medical oncology, surgery and critical care carefully balanced chemotherapy with immunosuppressive treatment to control the cancer without affecting the transplanted kidney. After three cycles of chemo-immunotherapy, the tumour responded well, but the patient developed a bowel fistula that required emergency surgery. General and GI Laparoscopic Surgeon Dr. M.B.V. Prasad successfully removed the affected portions of the intestine and restored bowel continuity. Following recovery, the patient completed the remaining chemotherapy cycles, and a follow-up PET scan confirmed complete remission of the cancer. Her transplanted kidney continues to function normally. Dr. Mounika Boppana, Consultant Medical Oncology and Hemato-Oncology, said careful planning and close monitoring enabled doctors to cure the cancer while preserving kidney function. Doctors said the case highlights the importance of multidisciplinary care in managing complex conditions involving organ transplant recipients

THE FOUR PILLARS THAT KEEP INDIA'S DEMOCRACY ALIVE

Ballot. Constitution. Judiciary. Street.

Vice President, Telangana Pradesh Mahila Congress

Democracy does not begin and end at the ballot box. Elections determine who governs, but they do not grant any government unlimited authority. The framers of the Indian Constitution consciously designed a system of checks and balances to ensure that no elected government, regardless of the size of its mandate, could ever become the sole voice of the nation.

India's democratic strength rests upon four inseparable pillars: the Ballot, the Constitution, the Judiciary, and the Street. Each performs a unique constitutional function, and together they protect the Republic from the concentration of unchecked power.

The Ballot gives citizens the authority to choose their representatives. It is the foundation of democratic legitimacy. Yet elections alone cannot guarantee freedom or justice. Democracy requires institutions that continue to protect citizens long after votes have been counted.

The Constitution (Samvidhan) is the nation's supreme safeguard. It defines the limits of governmental authority, protects fundamental rights, and ensures that no majority can override constitutional principles. Governments derive their legitimacy from elections, but they derive their limits from the Constitution.

The Judiciary, particularly the Supreme Court and other independent constitutional institutions, serves as the guardian of those constitutional values. Judicial review is not an obstacle to democracy—it is one of democracy's greatest strengths. Whenever constitutional questions arise, including those involving electoral institutions or executive power, judicial scrutiny reinforces the principle that every public authority remains accountable to the Constitution.

The fourth pillar is often underestimated but is equally indispensable—the Street. Peaceful public protest has always been an essential democratic space where citizens express dissent, demand accountability, and remind governments that public consent cannot be taken for granted between elections.

Recent student protests demanding accountability from Union Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan once again demonstrate that democratic participation does not stop after polling day. Citizens retain the constitutional right to question governments, seek transparency, and peacefully demand corrective action. The role of the Opposition, civil society, and student movements is not to weaken democracy but to strengthen it by bringing public grievances into the national conversation.

India's democratic history repeatedly illustrates the transformative role of peaceful public mobilisation. The nationwide farmers' movement eventually resulted in the repeal of the three farm laws after sustained democratic protest. Similarly, public debate has significantly shaped discussions surrounding higher education reforms and UGC-related policies. Whether one agrees with every movement or every policy is secondary; what matters is that governments in democracies remain answerable to the people between elections.

The Constitution guarantees freedom of speech, expression, and peaceful assembly, subject to reasonable restrictions. These rights are not ceremonial promises; they are enforceable constitutional guarantees. Whenever peaceful demonstrations are met with excessive force, prolonged restrictions, or disproportionate policing, legitimate questions arise regarding the balance between maintaining public order and protecting constitutional freedoms.

India's democratic tradition has often witnessed governments engaging with protest movements through dialogue rather than confrontation. Consultation, negotiation, and reconciliation have strengthened public confidence far more effectively than coercion ever could. Democracies mature through conversation—not through the suppression of dissent.

The present student movement has also highlighted the constitutional role of the parliamentary Opposition. Rahul Gandhi and other Opposition leaders chose to stand alongside protesting students while raising their concerns both inside Parliament and outside it. Supporters view these actions, including protests that resulted in detention, as efforts to amplify public concerns and uphold constitutional accountability. In a parliamentary democracy, the Opposition has a legitimate responsibility to question the executive and ensure that public voices are heard.

Equally inspiring has been the participation of ordinary citizens, particularly students and young women, whose courage during peaceful demonstrations reflects democratic confidence rather than democratic weakness. Their participation reminds us that citizenship is an active responsibility, not merely a periodic electoral exercise.

Social activist Sonam Wangchuk's campaigns similarly demonstrate how peaceful public mobilisation can draw national attention to issues of governance and public policy. Regardless of individual political opinions, such movements reaffirm that democratic engagement outside formal institutions remains an essential part of constitutional life.

If India seeks to strengthen its constitutional democracy further, several reforms deserve serious consideration:

- * Establish clear national standards governing police responses to peaceful assemblies.
- * Ensure that any use of force remains necessary, proportionate, and fully accountable.

- * Strengthen independent oversight of actions taken during public demonstrations.
- * Institutionalise dialogue mechanisms between governments and protest groups before situations escalate.
- * Expand constitutional education so that citizens, administrators, and law enforcement agencies fully understand both rights and responsibilities.

The Constitution was drafted not merely to create governments but to restrain them. Electoral victory provides the authority to govern—it does not confer unlimited power. The Constitution, the judiciary, Parliament, independent institutions, a vigilant Opposition, a free press, and an engaged citizenry together preserve the democratic balance envisioned by the founders of the Republic.

India's democracy has endured because it permits disagreement without disloyalty, protest without rebellion, and criticism without abandoning constitutional order. Governments will change, political parties will alternate in power, but the Constitution must always remain supreme.

A confident government should never fear peaceful dissent. It should welcome it as evidence that democracy is alive. Because when the Ballot speaks, democracy begins. When the Constitution limits power, democracy survives. When the Judiciary protects rights, democracy is secured. And when citizens peacefully occupy the Street to defend constitutional values, democracy breathes.

DON'T IGNORE LEG PAIN, WARNS VASCULAR EXPERT

Hyderabad, 5th August, 2026: Leg pain while walking is often dismissed as a normal part of ageing, muscle fatigue or joint problems. However, according to renowned vascular surgeon Dr. P. C. Gupta, it could be one of the earliest warning signs of Peripheral Arterial Disease (PAD), a serious condition caused by narrowing or blockage of the arteries that reduces blood flow to the legs.

