Telangana pushes for SCCL joint venture with Hutti gold mines

Hyderabad (TSIT):

Telangana Deputy Chief Minister Mallu Bhatti Vikramarka on Friday, August 28, directed officials to explore a joint venture between SCCL and Karnataka's Hutti Gold Mines. Vikramarka, on the second day of his visit to Karnataka's gold mining areas, visited the Hutti and Uti gold mines in Raichur district. He inspected the various stages of gold production, from ore extraction to refining, a press release said. He said combining the technical expertise of state-owned Singareni Collieries Company Limited with Hutti Gold Mines' experience in gold mining could help increase domestic production.

He suggested combining this expertise with Singareni's capabilities in mineral exploration and mining. He directed Singareni officials to prepare an action plan for collaboration between the two organisations in gold exploration, mining, extraction, processing and refining, as well as the adoption of modern technologies, deployment of technical experts and human-resource training.

He emphasised the need to reduce dependence on gold imports and increase domestic production. A Hutti-Singareni partnership could help boost gold production, promote the use of advanced technologies, create local employment and contribute to economic development, he said. Vikramarka inspected the production unit, ore processing plant and electrowinning facility at Hutti Gold Mines. Officials informed him that the Hutti project produces an average of two to four kg of gold a day.

From the viewpoint of the Uti open-cast gold mine, he observed the extraction of gold-bearing ore and the areas where mining was taking place. He enquired about the depth at which the ore was being extracted.

Later, he inspected gold ore mining operations at the Uti underground mine. Vikramarka directed officials to expedite mineral exploration using advanced technologies to assess the quantity and quality of mineral deposits in Karnataka's Devadurga gold and copper block, which was secured by Singareni through an auction.

The Devadurga block's proximity to Hutti Gold Mines presents a major opportunity, he said, directing officials to make use of Hutti's technical expertise for the project.

India likely to co-produce Javelin Anti-Tank Missile in future

New Delhi, Aug 28 : The United States is upbeat about India's decision to purchase the Javelin anti-tank guided missile system. Sergio Gor, the US Ambassador to India, has said that the system could be co-produced in India in the future.

"The United States welcomes the Indian Army's signing of a Letter of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) for the purchase of the Javelin anti-tank guided missile system through the US Foreign Military Sales process. The milestone reflects the enduring partnership between the US and Indian Armed Forces. It opens the door for future collaboration between the US and Indian defence industries," the US Embassy in India posted.

"This agreement reflects a defence partnership that is growing deeper, more capable, and more consequential," Gor was quoted as saying by the embassy.

On X, Gor posted: "BIG news! India plans to buy the battle-tested Javelin anti-tank system. Just as @secwar highlighted at the May 2026 Shangri-La Dialogue, this is a great step forward in the US-India defence relationship and opens the door to co-production possibilities. The engagement between our two nations is at record-high levels!"

"The Javelin agreement demonstrates the depth of US support for the Indian Army and creates new opportunities for our defence industries to work together. We see tremendous potential for future cooperation that strengthens the defence industrial bases of both countries," the embassy quoted the ambassador as saying.

Vijayawada, August 28, 2026: The Andhra Pradesh Joint Action Committee (APJAC) Amaravati on Friday announced a phased agitation demanding the immediate resolution of 29 major issues concerning State government employees, including appointment of the Pay Revision Commission (PRC), announcement of Interim Relief (IR), release of pending Dearness Allowance (DA) dues and payment of other financial benefits. Addressing a State-level conference held at the Makinenni Basavapunniah Auditorium near Raghavayya Park in Vijayawada, APJAC Amaravati Chairman Bopparaju Venkateswarlu said employees had been repeatedly approaching the government through representations, discussions and meetings, but there was considerable delay in resolving their issues.

He said the history of employees’ organisations showed that several rights had been secured only through democratic struggles. The 11th Pay Revision Commission, he recalled, was achieved after sustained agitations, including the “Chalo Vijayawada” programme. Bopparaju said the present agitation was not against the government but was aimed at securing the legitimate rights and financial benefits of employees. He appealed to the government not to test the patience of employees any further.

The APJAC leader said

the State-level conference discussed the future of employees and teachers in detail and decisions were taken democratically after obtaining the opinions of district-level leadership. He said the State leadership would implement the agitation programme based on the decisions taken by the districts, keeping in view the interests of nearly 13 lakh employees. APJAC State Secretary General Palishetti Damodara Rao said employees were only seeking financial benefits legally due to them and the implementation of assurances made to employees in the election manifesto of the coalition government.

He said employees were seeking payment of pending benefits relating to PRC, DA, surrender leave, gratuity, leave encashment and additional quantum of pension, among others. He urged Chief Minister N. Chandrababu Naidu to ensure that the money due to employees was paid without further delay.

Phased agitation announced

As part of the first phase, APJAC will submit an agitation notice to the Chief Secretary on August 28. From August 31 to September 11, employees will undertake a series of programmes.

On August 31, district units will meet Collectors through the PGRS programme and submit notices regarding the agitation. They will also inform the Collectors about the proposed “Work to Rule” programme from September 15.

On September 1, employees will display the message “CM Sir, Give Us Our Money” as their mobile phone display picture. From September 1 to 5, employees will wear black badges while attending their duties.

From September 2 to 8, a “Hand to Hand” campaign will be conducted by visiting divisional and district offices and mobilising employees. Lunch-hour protests will be held from September 3 to 5.

On September 11, round-table meetings will be organised at all district headquarters with representatives of APJAC-affiliated organisations, AITUC and CITU to discuss the next phase of the agitation.

Work to Rule from

September 15

The second phase of the agitation will be held from September 15 to 26. Employees will observe “Work to Rule” during this period and discharge their duties strictly according to government rules and prescribed working hours, without taking on additional workload. From September 15 to 22, employees will use WhatsApp, Facebook, Instagram and other social media platforms to publicise the agitation through photographs and reels. Between September 15 and 25, APJAC leaders will meet MLAs, MPs, MLCs and other public representatives and submit memoranda explaining the employees’ demands.