On the occasion of National Vascular Day, Dr. Gupta called for greater public awareness about vascular diseases, stressing that delayed diagnosis continues to be one of the biggest reasons patients suffer avoidable disability and limb-threatening complications.

Vascular diseases affect the arteries and veins that carry blood throughout the body and often develop silently. According to the Vascular Society of India, vascular diseases remain significantly under-recognised despite constituting a major health burden in the country. With India witnessing a rising prevalence of diabetes, hypertension, obesity and tobacco use, vascular disorders are becoming increasingly common across both urban and rural populations.

The burden of vascular disease in India is substantial and continues to grow. More than 10 crore Indians are living with diabetes, placing them at a significantly higher risk of developing blocked arteries, while an estimated 5 crore people suffer from Peripheral Arterial Disease (PAD) affecting blood circulation in the legs. Nearly one lakh Indians lose a limb every year due to diabetic foot complications, although many of these amputations can be prevented through timely diagnosis and vascular treatment. One in four people with diabetes is likely to develop a foot ulcer during their lifetime, and blocked arteries in the legs also increase the risk of heart attack and stroke. Experts emphasise that a simple vascular examination and Doppler ultrasound can detect the disease early, helping save limbs and lives. People living with diabetes, smokers, individuals with high blood pressure or high cholesterol and adults above 50 years are at a significantly higher risk of developing Peripheral Arterial Disease and other vascular disorders. Yet many patients ignore early symptoms until blood circulation has been severely affected.

Protect the Government that protects your home and temple: CM DK Shivakumar calls on priests protects your homes and temples" and help ensure its return to power, as people regard the words of priests with faith.

Questioning the political opponents, Shivakumar asked whether those "who have taken religion on contract" had brought any positive change in the lives of temple priests. He said Congress leaders, including former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, Mallikarjun Kharge, Minister Ramalinga Reddy and himself, were also Hindus and accused some parties of using religion for political gain.

Speaking on the welfare of temple priests, he said the government was ready to extend necessary support for training priests serving in nearly 34,000 rural temples. He suggested that priests' associations and mutts jointly conduct three-month training programmes to impart temple rituals and traditions.

Responding to a demand raised at the convention, Shivakumar said he was prepared to discuss assigning the Muzrai portfolio to Minister Ramalinga Reddy, while noting that the minister was currently handling the challenging Irrigation Department. He said the issue would be discussed with the minister.

Private employment exchange system to create more employment opportunities

Highlighting the Government's achievements, Shivakumar said it had fulfilled its election promises through the implementation of the five guarantee schemes, including Gruha Jyothi, Gruha Lakshmi, Shakti, and Anna Bhagya. He also announced that the Government was moving towards introducing a private employment exchange system to create more employment opportunities for youth.

CCTV cameras near Hundis

He said the government had decided to install CCTV cameras near hundis in major temples to ensure transparency in handling temple donations and prevent allegations against priests.

Stating that religion was a personal matter, Shivakumar said priests served all devotees without discrimination and played a vital role in preserving traditions.

Praising Ramalinga Reddy's work in the Muzrai Department, he said the minister had earned the confidence of temple priests through his initiatives. He concluded by assuring the gathering that the Government would continue to work for the welfare of priests and the Chicago, USA : In a memorable meeting that blended nostalgia, technology, and a shared vision for India's future, S.E. Sudheendra, Chairman of the Karnataka State Bioenergy Development Board met renowned technocrat Sam Pitroda, widely regarded as the architect of India's telecommunications and information technology revolution.

During the interaction at Sam Pitroda's residence in Chicago, the two engaged in an extensive discussion on India's technological journey, sustainable development, clean energy, and the future of bioenergy. Recalling his return to India in the early 1980s, Sam Pitroda reflected on how then Prime Minister Indira Gandhi invited him in 1984 to lead the newly established Centre for Development of Telematics (C-DOT). He spoke about the pioneering efforts that made indigenous telecommunications technology accessible to millions of Indians.

He also reminisced about his leadership of the National Technology Missions under the late Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, covering telecommunications, drinking water, literacy, immunisation, dairy development, and oilseeds, which played a transformative role in India's development. The meeting took an emotional turn when Sam Pitroda showed an old photograph from the late 1990s featuring a young S.E. Sudheendra alongside his mother, Vishala Eshwar. Deeply moved by the memory, Chairman S.E.Sudheendra shared an emotional moment as Sam Pitroda connected with Vishala Eshwar through a video call, making the reunion even more special. During the discussions, Sam Pitroda emphasized that India's vast botanical wealth and traditional knowledge preserved by indigenous communities should be scientifically studied, validated, documented, and shared globally rather than being lost with passing generations. He highlighted the immense potential of India's biodiversity in contributing to sustainable development and innovation. Referring to Kerala, Sam Pitroda mentioned Wayanad, the Lok Sabha constituency that was represented by the opposition leader in lokasabha Rahul Gandhi and is now represented by Priyanka Gandhi. He also exchanged views on agroforestry with Dr. Shiju Sebastian, Advisor to the Chairman, who hails from Kerala, discussing opportunities for integrating sustainable agricultural practices with environmental conservation. The conversation further focused on municipal solid waste management, ecological conservation, sustainable agriculture, and the need to address environmental challenges that continue to affect rural and backward regions of the country. Sam Pitroda stressed that scientific planning and technological innovation could significantly improve livelihoods while protecting natural resources. Highlighting the growing importance of renewable energy, Sam Pitroda underscored that clean energy is the need of the hour.

CABINET EXPANSION IS DRIVEN BY MONEY POWER AND HIGH COMMAND POLITICS, NOT DEVELOPMENT: B.Y. VIJAYENDRA

Bengaluru: BJP State President and MLA B.Y. Vijayendra alleged that the Congress government's cabinet expansion was not undertaken for the development of the state, public welfare, or good governance. Instead, he claimed it was the outcome of power-sharing, money power, factionalism, and High Command politics.

Date Was Not Fixed Until the Rate Was Fixed

Vijayendra said that he had maintained from the beginning that "the date for the cabinet expansion was not fixed because the rate was not fixed." He asserted that public statements made today by senior Congress leaders, former ministers, and MLAs have substantiated his allegation. According to him, the internal dissent within the Congress has exposed the reality behind the cabinet formation. Growing Discontent Among Senior Congress Leaders

He pointed out that senior MLA Tanveer Sait had alleged that even those involved in anti-party activities were rewarded with ministerial berths. Former Minister T.B. Jayachandra reportedly expressed that he was "ashamed to call himself a Congressman." MLA S.R. Srinivas allegedly remarked that he could not secure a ministerial post because he could not pay money. Vijayendra added that dissatisfaction expressed by former Minister M.C. Sudhakar, S.N. Narayanaswamy, and several other Congress leaders has exposed the party's internal condition.