On September 17, employees will organise protests wearing black scarves at major junctions at district and divisional levels and form human chains carrying the slogan “CM Sir, Give Us Our Money.” On September 23, dharnas will be organised at Collectorates and RDO offices with placards highlighting the major demands. On September 26, employees and their family members will hold dharnas at Collectorate and RDO offices demanding payment of their pending dues.

The APJAC leadership said the third phase would include intensified programmes such as multi-zone conferences, non-cooperation programmes, relay hunger strikes, “Chalo Vijayawada” and an indefinite strike. A united agitation programme involving other organisations would be announced during the second phase.

AITUC, CITU extend support

AITUC State president R. Ravindranath, State general secretary S. Venkatasubbayya and CITU State general secretary A.V. Nageswara Rao extended their support to the APJAC agitation.

They said employees were not making unreasonable demands and were only seeking implementation of assurances made before the elections and payment of financial benefits due to them. They assured that AITUC and CITU would extend direct and indirect support to the employees’ struggles from the village level to the State level.

Representatives of electricity and RTC employees’ organisations also expressed solidarity with the agitation. AP State Electricity Employees Union-327 State senior working president Y.N.V. Suresh Kumar and RTC Employees Union State general secretary G.V. Narasayya announced their support.

Among those who participated in the Amaravati Championship, about 65% were students from government schools and government educational institutions, while more than 80% of the sportspersons came from rural areas. The Collector said the championship has emerged as a unique platform to unearth hidden sporting talent in rural areas and to identify students studying in government educational institutions and provide them opportunities at higher levels. Sportspersons who performed well here will be encouraged and sent to state, national and international level competitions in the future.

Embracing equality and humanity in our lives is the true Tribute to Babasaheb Ambedkar: Krishna Byre Gowda Bengaluru : The true way to honour Dr. B.R. Ambedkar is not merely by garlanding his statue or raising slogans in his name, but by embracing equality and human values in our everyday lives, Greater Bengaluru Development Minister Krishna Byre Gowda. Speaking at the Dr. B.R. Ambedkar and Civic Workers' Day 2026 programme organised by the Greater Bengaluru Authority (GBA) at the Dr. Rajkumar Glass House at its central office premises, the Minister said society must reject attempts to divide people in the name of caste and religion and instead uphold the principle that all human beings are equal.Mr. Byre Gowda inaugurated the programme after paying floral tributes and garlanding the statue of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar at the GBA central office.

Ambedkar belonged to all communities Addressing the gathering, the Minister said Dr. Ambedkar could not be confined to any one caste or community. He was a source of inspiration for the advancement and welfare of all sections of society and was a strong advocate of human values. "The tradition of placing humanity above divisions has existed in our country since the time of the Buddha. We must recognise that all human beings, who breathe the same air and depend on the same water, are fundamentally equal," he said. He noted that great leaders and thinkers including Basavanna, Mahatma Gandhi and Kuvempu had also championed the values of equality and humanism. "Even today, we have not been able to achieve complete equality in society. If we merely garland Ambedkar's statue and raise slogans in his name, without practising equality in our own lives, we cannot claim to have truly honoured him," Byre Gowda said. He called for eliminating notions of superiority and inferiority from society and cautioned against attempts to divide people along caste and religious lines. "Only when we genuinely embrace the principle that everyone is equal can we build a truly egalitarian society," he said.

"Summer" music in the air..!

Bengaluru: Summer is over and the rainy season has arrived. But music lovers are in the air of summer. The reason for this is the air of the recently released single song 'Summer'. Seven years ago, Advik, who gave the super hit song 'Ninna Gungalli..', is back. This re-entry has received a wonderful reception on social media.

This is very new for Kannada..!

There is no shortage of album songs in Kannada. But this one is not like any other song that has come so far. The Kannada mirror has been put on the Western style. According to Advik, who is everything for this song, it is in the Afropop and Amapiano genre. Afropop uses traditional African background music, and Amapiano uses South African house style. Advik has given the first Kannada single that combines both of these.

'Bisi Bisi' Maniac..!

Maniac is the name of this album. By the way, there is a special reason why young hearts fall for Summer even during the rainy season. Here, the warm bond with the lover is called Summer. According to Advik, "You are so hot" is the only thing that teases you, "If you come to me, it feels like summer."

This is sure to win over all lovers, including Gen G.

Innovation in the filming too

Not only the lyrics and music, but the filming of this song is also innovative. For this reason, the song draws us into summer within a couple of moments of its start. The shooting has been done in the lush surroundings of Udupi's beach and resort. The shadow of the cinematography remains with us. Vamsi, who was recognized as 'Miss Universe Karnataka' last year, has appeared as the female lead. Vamsi is currently acting with Diganth. Thus, Advik has made a comeback with a song that has maintained quality in every way.

A musical journey of 13 songs

There are a total of 13

songs in the Maniac album, including Summer. Each song will tell a story. Thus Each song has its own emotions. Attraction is shown through Summer. The next song is about love, after that, breakup, and so on, like a movie story. All together, this is a 37-minute album. In my opinion, this is Advik's first attempt in Kannada.

Multi-talented Advik

Advik, who is everything for the Maniac album, is definitely a multi-talented talent. It can be said that there is probably no other Kannadigas who has achieved this level of success by learning Western music online.

Dinesh Kallahalli demands action against Revenue and Forest Department officials for illegally grabbing forest land Bengaluru: Social activist Dinesh Kallahalli has requested that disciplinary and criminal action be taken against Revenue and Forest Department officials for illegally grabbing a total of 1,096.79 acres of "Reserved Forest" land in Sandur taluk, Bellary district.

He has written a letter to the Principal Chief Conservator of Forests in this regard, accusing them of committing an illegal act by suddenly removing the "forest" record in 2024 of Somalapur village, Sandur taluk, Choranur Hobli, Bellary district, and calling it a "government's B-Kharabu".

Survey No. If the total 1,096.79 acres of land in 165/A, 165/B, 177/C and 1/B are recorded as "Reserved Forest" in the revenue records, the Assistant Sub-Divisional Officers do not have the power to change the legal status of that land by mutation or cadastral amendment order alone.

However, on January 25, 2024, the Sub-Divisional Officers stated that they have misused their power by committing an illegal act by recording the forest land as government B-Kharabu. The status of a forest cannot be changed without the State Government issuing a proper notification and completing the official process of the Forest Department. Therefore, verification of the original notification, gazette notification and forest settlement documents is essential. Therefore, the lack of any objection, report or legal action against the RTC for changing the land, which was registered as "Regulated Forest" for about 23 years, to

"Government B-Kharabu", indicates departmental negligence, administrative failure and serious lapse in the protection of public forest property, he said. He requested that the correspondence between the Revenue and Forest Departments and the permission documents of the Central Government be seized and a thorough investigation be conducted.

KPSC Scandal: Massive Irregularities Alleged in Rural Development Department Recruitment

Bengaluru : Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy has levelled serious allegations of large-scale irregularities in the selection and recruitment of Assistant Executive Engineer (Grade-I) posts conducted by the Karnataka Public Service Commission (KPSC) when Priyank Kharge was Minister for Rural Development and Panchayat Raj. Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy demanded that Priyank Kharge take responsibility for the alleged recruitment irregularities and resign from the Cabinet immediately.

He alleged that a "Priyank-sponsored system" was operating in the State and described the episode as a case of the watchdog turning into the perpetrator. "Perhaps this is why Priyank Kharge has now taken charge of the Home portfolio, to ensure that the entire matter is buried," he alleged.

At the press conference, Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy released documents related to the allegations, including investigation records and several OMR sheets which, he claimed, showed evidence of tampering using carbon. "Priyank Kharge cannot have it both ways"

Referring to recent statements by Priyank Kharge that the situation was beyond his control and that he would abolish the KPSC if given the authority, Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy said: "I have taken note of his statements. He says, 'We are the ones who make the law.' Yes, you make the law. But on one hand, he makes grand statements about abolishing the KPSC, while on the other, he is protecting IAS officer Gyanendra Gangwar, who was the Controller of Examinations at the time and is facing allegations of involvement in the irregularities in the Assistant Executive Engineer Grade-I recruitment," he alleged.

"On what basis is Priyank Kharge defending officers facing allegations? Does he have no responsibility as a minister?" he asked.

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy also questioned the circumstances surrounding Gangwar's disappearance following Enforcement Directorate (ED) action.

"He disappeared as soon as the ED conducted searches. What is the connection between his disappearance and the Home Minister? That question needs to be answered," he said.

"KPSC irregularities have become endless"

Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy said allegations of irregularities were not confined to one recruitment process.

"There appears to be no end to the irregularities surrounding the KPSC. Even the recruitment of 400 veterinary officers has come under a cloud. A person named Manjunath had alleged that 80 lakh was being fixed as the price for each post," he said.

He said an ED case was registered following the allegations, after which the concerned officer went missing.

"Priyank Kharge initially claimed that the officer had gone to his native place in Lucknow after obtaining Government permission because his father was unwell. He also said the officer had personally called him, informed him about his father's condition and told him that he would return to Bengaluru within two days. He further claimed that the officer had informed his superiors," Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy said, referring to the Home Minister's earlier media statements.

He then pointed to what he described as a contradiction.

"On August 25, the same Home Minister said he did not know where Gyanendra was. If the Home Minister does not know where an officer is, then why is he running the Home Department? On one hand, he says he will clean up the Home Department; on the other, he is accused of protecting Gyanendra," Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy said.

Raksha Bandhan program at Dr. Agrawal Hospital

Bengaluru: Dr. Suneet Agrawal, an ophthalmologist, celebrated Raksha Bandhan festival at Dr. Agrawal Hospital on Langford Road in Shantinagar assembly constituency along with doctors, relatives and children.

Speaking on the occasion, Dr. Suneet Agrawal said that this festival of love and protection between brothers and sisters is not just a thread, it is a promise that "I am with you". If a sister ties Rakhi to her brother wishing him long life and success, it means that the brother promises to protect her throughout his life.

Eye donation, great donation Everyone donates eyes, and after a person dies, his organs will be illuminated for a double life. Everyone should live in harmony like brothers and sisters. We should live as one, then the country will develop.

Can BJP Expand Its Political Footprint In Jadavpur's Left Bastion?

Once upon a time, there were Left Front governments in three states-West Bengal, Tripura and Kerala. We used to say that communism was still alive in these three states and that half a province existed in Jawaharlal Nehru University, or JNU, while the other half existed in Jadavpur University. But eventually, after 50 years, West Bengal was taken over by the BJP. The Left Front ruled Bengal for 34 years, while Mamata Banerjee ruled for 15 years. In Kerala, Congress is now in power, while Tripura is ruled by the BJP. At JNU, after Narendra Modi became Prime Minister in 2014, the political culture of the university also slowly began to change. Swami Vivekananda's statue was installed on the JNU campus, leading to considerable uproar. There was a debate over the installation because Swami Vivekananda was a Hindu sannyasi. Even though he himself spoke about socialism, some ultra-Left students opposed the installation of his statue. The JNU administration has also undergone many changes since the BJP came to power. Even in student elections, although the Left remains dominant, the ABVP has managed to create some space for itself. But today's discussion is not about JNU. It is about the other university of West Bengal, which is now at the centre of a major controversy: Jadavpur University. Before coming to the present controversy, it is worth quickly recalling how Jadavpur University became a Left bastion from the 1960s onwards. Jadavpur University was born out of the Swadeshi movement in 1905. In 1955, the National Council of Education transformed it into a university. But in 1967 and 1970, when the Naxalbari movement was raging in Bengal, Jadavpur University and Presidency College became two of the major centres of Naxal activity in Kolkata. In 1970, unfortunately, the Vice-Chancellor of Jadavpur University, Gopal Sen, was killed by Naxal students because he refused to postpone examinations. That incident firmly established the image of Jadavpur University as a radical university. Then came the long Left Front era, from 1977 to 2011. The CPM ruled Bengal for 34 years. During this period, the student unions of Jadavpur University and the teachers' association, JUTA, came under Left control. Even the famous engineering college's student union, FETSU, was controlled by DSF-the Democratic Students' Front, which was actually an ultra-Left organisation. In the Arts Faculty, FAS and SFI dominated, while in the Science Faculty, WTI, along with independent groups, had a Left-leaning presence. The Trinamool Congress's student wing, TMCP, could never win Jadavpur University, even after Mamata Banerjee came to power in 2011. The TMC made many attempts, but it could not break the Left's hold. Jadavpur is famous for its history of political protest. There were anti-Emergency protests here. In 2007, there were protests against Nandigram. In 2014, the university witnessed the "Hok Kolorob" movement, during which the Vice-Chancellor was kept under siege for around 150 hours following a molestation case. That movement eventually became a national issue. In 2019, BJP Minister Babul Supriyo was also 'gheraoed' at Jadavpur University. The Left has retained control over the hostels. Teachers still have JUTA's dominance.