Vijay's Udhayanidhi
Arrest May Not Be A
'Blunder' After All

On the face of it, Udhayanidhi Stalin's show of strength through an impromptu mini-roadshow of sorts in Thanjavur, after securing bail and return to Chennai within 12 hours of his arrest, can be seen as a setback to the Joseph Vijay government. In cricketing parlance, the televised arrest and the "road trip" to Thanjavur are being interpreted as Vijay having given a free hit to the DMK. Stalin Junior's smirk to the continuous chant of "Trisha, Trisha" by the DMK cadre during a Cauvery protest meeting in Thanjavur on Monday, and his loaded comment that smacked of sexual innuendos, had angered the TVK cadre. The party had also lodged a complaint with the National Commission for Women seeking its intervention "regarding objectifying and sexually suggestive remarks" made by the Leader of Opposition. Hence, the party faithful were left stumped when the TVK government took a U-turn in court and denied any plan to send Udhayanidhi to judicial custody. The station ball that followed was, then, a mere formality. Nonetheless, the DMK leadership did not miss the opportunity to turn the occasion into a show of strength. In any case, the case stood on weak legs. While a case could be filed for defamation, the arrest was seen as an overreach - more so when politicians are known to milk such arrests to generate sympathy and emerge stronger.

A Self-Goal? Maybe Not

It is, therefore, felt that the TVK government showed its lack of political acumen by raising the political temperature, allowing the DMK an opportunity to score a political goal, that too a day before the Tamil Nadu assembly's budget session was to start. The DMK has been groping in the dark since its humiliating exit from power in May, and many TVK supporters feel that the arrest episode only provided it with political oxygen, galvanising the cadre-based party to allege that Vijay had made the move only because he was scared of facing Stalin in the assembly. Even TVK allies, like the Congress, and non-allies like the PMK felt that while the remark was in bad taste, the arrest was unnecessary. Given the manner in which the DMK cadre rallied around him, it also elevated Udhayanidhi's political stature. Till now, he was only known as Karunanidhi's grandson and Stalin's son, who owed his earlier position as Deputy Chief Minister and present position as Leader of Opposition, to his family name. So, did Vijay and the TVK commit political harakiri? I see it more as a case of Vijay testing the waters. Tuesday made the TVK leadership understand how exactly the DMK reacts under pressure and mobilises its forces in every district. For too long, Vijay has been dismissed as a movie actor who stormed to power riding on his personal popularity as an actor. For many months, the visuals of Vijay taking the flight out of Trichy airport to Chennai soon after the stampede in Karur in September that killed 41 people, has been cited as proof that he was a "coward". Speaking to reporters at the same Trichy airport on Tuesday night, Udhayanidhi repeated the charge, highlighting that he, in contrast, was not one to run away. The arrest saga was thus Vijay borrowing a leaf from the Jayalalithaa handbook, and establishing that he is no pushover and can be a strict administrator. The episode was designed to send a message to the DMK that even their top leadership could be touched if they crossed the line.

Bankipur, And Why The Most Dangerous
Voter Is The One Who Thinks Again

"If your vote doesn't change your life or your situation, then you need to change your vote." Democracy doctrines like this one come true more as an exception than as a rule. Since voter fatigue is slow to grow and voters' tolerance slow to fade, these doctrines most often end up being mocked or trolled. But history has enough evidence to prove that when the exception does arrive, it changes not just one game but the rules of the game. On Monday, Jan Suraj Party founding chief Prashant Kishor defeated his rival from the BJP in the Bankipur bypoll. Headlines sang in chorus. The BJP lost its 31-year-old bastion. The win had an umami taste to it, as just seven months ago, each one of his 238 candidates in the Bihar Assembly polls had lost. That's why, when the result came in, I wondered and hoped. Is the doctrine having its moment in the sun? Is it a flash in the pan or the start of a phenomenon?

Bihar Has Been Here Before

Naysayers have always scoffed and asked, "Bihar mein ka ba?" ("What's there in Bihar?"). But everyone who has invested thought without prejudice and looked beyond the abject apathy and poverty in Bihar knows that, despite it being the top BIMARU state, and irrespective of the asphyxiating talons of caste in the state's politics, once in a while, the voter recovers and delivers a moment to romance electoral democracy. It may not last. It may mutate into something good, bad, or ugly. I was in Bihar covering the February 1990 assembly polls. It was an "exceptional moment" in India's poorest state, home to people crushed by the absence of basic necessities, hope, and a state that cared. Then, the children of indifferent gods didn't just transfer power into the hands of the Mandalites or dethrone the dominant demography by breaking the upper caste's grip over the state - they wiped out the Congress so decisively that the party, till date, has not been able to make even a feeble recovery in Bihar or neighbouring Uttar Pradesh. I stumbled upon that clinching evidence, that the voter crafts democratic destinies, days after Lalu Prasad took oath on March 10, 1990, as Chief Minister. That day, he had reached Phulwaria, his native village. We were in tow. A crowd, consisting largely of dust-covered, shirtless, barefoot kids with matted hair and bright, hopeful eyes, watched and cheered in amazement.

'Hathua Raja'

Lalu was the Chief Minister. The state was his stage. As if the curtain had just lifted, in a showman-like moment, he went towards a grazing buffalo. With a quick jump, he was on its back. The procession started. Inside his less-than-humble home, his mother was cooking a meal. Lalu wanted to tell her, "I am now Bihar's Chief Minister." But the expanse of his mother's world geography was limited. She didn't know what Bihar or a Chief Minister meant. Lalu resolved the situation. He told her, "I have become the raja of Hathua." She knew about the Hathua Raj zamindari estate belonging to the Baghochia clan of Bhumihar Brahmins. Lalu wanted to convey that he was the most powerful man in the state. The most powerful man his mother knew was the "Hathua Raja". Sitting in that house that day, I realised the power the voters had unsheathed. Sitting today in the newsroom, I have empirical evidence that the change they brought about that day in February 1990 has redesigned Indian politics. The jury is out on whether the change was good, bad, or ugly. For Prashant Kishor or the JSP, replicating Bankipur, or the impact the Mandal and Mandir issues had across Bihar, will be a Herculean task. But I would love to romance the outcome of the Bankipur bypoll, just because the voters preferred to pick a candidate and changed their choice of party. They had a reason beyond caste for their vote in a caste cauldron like Bihar. Every checkbox said Bankipur was a BJP bastion. Urban in character, like no other in Bihar. The state CM's residence, the state's university, iconic Gandhi Maidan, and the hefty real estate around it all fall in Bankipur. It also had a perfect caste arithmetic for the BJP. The upper-caste vote ranges between 35% and 40%. With Nitish Kumar on its side, the BJP controlled a captive 50% of the votes. Then there was another advantage. Out of the 40% upper-caste vote, the Kayasthas account for 14-15%. And since 1995, the BJP's candidate for Patna West, the earlier avatar of Bankipur, was Nabin Kishore Prasad Sinha, a Kayastha. In 2010, Bankipur voted for the first time after the delimitation exercise in Bihar. And the first winner was Nitin Nabin, the current BJP national president. Bankipur was won a whopping nine times in 31 years by him and his father.