The Himalayas gave us a brutal reminder this week of what climate change looks like when it stops being a graph and becomes a wall of water, ice, rock, and mud. Across the Nepal-Tibet border, a sudden glacier collapse unleashed a catastrophic flood that tore through communities, roads, bridges, and power infrastructure. Rescue operations are still underway, with at least 482 people confirmed dead so far, and the toll expected to change. But one thing is already clear: this was not an ordinary monsoon flash flood. Early assessments point to an ice-rock avalanche or glacier collapse that turned into a massive debris flow, rather than a conventional glacial lake outburst flood. The US Geological Survey later said the seismic signal first reported as an earthquake was generated by a glacial collapse and debris flow, not by tectonic shaking.

■ THE TIPPING POINT
Scientifically, the distinction matters. Politically and morally, it changes little. The Himalaya is turning into a more unstable landscape, and climate change is making it worse. The Global Tipping Points Report 2025, led by the University of Exeter's Global Systems Institute and more than 160 researchers, says tipping-point risks rise as warming approaches and exceeds 1.5 degrees Celsius. Mountain glaciers, it notes, are among the systems capable of non-linear responses under continued warming. Tipping points do not act alone. Most interactions between the systems assessed are destabilising. One shift can make another more likely, pushing ecological and human systems into cascading risk. The concern, then, goes far beyond the valleys hit this week. A warming glacier does not simply become a smaller glacier. It can become a different kind of threat altogether. As glaciers retreat, meltwater collects in lakes, often held back by unstable walls of ice, rock, and moraine. These lakes can expand quickly. A sudden avalanche, landslide, ice collapse, or breach can release huge volumes of water and sediment downstream. In steep Himalayan valleys, gravity does the rest. A regional analysis of 5,409 Himalayan glacial lakes found both their number and area increasing between 1990 and 2020, with expansion concentrated in parts of the central and eastern Himalaya. Studies of supraglacial lakes tell a similar story of restless ice and water. These are not abstract risks on a map. They are forming above real villages, roads, bridges, hydropower projects, and pilgrimage routes.

■ DIFFERENT CONSEQUENCES
The danger is already built into the landscape. More than 5,000 glacier lakes exist across the region, and work on Himalayan GLOF hazard suggests that a 100-year outburst flood could send peak flows downstream comparable to major monsoon-fed rivers. The glaciers are shrinking too. A Scientific Reports reconstruction of 14,798 Himalayan glaciers found that they had lost at least 40% of their Little Ice Age area, with recent mass-loss rates roughly an order of magnitude faster than the long-term average since then. Climate change does not mean every kind of glacial lake outburst flood will become more frequent in a neat, linear way. A Nature Climate Change study found no statistically significant increase in moraine-dammed GLOFs in the Himalaya since the late 1980s. The terrain, however, is changing: its exposure, triggers, weak points, and consequences. That is a harder problem, and probably the more dangerous one. We are building roads, dams, tunnels, hotels, and settlements in a mountain system that is no longer behaving according to old assumptions. Himalayan valleys are narrow, and they leave little room for engineering arrogance. Traditional climate risk assessment is not built for such nonlinear behaviour. Tipping-point risks involve uncertainty, sudden shifts, and cascading impacts. For South Asia, the stakes are enormous. More than three billion people depend on vulnerable monsoon systems, while Himalayan rivers, glaciers, and mountain ecosystems support farms, towns, hydropower, and economies far downstream.

■ ASKING THE WRONG QUESTIONS
The ritual question after every disaster is whether climate change "caused" it. That is often the wrong question. The better one is whether climate change is making the landscape more capable of producing disasters that were previously rarer, smaller, or easier to manage. Increasingly, the answer is yes. This is the choice before us. Tip the energy system away from fossil fuels. Tip infrastructure planning towards climate resilience. Build real-time glacier and glacial-lake monitoring across borders. Create early-warning systems that actually reach the people living downstream. And stop treating Himalayan valleys as empty spaces waiting for another road, dam, or resort. Regional cooperation, therefore, cannot remain hostage to political weather. Rivers, glaciers, and debris flows do not stop at lines on a map, nor do they wait for diplomatic relations to improve. India, Nepal, Bhutan, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and China need shared glacier data, joint hazard mapping, open hydrological information, and disaster-warning protocols that work even during periods of interstate tension. In the high Himalaya, a warning delayed by suspicion can become a warning delivered too late.

Why India's Bureaucrats Have Learnt That Doing 'Nothing' Is Safer

SHASHI THAROOR

For decades, the analytical discourse surrounding the institutional labyrinth of the Indian state has been confined to a somewhat sterile duality. We are routinely informed that our administrative failures are the byproduct of either the venality of the corrupt or the vacuity of the incompetent. While these elements undeniably persist within the sprawling architecture of our governance, they fail to account for a far more pervasive, yet curiously invisible, quagmire: the vast, silent arena of administrative inaction. In his new book Decision Velocity: Rational Abdication, the Fear Tax, and the Road to Viksit Bharat, retired IPS officer OP Singh, a man who has traversed the arduous landscapes of field policing and the intricate corridors of the Haryana State Secretariat with equal distinction, proposes a startlingly original third lens with which to view our administrative shortcomings. He identifies a phenomenon that is as pervasive as it is pernicious: a "fear tax" not levied by any formal exchequer, but extracted from the lifeblood of the citizen, in the form of unconscious delay. The Risk with Acting Singh's "Fear Tax" is the price society pays when decision-makers conclude that the safest course is not to decide at all. It is the outcome of a sclerotic system where, for the desk-bound officer, the risk of a decisive signature far outweighs the perceived safety of a prolonged silence. As Singh so eloquently demonstrates, our current accountability frameworks audit the traceable action with inquisitorial rigour, yet remain blissfully indifferent to the absent decision. Hence, it's safer not to act at all. This is the central paradox of modern bureaucracy. We have inherited, and subsequently ossified, a colonial-era machinery designed for control, not for velocity. In such a framework, a file that moves is a file that invites scrutiny; a file that rests in a dark corner of a cabinet is a file that poses no threat to its custodian. The result is a Kafkaesque reality where the paralysis of the pen is too often mistaken for the prudence of the professional. This is not merely an inconvenience; it is a profound failure of the social contract. When the state abdicates its responsibility to act, it does not merely delay a project or a permit; it stifles the latent potential of a citizenry waiting for the basic friction of governance to be removed. To understand why this inertia persists, we must venture beyond procedural critiques and into the psychology of the "Iron Frame". The fear of the "audit" - the retrospective, often punitive investigation of administrative decisions, such as happened over the so-called "Coal Scam" that turned out not to be a scam at all - has created an environment of profound risk-aversion. When an officer knows that a decision, however well-intentioned or logical, can be second-guessed by an auditor years later with the benefit of perfect hindsight, especially after a change of government, the most rational individual response is to build a wall of paper, process, and precedent. Rational Abdication This is the "rational abdication" to which Singh refers. It is a survival strategy. If you decide and fail, you are accountable. If you defer, consult a committee, request further studies, or simply wait for a transfer, you are safe. This culture of institutionalised indecision creates a feedback loop: because decision-makers are penalised for errors of commission but rarely for errors of omission, the entire system evolves to prize stability over progress, and caution over courage. As we set our sights on the ambitious horizon of Viksit Bharat 2047, we must recognise that a nation aspiring to become a leading global economic power cannot afford systems that reward hesitation more than initiative. In the global race for capital, technology, and talent, speed is not merely a virtue; it is a competitive necessity. The cost of delay is not just a line item in a budget; it is the opportunity cost of growth. When a policy-induced delay pushes a manufacturing plant to a neighbouring state or another nation, or when a bureaucratic bottleneck forces an entrepreneur to abandon an innovation, the "Fear Tax" has been paid in full by the Indian economy. We are essentially taxing our own development. The "velocity" that Singh advocates is the antidote to this malaise. It requires a fundamental shift in how we define administrative success. We must move from an obsession with compliance to an obsession with outcomes. Mistakes vs Negligence How? It starts with a reconfiguration of accountability. We must evolve our oversight mechanisms to distinguish between honest mistakes (the byproduct of necessary risk-taking in a complex environment) and true negligence. A system that does not tolerate the possibility of a wrong decision will rarely produce a right one. Furthermore, we must incentivise administrative courage. This involves creating "safe spaces" for decision-making, where the rationale for action is documented and respected, and where the institutional culture shifts from "How can I avoid this?" to "How can this be made to happen?" It requires a re-embrace of the professional ethos of the civil servant as an agent of progress, not merely a guardian of rules. Decision Velocity is a clarion call for a new era of administrative clarity.

Rahul Gandhi Is Cleaning House - But At The Cost Of The Congress

Rasheed Kidwai

As Rahul Gandhi remakes the Congress in his image, keeping leaders with decades of patronage, favourable equations, administrative experience, and personal networks at arm's length may spell strategic doom for the party. There is a growing perception within and outside the Congress that some of Rahul's key slogans and campaigns, such as the latest 'smash the patriarchy' crusade, or his support for Gen Z and caste-based reservation, haven't been received well by many among the Congress's old guard, particularly former chief ministers. Privately, these former chief ministers are reportedly concerned that a heavy focus on Gen Z issues might overshadow broader voter priorities, such as inflation and middle-class economic struggles. There is an old rule about the Congress that its present leadership would do well to remember: a Chief Minister never really becomes an ex-Chief Minister. The bungalow may go, the red beacon certainly does, ministers stop returning calls with quite the same urgency, but political capital accumulated through years in office does not disappear with an election defeat or a change of guard. A former Chief Minister leaves behind a web of MLAs, former MLAs, district satraps, contractors, lawyers, business leaders, journalists, bureaucrats, community leaders, religious figures, and party workers who have, at one time or another, received patronage, access, or simply a patient hearing. That is political capital. And the Congress today has an astonishing amount of it lying underutilised. Digvijaya Singh, Kamal Nath, Ashok Gehlot, Bhupinder Singh Hooda, Bhupesh Baghel, Siddaramaiah, Prithviraj Chavan, Charanjit Singh Channi, Sushilkumar Shinde, and Rajinder Kaur Bhattal, to cite some of the most important names, have all governed major states. AK Antony and Shinde, who have now withdrawn from active politics, belong to an even older tradition of Congress elders who could be summoned when a crisis required credibility rather than decibels. These are not identical cases, and it would be inaccurate to say each has been banished. Baghel, for instance, is the All India Congress Committee (AICC) general secretary in charge of Punjab, while Channi has been made chairman of the Punjab Congress campaign committee for the 2027 election. Hooda remains the Leader of Opposition in Haryana. Yet, collectively, these former chief ministers appear increasingly peripheral to the central political grammar being fashioned around Rahul Gandhi. This may be part of a generational transition. But a generational transition badly handled can easily become institutional amnesia. A Congress Tradition Rahul Should Rediscover The Congress once understood the usefulness of its former chief ministers rather well. AK Antony did not cease to matter when he left Thiruvananthapuram; he became Defence Minister, troubleshooter, and one of Sonia Gandhi's most trusted political consciences. Digvijaya Singh, after 10 years as Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister, moved into the AICC apparatus and handled difficult states. Ashok Gehlot spent years as an AICC general secretary in charge of the organisation between his innings in Jaipur. Sushilkumar Shinde went from being Maharashtra Chief Minister to being appointed Governor, Union Power Minister, and eventually, Union Home Minister. Former chief ministers were dispatched as observers because they understood the one language every Congress legislature party speaks fluently: ambition. In 2009, for instance, Antony and Digvijaya were among the senior observers sent to Maharashtra after the Assembly election, while Prithviraj Chavan was sent to Haryana. There was logic to this. Someone who has himself negotiated the Chief Minister's chair knows how to recognise a rebellion before the rebel has drafted his press statement. The present Congress, by contrast, sometimes seems eager to demonstrate that nobody is indispensable. It is an understandable impulse given the many cases of regional barons often holding the organisation hostage. Rahul Gandhi wants a younger, more ideological, less transactional party. The trouble is that elections remain stubbornly transactional affairs. The BJP understands this better than its rhetoric suggests. It may retire veterans, but it carefully harvests their networks before doing so. The Congress, on the other hand, often retires the network with the individual. Reservoirs of Political Capital Take Digvijaya Singh. He can be an exasperating presence for his own party, occasionally giving the BJP a quotation it could never have written as effectively itself. Yet, few Congress leaders know the political geography of Madhya Pradesh better. In the run-up to the 2023 election, he was entrusted with difficult BJP-dominated constituencies and spent months meeting cadres and placating disgruntled workers.