Everything Was In BJP's Favour, Until It Wasn't

The odds seemed stacked in favour of the BJP. The BJP had its first Bihar Chief Minister, Samrat Chowdhary, manning the fort. The BJP-JD(U)-LJP alliance had routed the INDIA bloc, especially the RJD, just seven months ago. Many say the BJP lost because it was complacent. Before polling, most leaders felt that in Bankipur, the "lotus symbol" was the factor, not the name or face of the candidate. The party entered the contest in a mess. When Nitin Nabin quit Bankipur for a Rajya Sabha membership, the BJP fielded Ashutosh Bunt as its first pick. But then he bowed out. His father was an accused in a scam involving Lalu Prasad. His party feared Prashant Kishor would make corruption a poll plank. Party sources say the party president picked Neeraj Kumar Sinha as the replacement. To compensate, the BJP pushed a large number of leaders to campaign towards countering Kishor's direct-contact-with-voters outreach. But the BJP failed to gauge the depth and width of voter discontent. During the campaign, the most frequently heard refrain in the constituency among BJP supporters was: "The party needs to be taught a lesson." In various parts of the constituency, during morning walks, elders were heard expressing a sense of hurt over the exaggerated swagger of the BJP leadership. An ex-professor at Patna University who operates a literature club had told me during a phone call barely a week before polling, "Voters of this constituency don't battle for bijli [electricity], sadak [roads] and paani [water]. They pick Ravi Shankar Prasad as their MP because of the IQ and worldview he brings. That has been the overarching factor. There is caste and ideological loyalty beneath it. But if the party takes the voters for granted, then splintering happens. They won't opt for the RJD, but Prashant Kishor becomes a credible option."

Fundamental Matters

The BJP's success for 31 years hinged on the demographic composition of this seat. The mood among the upper castes, a literate and relatively affluent voter block, shifted because of other factors as well. A section was miffed at the BJP's visible demographic focus shift from the upper castes to the backwards and most backwards. The elevation of Nitin Nabin, a Kayastha, wasn't seen as an adequate counterweight to Samrat Chowdhary becoming Chief Minister. Bihar grapples with high unemployment, which has historically led to the migration of people to other states. Bankipur has a large number of educated youth who are struggling for jobs or better-quality jobs. The issues have been on Kishor's agenda since he launched his padyatra (foot march) in 2022. In Bankipur, he persisted with his core messaging but had a definite target: Chief Minister Samrat Chowdhary. He turned the contest into a straight choice between the two of them. The focus shifted to personality over local issues.

Rising HIV cases on higher education campuses:
No more silence, dialogue is essential

- Dr. Satyavan Saurabh

The future of a country is determined by its youth, and the greatest centers of youth power are our schools, colleges, and universities. Therefore, if news emerges from a state that a large number of students have tested positive for HIV, forcing the government to launch a comprehensive testing campaign in higher education institutions, this is no longer a matter solely for the health department. It is a serious warning for education, society, families, policymakers, and the entire nation. This is not the time to spread fear, but to confront this challenge with a scientific approach, sensitivity, and widespread awareness. HIV, or Human Immunodeficiency Virus, attacks the body's immune system. If not diagnosed and treated promptly, it can lead to a serious condition called AIDS. However, advances in medical science have made it a manageable disease. With the help of antiretroviral therapy (ART), infected individuals can live a normal and long life. Therefore, early detection, regular treatment, and infection prevention are crucial. The news of HIV infection among young people raises several serious questions. Is health and sex education adequate in our educational institutions? Are young people receiving scientific information about safe behavior, the causes of infection, and preventive measures? Are families and society willing to openly communicate on this topic? If the answer to these questions is 'no,' then we must acknowledge that the problem is not just about health, but also about our social mindset and education system. Even today, Indian society doesn't consider it comfortable to discuss sexual health openly. Parents are hesitant, teachers often avoid the topic, and students often receive incomplete or misleading information from the internet or friends. This results in myths, misconceptions, and misinformation. Scientific information, however, is the most effective means of preventing this disease. It's also important to understand that HIV infection can spread not only through unprotected sex, but also through transfusions of infected blood, the use of contaminated needles, and from an infected mother to her child. However, HIV is not spread through shaking hands, sitting together, sharing food, hugging, sneezing, or mosquito bites. Unfortunately, even today, a large segment of society remains unaware of these facts. This ignorance leads to discrimination and social exclusion against infected individuals. Young people attending higher education institutions are at a time of their lives marked by independence, curiosity, and a desire for new experiences. Guiding them in the right direction is not only the responsibility of families, but also of universities and the government. Every college and university should have a health counseling center, trained counselors, confidential testing facilities, and regular awareness programs. Students should be assured that their privacy and dignity will be fully protected if they come forward with a health concern. If a state decides to launch an HIV testing campaign in higher education institutions, its objective should not be solely to identify infected individuals. Counseling, mental health support, treatment, and awareness must be given equal importance. Testing will be successful only if students perceive it as a normal health safety measure rather than a source of fear or shame. The role of the media also becomes crucial here. Sensationalizing any data or event creates fear and confusion in society. Conversely, if the media promotes dialogue based on scientific facts, expert opinion, and awareness, society can become more responsible and sensitive. It is also essential to end the tendency to associate illness with crime or character. The growing trend of drug addiction is also a matter of concern. Drug abuse, especially the sharing of infected needles, also increases the risk of HIV infection. Therefore, de-addiction campaigns and HIV awareness programs need to be integrated. Effective infection control is achieved not only through treatment but also by reducing risky behaviors. India has achieved remarkable success over the years through its National AIDS Control Program. New infections have declined, and millions of infected individuals have been provided treatment. However, if the number of infections among young people is a cause for concern, it signals the need to review old awareness methods and make them more effective, modern, and youth-friendly. The role of the family is crucial in this entire matter. Confident communication, accurate information, and emotional support with children and adolescents can protect them from risky situations. If families themselves make this topic taboo, young people will be forced to seek information from inappropriate sources. Silence is never the answer; appropriate communication at the right time is the foundation of safety. We must also remember that a person living with HIV is a normal citizen just like us. They need treatment, respect, and support, not scorn. The more sensitive society becomes, the more people will come forward without fear for testing and treatment. This is also the most effective way to prevent infection. The need today is to transform higher education campuses not only into centers of knowledge, but also centers of health, awareness, and life skills. Scientific thinking, responsible behavior, regular health checkups, and a sensitive social environment can only address this challenge. Ultimately, the challenge of HIV teaches us that modern education cannot be limited to degrees. Life-saving knowledge is equally essential. If we break the silence today and embrace awareness, dialogue, and a scientific approach, not only will infection prevention be possible, but we will also build a society that sees people as human beings, not diseases. This is the need of the hour and the most important step towards a healthy, safe, and compassionate India.