JIO GETS SEBI NOD FOR IPO, SET TO BE INDIA’S BIGGEST LISTING

New Delhi: Jio Platforms Ltd, the digital services arm of billionaire Mukesh Ambani’s Reliance Industries Ltd, has received approval from markets regulator Sebi to proceed with an initial public offering (IPO) that could raise about USD 3.8 billion, paving the way for what would be the country’s largest stock-market listing. The Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi) issued its final observations on Friday, August 28, according to an update on the regulator’s website. Jio Platforms had filed its draft IPO papers in June. 27 crore shares up for grab The company plans to issue up to 27 crore fresh equity shares, equivalent to about 2.9 per cent of its post-issue equity base, according to its draft prospectus. The offering could value Jio Platforms at about USD 137 billion, people familiar with the matter said. At the estimated issue size of about Rs 37,700 crore (USD 3.8 billion), the offering would surpass Hyundai Motor India’s USD 3.3 billion-equivalent listing in 2024 and become the largest IPO in India. A proposed IPO by the National Stock Exchange (NSE), estimated at about Rs 30,000 crore, would also be smaller. The proceeds will be used primarily to repay or prepay, in whole or in part, about Rs 27,500 crore of outstanding borrowings of Reliance Jio Infocomm Ltd, Jio Platforms’ material subsidiary, according to the draft prospectus. The remainder is earmarked for general corporate purposes. The public offering comes as India’s primary market has remained active, with strong participation from retail investors and domestic institutions. More than two dozen IPOs have been announced or launched since July 1, nearly matching the 28 recorded in the first half of 2026. Jio telecom is world’s second-largest mobile operator Jio Platforms houses Reliance’s digital businesses, including its telecommunications operations. Reliance Jio Infocomm had more than 53.3 crore subscribers as of June-end, making it the world’s second-largest mobile operator by subscriber count after China Mobile, according to company data. The business has also expanded into other areas,

Strike One: Jawa All Stars debuts with new expressions of award-winning 42 FJ

Mumbai, 25 August 2026: Jawa Yezdi Motorcycles announces the beginning of Jawa All Stars, a new expression of the values that have long defined Jawa riders. The first strike in this new chapter comes through the Jawa 42 FJ, bringing a fresh and contemporary interpretation of the brand’s neo-classic design language. Over the years, Jawa’s pioneering spirit has resonated with a particular kind of rider, one who values individuality over conformity and confidence over attention. These riders have always shared an unspoken code, expressed not through what they say, but through the choices they make and the way they carry themselves. Jawa All Stars gives this code a name. Inspired by the enduring symbolism of the star as a mark of identity, recognition and belonging, All Stars is not a badge of achievement or superiority, but an insignia for a way of being. A visible mark for an invisible code that connects riders through a shared outlook, regardless of where their individual journeys may take them. Different journeys. Different personalities. One shared spirit. That is the Jawa All Stars code - character, conduct, and courage. The Jawa 42 FJ brings this philosophy to life through a sportier and more contemporary interpretation of the brand’s neo-classic design language. Since its introduction, the Jawa 42 FJ has earned widespread appreciation for its distinctive neo-classic design, strong road presence and engaging performance. The Jawa 42 FJ was awarded the Viewer’s Choice Bike of the Year (2024) and the Viewer’s Choice Motorcycle of the Year (2025), underscoring its widespread appeal among enthusiasts and reinforcing its stature as one of India’s most admired neo-classic motorcycles. Anupam Thareja, Co-founder, Classic Legends, said, “Jawa has always attracted riders who know exactly who they are. They have never followed trends for the sake of it, nor sought attention for making different choices. Over time, we realised there was a shared spirit that connected these riders. Jawa All Stars is our way of recognising and celebrating that spirit. It is a tribute to character, conduct, and courage, the values that have always felt inherently Jawa. The Jawa 42 FJ is the first expression of that philosophy, bringing it to life through contemporary design, performance, and a personality that is unmistakably its own.” The Jawa 42 FJ builds on that approach with segment-first brushed aluminium tank panels, a sporty stance, and a detailed finish, while its 334-cc liquid-cooled DOHC single-cylinder engine produces 29.17 PS at 7,500 rpm and 29.62 Nm at 5,500 rpm, delivering up to 42 percent more power than most 350cc motorcycles in the segment. Modern features include a fully digital instrument cluster and all-LED lighting, blending contemporary functionality with Jawa’s neo-classic character. Its six-speed gearbox, double-cradle frame, 41 mm telescopic front forks and gas-filled twin rear shock absorbers with five-step adjustable preload allow for a balance of stability, control.