WHAT THE US-IRAN CONFLICT REVEALS ABOUT THE FUTURE OF WARFARE

The current phase of the conflict involving Iran may ultimately be remembered less for its military operations than for what it reveals about the changing nature of warfare. Despite the employment of sophisticated intelligence, precision strikes, overwhelming air power and sustained economic pressure, the conflict has yet to produce a decisive political outcome. Instead, it has settled into a pattern of calibrated escalation, deterrence, diplomacy and strategic signalling. Far from being an anomaly, the conflict appears to reinforce one of the defining strategic realities of the twenty-first century: overwhelming military superiority no longer guarantees decisive political victory. To understand why, it is necessary to look back to the Second World War. That conflict represented the culmination of the age of industrial warfare. Leaders such as Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt fought in circumstances where national survival was at stake. Victory demanded the mobilisation of entire societies, economies and industries. Strategic bombing, naval blockades, prolonged campaigns of attrition and the full commitment of national resources were regarded as necessary instruments of war. The human cost was unprecedented. An estimated 70 to 85 million people lost their lives. Entire cities were devastated, and civilians became part of the battlefield itself. Wartime famines, including the Bengal famine of 1943, illustrated how conflict, disrupted supply chains and policy decisions could combine to produce catastrophic humanitarian consequences. Such immense suffering was endured because the war was perceived as existential. Defeat was simply not an option. Paradoxically, that devastation also created the foundations of a new international order. Germany and Japan were comprehensively defeated. Their political systems were reconstructed. Under General Douglas MacArthur, Japan underwent sweeping constitutional and economic reforms. Europe was rebuilt through the Marshall Plan. At the global level, the victorious Allies laid the foundations of the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions, creating a political and economic framework that would underpin decades of relative stability and unprecedented global growth. This post-war order was possible because three exceptional conditions existed simultaneously: decisive military victory, the collapse of defeated states and unparalleled American economic and strategic dominance. Those conditions no longer exist. Today's conflicts unfold in a fundamentally different environment. Nuclear weapons impose limits on escalation that did not exist in 1945. Modern societies are far less willing to accept large-scale military or civilian casualties. International humanitarian law has evolved significantly, while instant global communications ensure that civilian suffering is visible around the world in real time. Economic interdependence means that prolonged wars rapidly disrupt energy markets, trade, finance and supply chains far beyond the immediate theatre of conflict. Military force remains indispensable, but it now operates alongside cyber operations, economic sanctions, technological competition, intelligence, information campaigns and proxy conflicts. The traditional distinction between war and peace has become increasingly blurred, replaced by continuous strategic competition across multiple domains. The objective is no longer the unconditional surrender of an adversary but the management of escalation while preserving strategic advantage. The experiences of Iraq and Afghanistan demonstrated that battlefield success does not necessarily translate into enduring political settlements. The current conflict involving Iran appears to reinforce the same lesson. Military operations can impose costs, degrade capabilities and strengthen deterrence. They cannot, by themselves, guarantee the political transformation that followed the Allied victories in 1945. For India, this transformation carries important strategic implications. India's future security will depend not only on military capability but also on economic resilience, technological innovation, industrial capacity and institutional strength. Maritime security in the Indian Ocean, energy resilience, secure supply chains, cyber capability and technological self-reliance are becoming integral components of national power. Equally important, India operates in a world where another 1945 moment is unlikely. No single power today possesses the authority or dominance to reshape the international system as the United States and its allies did after the Second World War, when they established the United Nations.

MEXICAN INFLUENCER SHOT DEAD DURING LIVESTREAM

A Mexican influencer, César Gastélum, has been shot dead while livestreaming on TikTok. Gastélum was filming with two friends outside a fast food restaurant in Tres Ríos, in the northern city of Culiacán, on Tuesday evening when two men on a motorbike drove up to him and one shot him at close range. He had more than half a million followers on TikTok and mainly uploaded comedy videos. It is not the first time a social media influencer has been killed in Mexico. Last year, 23-year-old Valeria Márquez was shot dead at a beauty salon while she was livestreaming on TikTok. On the livestream, Gastélum and his friends were wearing bright orange coats and bags typically used by delivery drivers. Local media reported that their outfits originally led police to believe that the victim was a delivery driver, but officials were later alerted to his identity. Police and forensic experts cordoned off the area and are examining the cartridge casings and CCTV footage for any clues. No arrests have so far been made and the two people on the motorbike fled the scene. It is not yet clear whether Gastélum had received any threats. On his Instagram account he often shared pictures of his travels and nights out, or posing in front of luxury cars. In one of his posts, he could be seen at the grave of Leobardo Aispuro, an influencer known as "El Gordo Peruci". Aispuro was shot dead in December 2024, in a killing which police said may have been linked to the rivalry between two warring factions of the Sinaloa cartel. Violence in the state of Sinaloa, of which Culiacán is the capital, has spiralled since the two factions - Los Chapitos and La Mayiza - fell out in September 2024.

■ Trump says Iran will be 'hit very hard' if Hormuz Strait not open soon as oil prices fall

Left-wing political outsider wins Democratic Senate primary in Michigan

Left-wing political outsider Abdul El-Sayed is projected to win the Democratic Senate primary in Michigan, which exposed bitter divisions over the party's direction. The former public health official is on course to beat moderate four-term Democratic congresswoman Haley Stevens, according to CBS News, the BBC's US partner. El-Sayed voiced support for progressive causes like universal healthcare and abolishing US Immigration and Customs Enforcement. He also called for ending unconditional US military aid to Israel. If officially confirmed as the primary's winner, he will face Republican and Trump ally Mike Rogers, in November's midterm elections. The son of Egyptian immigrants would be the first Muslim US senator if he wins in November. "The movement to get money out of politics, put money in your pocket, and pass Medicare for All is a big movement," El-Sayed said on Wednesday, echoing a familiar refrain he had used on the campaign trail. He vowed to support constituents "if you supported me or you did not support me, if you voted for Vice President [Kamala]

Harris in 2024 or you voted for Donald Trump". "I want to congratulate Abdul El-Sayed on winning the Democratic nomination for US Senate," Stevens said in a statement. "He is a doctor, a community health official, a Rhodes Scholar, and a dedicated Michigander. I am proud to offer my support as he takes on Mike Rogers in the general election." The November midterm elections will determine the balance of power in Washington for the last two years of President Donald Trump's time in office. Trump declared the Michigan Senate result "Great news for the Republican Party". In his post on Truth Social, Trump referred to the Democratic Party as the "Democrats", and claimed their "crazy policies will only get worse!" After a bruising and sometimes bitter campaign, El-Sayed hinted at bridge-building when he addressed supporters on Tuesday night, before the outcome was known. "Whatever happens tonight, we have a responsibility to ensure that we unite, unite to make sure that [Republican] Mike Rogers never sees the inside of the US Senate."

Waste workers help winner find binned €1m lottery ticket in Italy

A lottery player who accidentally binned a 1m (£857,158) winning-ticket may be the luckiest person in Italy after refuse workers found the missing slip. The anonymous player disposed of the ticket in a shop in Bitonto, southern Italy, after checking their numbers and being told it was "non-payable". The person only realised they threw away a winning ticket after a relative pointed out the numbers they always played had been drawn. It sparked a two-day search through a "mountain of waste" which had been collected by a bin lorry, the head of the refuse company, Roberto Nicola Toscano, told Italian news agency Ansa. "This story is nothing short of miraculous," he added. Recounting the story, he said the mix-up happened because the "non-payable" message appears when the prize is too high to be paid out by the shop. When the player returned home, their family reportedly pointed out their favourite numbers - 2, 4, 8, 10, and 51 - had been drawn. "It was then that they realised the misunderstanding. So they all went to the shop together and discovered that the tickets had been thrown away and collected by one of our operators," said Toscano, director of SANB who handles waste collection in the area. After the player made contact with the refuse company, the bin lorry was located before its contents were compacted for disposal. "Luckily it was a Sunday, otherwise the load would have already ended up in landfill," the boss told Italian broadcaster TGCOM24. The truck was then escorted to a special site where the search began to find the "small piece of paper hidden in a mountain of waste". Finally after a two-day search, the winning ticket was reportedly found by a waste worker on Tuesday morning, with the workers cheering as if they had won the prize themselves. "It was in a hole-ridden bag along with other damaged tickets: this was one of the few intact ones," Toscano told Ansa. The cost of the recovery operation is set to be charged to the winner, who had previously signed a declaration promising to cover the search costs. The luck even rubbed off when Toscano and his colleagues bought a scratch card as a joke. They won 50 (£43).

UN RIGHTS CHIEF ALARMED BY RISE IN IRAN EXECUTIONS SINCE MARCH

The UN human rights chief has said he is alarmed by the rise in executions in Iran, with capital punishment continuing to be used "to instil fear among the population and suppress dissent". Volker Türk said at least 56 people had been executed on national security-related charges since 19 March, including 27 in cases linked to January's nationwide anti-government protests. More than 100 others were at risk of execution on similar charges, while executions for drug-related offences were also continuing at an alarming rate, he added. Iran is thought to be the world's second-most prolific executioner after China. Last year, it put to death at least 2,159 people, according to Amnesty International. The human rights group said that was the highest figure on record since 1981 and included 45 executions of suspected dissidents on national security-related charges. Activists have warned that Iranian authorities might make greater use of executions against their opponents following January's protests, during which thousands of demonstrators were killed and tens of thousands were detained, and the US-Israeli war with Iran on 28 February. In a statement, Türk urged Iranian authorities to halt all executions and move toward the abolition of the death penalty, saying that "such punishment has no place in our world". As well as expressing alarm at the rise in executions, he said the persistent lack of fair trial and due process guarantees was "deeply troubling", with confessions allegedly obtained under torture and other ill-treatment. "Several executions have reportedly been carried out in public. Some have reportedly been carried out only weeks after arrest," he added. "Twelve defendants were reportedly sentenced to death following a single three-hour closed-door hearing." There was no immediate comment from the Iranian government. But it has previously defended the use of the death penalty, saying it is limited to only "the most severe crimes". On Monday, Iran's judiciary said it executed two men convicted of spying for Israel. Omid Behzad and Pouria Safvat were accused of sending coordinates, images and other information on sensitive military, law enforcement and security sites to Israel's Mossad foreign intelligence service during the current war and the 12-day conflict in June 2025, according to the judiciary's Mizan news agency. Last week, 19-year-old Arvin Kheirkhahan was executed after being convicted of the security-related charge of "enmity against God" over his alleged role in January's unrest, Iran's Human Rights Activists News Agency (HRANA) reported, citing a source close to his family. DRONE CARRYING EXPLOSIVES FOUND AT GERMAN AIRPORT, POLICE SAY

A drone carrying an explosive device has been found at a German airport, police say. A robot was deployed at Leipzig/Halle Airport after the device was spotted by an employee near Ukrainian cargo planes overnight, according to Saxony police. A second unidentified object also collided with a cargo aircraft near the same airport. Minor damage was detected on the aircraft after it landed in Hanover. German airports are on high alert following a series of unauthorised drone flights in recent months over sensitive sites including military bases, airports, energy terminals, seaports and logistics companies. Police have warned that the overflights could have been organised by Russian agents. Leipzig/Halle Airport in eastern Germany is used by the Germany military and Nato allies for the transport of military goods and also serves as a base for Ukraine's Antonov Airlines - which carry most of the country's aerial cargo. It is also a major hub for the logistics group, DHL. A police spokesman told the BBC that the explosive-laden object had been spotted close to parked Antonov planes. The detonator was removed from the explosive device.