NGT PANEL FINDS NVN CONSTRUCTION ENCROACHING ON EDULAKUNTA

Hyderabad: A National Green Tribunal (NGT)-appointed joint committee has found that Edulakunta, located in Survey no 7 of Khanamet, is a government water body and that NVN Constructions has been carrying out construction activity in it. The Telangana High Court had earlier passed a conflicting order saying that NVN Construction’s 13.17-acre property in Kukatpally does not overlap with the lake. According to a Times of India report, the NGT committee has stated that revenue records classify the entire six acre and five guntas in Survey no 7 of Khanamet in Serilingampally mandal as “Edulakunta Shikam Sarkari.” The land is also included in the Section 22A prohibited list. NVN Constructions’ activities fall under Survey no 7, according to a demarcation done by a Mandal surveyor using the Khanamet village map and ground references and a May 25 inspection by Serilingampally revenue officials. After the inspection, the tahsildar had sought assistance from Hyderabad Disaster Response and Asset Protection Agency (HYDRAA), which fenced the land on May 26 and 27. Lake activists file petition The NGT had taken up the case after lake activists, such as Thakur Raj Singh, filed a petition alleging lake bed filling, debris dumping and unauthorised construction on the lake. The applicants had also alleged that water was being pumped out of the lake to facilitate construction. This allegation was not independently established by the NGT committee. High Court observation On July 31, the Telangana High Court had held that NVN Construction’s 13.17-acre property in survey numbers 1003 and 1006 of Kukatpally was a private patta land and did not overlap with Survey no 7.

Cygnnet. One launches AI-First GST Classification and ITC Eligibility Engine to automate enterprise tax compliance at scale

Hyderabad, August 28, 2026: Tax technology provider Cygnnet.One today announced its AI-powered GST Classification and Input Tax Credit (ITC) Eligibility Engine, a solution built to validate and automate the posting of enterprise purchase invoices at scale. Combining GST-aligned rule logic with artificial intelligence, the engine analyzes invoice data, interprets transaction context, and determines ITC eligibility at an invoice level, classifying each transaction into the correct GSTR-3B treatment with an explainable reasoning trail. It automatically flags reverse charge, imports, and blocked credits, cutting manual review while building audit readiness into the process by design.

ADDRESSING A PERSISTENT COMPLIANCE GAP Large enterprises process lakhs of purchase invoices every month across multiple Goods and Services Tax Identification Numbers (GSTINs), business units, and geographies, sourced from Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) systems, scanned documents, PDFs, and vendor emails. Critical GST indicators such as reverse charge, imports, Input Service Distributor (ISD) credits, mixed-use transactions, and blocked credits are often not clearly flagged at source. As a result, tax teams spend disproportionate time reviewing invoices manually, reconciling discrepancies late in the cycle, and defending positions during audits. Despite mature ERP landscapes and years of GST implementation, ITC eligibility and classification decisions at most enterprises are still made invoice by invoice through manual interpretation, an approach that does not scale with volume and exposes organizations to inconsistency, delayed risk discovery, and audit pressure.

HOW THE ENGINE WORKS The workflow begins with the ingestion of raw invoice data into Cygnnet.One’s AI engine. Inside this central processing hub, an AI component performs description and context analysis while working alongside a rule engine module, and the two exchange information iteratively to ensure invoice data is interpreted correctly and in line with GST law and organizational policy. Once processing is complete, the system delivers three outputs built for tax and audit efficiency: accurate ITC eligibility at an invoice level, structured GSTR-3B data ready for regulatory filing, and an audit-ready reasoning trail that gives tax and audit teams a transparent record of how each classification was reached.

KEY CAPABILITIES Invoice-level ITC eligibility: Determines Input Tax Credit eligibility for each invoice rather than applying blanket rules, using a hybrid of GST-aligned logic and AI-driven context analysis.

Automatic risk flagging: Identifies reverse charge, import transactions, and blocked credits without manual intervention. Structured GSTR-3B classification: Converts invoice-level decisions into structured data mapped to the correct GSTR-3B treatment. Explainable reasoning trail: Documents the basis for every classification decision, giving tax and audit teams a transparent, defensible record.

Policy control retained: Rule-based logic ensures alignment with GST law and organizational policy, while enterprises retain full control over policy overrides and risk thresholds.

DRIVING THE NEXT PHASE OF TAX TRANSFORMATION The launch reflects Cygnnet.One’s positioning as an AI-first compliance provider. Manual review effort is significantly reduced, ITC decisions become consistent across entities and periods, and GSTR-3B disclosures are driven by structured, invoice-level data rather than spreadsheets. Most importantly, audit readiness is built into the process by design rather than addressed retrospectively. Through this solution, Cygnnet.One is enabling enterprises to move from judgment-driven GST operations to intelligent, scalable, and governance-ready tax processes.

PREZ DONALD TRUMP SIGNS ORDER TO RENAME LAKE ONTARIO AS LAKE AMERICA

US President Donald Trump has signed an executive order seeking to change the name of Lake Ontario to Lake America. The move comes after trade talks between the US and Canada collapsed last week, and the US imposed new 50% tariffs on $ 2 0 b n (C$28bn) worth of Canadian goods. Canada will implement "dollar for dollar" counter-tariffs next month. Trump said the renaming of the lake, which straddles both countries, was effective immediately. He has broad discretion over how the US recognises landmarks but other countries do not have to follow. Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney said in response that "things must be called by their name, and this lake is called Lake Ontario - today and forever".

The executive order gives the US Department of the Interior 30 days to update the name change with the Geographic Names Information Service - the official repository of domestic geographic names in the US. Carney noted that the name Lake Ontario could be traced back more than 400 years, adding that it preceded the formation of the Canadian Confederation and the US Declaration of Independence. "We know that the United States is changing," he said. "Their trade relations, their foreign policy, their national monuments, their hydronyms. "Canadian women and men also know that things must be called by their name, and this lake is called Lake Ontario - today and forever." There is no universally recognised international body setting the names of international waters. When Trump took to the White House in 2025, he signed a similar order that changed the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of America.