PAKISTAN RESTRICTS INTERNATIONAL MEDIA REPORTING

Pakistani authorities have imposed new restrictions on international media reporting in the country in a move that has drawn sharp criticism from journalist organisations. Anyone working for foreign media, including Pakistani nationals, must now seek permission to report from anywhere except the cities of Islamabad, Karachi and Lahore. The restrictions would leave on-the-ground reporting by foreign media at the discretion and timing of the authorities across most of Pakistan, which currently ranks 153 out of 180 on the World Press Freedom Index. "These guidelines are tantamount to choking international media in an increasingly shrinking space," said political commentator Mustafa Nawaz Khokhar. Limitations on the media are not new, but local media are often subject to more pressure than international outlets. "The public looks at the international media for independent reporting," Khokhar says. "Placing restrictions simply creates more room for disinformation and spread of fake news." Pakistan's government said the guidelines, issued on Sunday, are not to restrict media but to "provide an administrative mechanism" to verify media, facilitate access and co-ordinate reporting requirements. The new rules - called the Foreign Media Facilitation Guidelines, 2026 - do not set out how long gaining permission, known as a No Objection Certificate or NOC, can take. Foreign journalists already require NOCs and can wait months for permissions or never receive an answer - severely curtailing their ability to report breaking news stories from the ground in the country of 240 million people. International media outlets often therefore rely on Pakistani nationals, who can travel more easily to - or are permanently based in - cities like Peshawar or Quetta, to verify information. Under these new guidelines, any contributor, including freelancers, living outside the three specified cities would require NOC permissions to cover a story. "These are ridiculous restrictions and are totally unacceptable," said Zaffar Abbas, editor of Dawn newspaper.

Ajinkya Rahane Reveals Ben Stokes' Advice That Changed His Career: "We Played Together In IPL"

Former India captain Ajinkya Rahane recently called time on his illustrious cricketing career that spanned nearly two decades last week. With 85 Tests and more than 100 caps in white-ball cricket, and over 8,000 international runs, Rahane leaves behind a legacy full of cherishable moments. Despite enjoying a decorated career, Rahane's journey had its ups and downs, like that of any other international cricketer. While social media scrutiny wasn't as relentless as it is today, Rahane spilled the beans on how he stayed focused during tours and, in general, avoided the gaze of trolls. Reflecting on his career, Rahane revealed the advice of former England captain Ben Stokes, who retired from international cricket last month, which helped him switch off the outside noise. "I delete all the social media apps when the series is on. But no one advises us to, and that's just my own advice to myself. I remember Ben Stokes advising me not to see social media in 2017 when we played together in the IPL. Creating a routine helped me individually deal with this once I am in my room. Just things like watching something on Netflix or some other app, reading a book, chatting to family, and ironing my clothes for the next day," said Rahane on Stick to Cricket podcast. Rahane also insisted that having a designated social media team in this era helped him focus during tours. He also admitted the temptation to scroll through social media after a good game or tour, but stressed the need to avoid unnecessary interactions. "I have my team who manage everything. Whatever I've to post, I generally send them the photo, and if there is anything to be approved, they'll send it to me.

Carlos Alcaraz Withdraws From Cincinnati Masters With Wrist Injury

World number two Carlos Alcaraz has withdrawn from the ATP Cincinnati Masters with the wrist injury that has sidelined him since April, organizers said Tuesday. The Spaniard will not defend his title at the tournament that starts on August 13 because of "an ongoing wrist injury." "We know Carlos is doing everything he can to get back to playing tournaments as soon as possible," tournament director Bob Moran said in a statement. "We wish him the best with his recovery and look forward to welcoming him back to Cincinnati in the future." The move will spark concerns over Alcaraz's upcoming title defense at the US Open, the final Grand Slam of the year, which starts on August 30 in New York. The elite hard court tournament in Cincy is the last major tune-up for the Open. The 23-year-old Alcaraz has already opted out of the French Open and Wimbledon this year as he recovers from the injury suffered in the first round of the Barcelona Open in April.

The 49-year-old multi-time WWE champion, who also had stints in the Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) and New Japan Pro Wrestling (NJPW) as a part of an illustrious combat sport career, confirmed his retirement on 'The Pat McAfee Show' on Tuesday, as per ESPN. Appearing on the show, Lesnar confirmed that his outing against Femi would be the last of his career. He also admitted that he felt he was done as an in-ring performer following a loss to Femi at WrestleMania 42 in April, having removed and left his gloves and boots in the ring, but he decided to return, defeating the 28-year-old in May at 'Clash in Italy' before finally losing to the rising star in a 'Hell in a Cell' match at SummerSlam. Following the match, he raised Oba's hand as a sign of respect, hailing him as 'the future of WWE', while calling himself 'the past'. "I am here today to let the world know that I am retired," Lesnar said at the show as quoted by ESPN. "Saturday was a very emotional day for me. It was kind of weird. When Oba Femi slammed me at WrestleMania, I said, 'I cannot do this anymore. I think I am done.' But the business called, and I still had some fuel in the tank." "Saturday, for Brock Lesnar, that is it. That is it for me in the squared circle and everything else," he signed off. Lesnar's announcement marks the end of one of the greatest careers in all of combat sports. The 49-year-old was a two-time All-American and a two-time Big Ten champion and also captured the NCAA Division I national championship in wrestling while representing the University of Minnesota in 200 before signing with WWE. Ajit Agarkar's Job Under Threat Over Rohit Sharma Saga, Could Be Replaced By India Great: Report

The tenure of Ajit Agarkar, the selection committee chief in the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI), might be coming to an end in a month's time, with reports suggesting that the top bosses in the board are planning to replace him with VVS Laxman, the current head of the Centre of Excellence in Bengaluru. Agarkar's contract was set to end in June 2026, but he was given a three-month extension by the board. It was expected that the former pace bowler would get another extension that would keep him in the chair until the conclusion of the 2027 ODI World Cup. However, the last few months have seen the situation get complex, especially with the drama around Rohit Sharma's future in India's ODI team. It was reported that the three-match ODI series against England would be Rohit's last. According to a report in Dainik Jagran, the Agarkar-led selection committee had even spoken to the Gautam Gambhir-led team management about leaving Rohit out of subsequent assignments.

However, an unexpected twist occurred when news broke that the third ODI between India and England at Lord's would be Rohit's last. The Hitman went on to slam a century in that final match, putting both the selectors and the team management on the back foot. Not long after the leak ahead of the third ODI, BCCI Secretary Devajit Saikia also released a statement, apparently without speaking to Chief Selector

Agarkar, asserting that Rohit will play as long as he is part of the team's plans. "Rohit is a regular member of the Indian ODI team, and he will continue to represent the country as long as he is in the scheme of things. In other words, the Lord's ODI won't be his last match," Saikia told PTI. Brett Lee Finally Speaks Out On Speculation About Dating Preity Zinta

Brett Lee, one of the greatest cricketers in history, has finally spoken up about the rumours of being in a romantic relationship with Bollywood actress Preity Zinta in the past. Lee joined the Kings XI Punjab (now Punjab Kings) franchise, co-owned by Zinta in the Indian Premier League (IPL), in 2008. He stayed with the franchise until 2010 before being bought by the Kolkata Knight Riders in 2011. Over the years, speculations of romance brewing between the two surfaced multiple times, but the Australian pace-bowling legend never addressed them. However, in an interview, Lee has finally opened up on the speculations, saying he and Zinta were only friends and still are. "Here's your scoop: I never dated a Bollywood actress. Preity Zinta and I were, and still are, great friends. She was the boss of the Punjab team back then. She's an incredibly smart woman, and I have a lot of respect for her," he told Bombay Times. "Stories like that never bothered me because I always knew the truth. People can speculate all they want, but I never let it affect me," he further said. While Lee remained silent for about two decades, Zinta did open up on the speculations in 2010. She had said: "I think being romantically linked to Brett every year is outdated and stale news now! So sorry to say, folks, NO NEWS here! FRIENDS yeesss." On the personal front, Brett Lee married Elizabeth Kemp in 2006, and the two had a son together. However, cracks started to develop in their relationship not long after the marriage, and they parted ways just two years later. They finalised their divorce in 2009. In 2014, Lee tied the knot with Lana Anderson, with whom he has two kids.

Selectors Felt 'Betrayed' Over BCCI's Rohit Sharma Stand, Cracks Emerge: Report

Veteran batter Rohit Sharma left everyone stunned with his century against England in the third and final ODI of the three-match series last month. The match was particularly significant as reports had suggested it could be Rohit's final appearance for Team India. According to those reports, the selectors and team management had informed the right-handed batter that he was not part of their plans for the 2027 ODI World Cup. However, the speculation was put to rest two days before the third ODI when BCCI secretary Devajit Saikia publicly confirmed that the former captain remained firmly in the team's plans. A new report by Dainik Jagran has now claimed that the episode surrounding Rohit's century and Saikia's statement has created tension between the Ajit Agarkar-led selection committee and the top bosses in the BCCI. According to the report, the selectors and some members of the team management were convinced that Rohit should not be part of India's plans for the 2027 World Cup. However, following Saikia's remarks, the selection committee reportedly felt "betrayed", believing that the BCCI secretary had changed his stance in response to pressure on social media. The report further stated that several selectors still believe India will struggle to win the 2027 ODI World Cup if Rohit is included in the squad. Agarkar's tenure The tenure of Ajit Agarkar as chairman of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) selection committee could be nearing its end, with reports suggesting that the board's top brass is considering VVS Laxman as a potential replacement. Agarkar's contract was originally due to expire in June 2026, but he was granted a three-month extension by the BCCI.

Aryna Sabalenka Tops Moyuka Uchijima In WTA Toronto Opener

World number one Aryna Sabalenka returned to her hard court comfort zone with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Japanese qualifier Moyuka Uchijima in the WTA 1000 in Toronto on Tuesday. It was a solid start for Sabalenka in her bid to bounce back after falling in the quarter-finals at Roland Garros and in the round of 16 at Wimbledon. The Belarusian star has dominated on hard courts this year and on Tuesday notched her 24th win in 25 matches on the surface. The lone defeat was her loss to Elena Rybakina in the Australian Open final. Now she's eyeing a North American hard court run that could include a threepeat at the US Open, the final Grand Slam of the year that starts on August 30 in New York. "I'm happy with the performance, I'm happy with the fight," Sabalenka said after her second-round opener. "I knew going into this match I might struggle a little bit after a little break, but I was ready for that. "I'm happy that mentally and physically I was ready to go." Sabalenka didn't have it all her own way against the 111th-ranked Uchijima. But she emerged from an exchange of five breaks of serve that opened the second set with a 3-2 lead and made the advantage stand up. She held for 4-2, and when she had her first chance to serve it out she pounced, sealing the match on her second match point with an overhead winner. Uchijima had surprised the Belarusian in the opening game of the match, clawing back from 40-15 down to break on the way to a quick 2-0 lead. But Sabalenka won the next five games and polished off the opening set with a confident hold of serve. In the third round she'll face China's Zhang Shuai, who was leading Jelena Ostapenko 6-0, 4-0 when the Latvian retired from their match.

SPORTS MINISTRY LAUDS SAI AFTER INDIA'S SUCCESSFUL CWG 2026 CAMPAIGN

It threw up challenges, both sporting and administrative, validated major plans but also highlighted the need to course correct in few aspects. The just-concluded Commonwealth Games was akin to a mid-term exam for the Sports Authority of India (SAI). The nodal body under the Sports Ministry that is responsible for conducting national camps, overseeing selection, and monitoring the training and competition calendar of athletes, is celebrating the "more than expected" medal count of 39, which includes 13 gold and 17 silver medals. At the same time, its push for greater support to swimming and cycling got a reality check at the Games thanks to medal-less and underwhelming show. In addition, logistical issues such as boxers and judo players not receiving their baggage on time after arriving in Glasgow have been noted as administrative concerns to be addressed going forward. "The brightest aspect of this tally is the judo performance (two gold, one silver and one bronze). Yes, swimming and cycling remain work in progress and it is still time before we become truly competitive. Boxing is another positive. You might say the competition shrunk this time but that's not our fault. We fight whoever is in front of us," acknowledged a senior SAI official in a conversation with PTI. "In weightlifting we should have got may be two gold medals instead of one (Mirabai Chanu)." India participated in 12 judo events in Glasgow and won four medals - two gold, one silver and one bronze, compared to three medals, minus any gold, in 2022. This was despite the fact that a couple of judokas had to be withdrawn due to anti-doping offences prior to the team's departure. The boxing contingent topped the medal tally with a haul of 10 medals, including seven gold and three silver. "There are some administrative issues as well. Some course correction is needed on that front, like athletes not receiving their baggage. Perhaps it would be a good idea to have a points person with the team, specifically instructed to handle these things in future Games.