King Haakon VIII takes the throne in Norway following death of Harald V

Flocks of mourners have gathered outside the Royal Palace in Oslo, where the piles of bouquets and Norwegian flags are growing. Multiple politicians have been seen there, including foreign minister Espen Barth Eide and finance minister Jens Stoltenberg of the Labour Party, as well as leader of the Conservative Party Ine Marie Eriksen Soreide. With King Haakon VIII now the head of state, his daughter Ingrid Alexandra, 22, now becomes the crown princess and heir to the Norwegian throne. It's only in recent decades - since the constitution changed in 1990 - that women have been given the right to inherit the Norwegian throne. It means that Ingrid Alexandra could be Norway's first female monarch since the 15th Century. Born and raised in Oslo, the princess completed her military service in 2025, having spent 15 months as an engineer soldier and rifleman. In May 2025, it was announced that she was to move to Australia to study international relations and political economy at the University of Sydney. Environmental protection and climate change have previously been given as her key interests on the royal family's website - although the biographies are currently unavailable while the site is updated. The Union flag is flying at half-mast over Buckingham Palace, in tribute to King Harald V. The flag placement is a symbol of mourning and respect in many countries, including in the

UK. Harald has ties to the British Royal Family, and was the second cousin of late monarch Queen Elizabeth II. King Harald's coffin will be moved from hospital to the Royal Palace in Oslo this evening, the Norwegian Royal Family has confirmed. His son King Haakon, the new Queen Mette-Marit, Crown Princess Ingrid Alexandra, Harald's wife Queen Sonja, Prince Sverre Magnus, and Princess Mårtha Louise will accompany the coffin. A procession will leave the chapel at Rikshospitalet at 18:30 local time (17:30 BST) and will work its way towards the palace. Norwegian Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Støre has joined the crowd of mourners gathered outside the Royal Palace in Oslo. Støre, who has led the country since 2021, added his own bouquet to the growing number of tributes.

WORLD'S YOUNGEST REIGNING TRADITIONAL MONARCH DIES AGED 34

A traditional Ugandan ruler named as the world's youngest monarch has died aged 34, his prime minister announced. Oyo Nyimba Kabamba Iguru Rukidi IV became king of Tooro in western Uganda at just three years old in 1995 after the death of his father. The Toroo kingdom did not disclose the cause of King Oyo's death, but a Ugandan government minister was quoted in local media saying that he had been critically ill and was seeking treatment in the US. Though Uganda is governed by an elected president and parliament, it has several traditional kingdoms which continue to have significant cultural influence despite not having political power. Oyo, who Guinness World Records listed as the world's youngest reigning monarch, ruled over more than two million people. He was the 13th monarch of a kingdom that was founded in the early 19th Century. Announcing his death, Tooro's Prime Minister Calvin Armstrong Rwomire Akiiki called his passing on Thursday an "immeasurable loss" to the royal family and the people of Tooro. "I call upon all the people of Tooro to remain united, calm and prayerful during this profoundly difficult time," Akiiki said on Friday.

Tate brothers blast US jail conditions as they seek bail in UK extradition fight

Andrew and Tristan Tate have told a Florida court they should be released from jail so they can fight extradition to the UK on charges of rape and trafficking. Wearing tan jail uniforms, the brothers maintained they did not commit the alleged crimes as they hit out at conditions in US custody. Government lawyers argued that the two were a flight risk and had bragged about having multiple passports, while defence attorneys said the two social media influencers' high profile would make it almost impossible for them to flee. US Magistrate Judge Lauren Louis will issue a written ruling at a later date on whether to grant bail to the dual British-US citizens. The two were arrested in Miami on 19 July. During Thursday's hearing, defence lawyers said the pair had complied with the terms of their release while they battled the UK charges and another case in Romania. US authorities took the men into custody last month after the UK's Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) unveiled dozens of new charges against them. The British authorities have until 16 September to submit a full extradition request. The brothers, who arrived in court in shackles, were questioned in turn by their defence attorneys and government lawyers as they took the stand. Andrew Tate, 39, declared he has "never committed the crimes I'm accused of". Tristan Tate, 38, described his detention conditions as small and hot, with little sunlight and exercise. "It's beginning to grate on me because I can't partake in helping with my defence," he told the court, according to CBS News, the BBC's US partner. "It's death by scurvy," he said, adding that he had lost 14lb (6.3kg). The British Embassy filed court documents asking the judge to keep the Tates in custody as the UK pursues extradition. US government lawyers pushed back against the brothers' claims that they had exaggerated their wealth to massage their online personas. The federal attorneys said the Tates had access to resources that could help fund an escape and they had bragged about having multiple passports. But Andrew Tate, a former professional kickboxer, testified that to support himself financially, he "had to go back to the boxing ring against heavier, younger opponents", according to CBS News. "I've said some stupid things, but sometimes you have to shake the internet to get noticed," he testified about his online statements, according to CBS. "This is the reality of the internet. I'm being treated like El Chapo," he added, referring to the Mexican drug kingpin, "but I have a perfect record in the court system". Under questioning from his attorney, Joseph McBride, Andrew Tate denied he was a human trafficker. The defence also called Natasha Sesay, from England, to testify in support of releasing Andrew Tate. She described a five-year romantic relationship, saying she had had one child with him and was expecting a second.

Dutch court sentences man to life over Rwanda genocide

A court in the Netherlands has sentenced a Dutch-Rwandan man to life for his involvement in the 1994 genocide in Rwanda. The 66-year-old, named only as Eugene N, was accused, among other things, of throwing a hand grenade into a crowd of Tutsis who were seeking shelter in a stadium. He was convicted of war crimes and the crime of genocide, having acted with "genocidal intent", the judge said. Rwanda had sought his extradition in 2014 but the authorities in the Netherlands then launched their own investigation into N, who had become a Dutch citizen. In 100 days in April 1994, an estimated 800,000 ethnic Tutsis and politically moderate Hutu people were killed by Hutu extremists. The court in The Hague heard N held an authoritative position in the community at the time of the massacre, overseeing around 1,000 people in Mbazi in southern Rwanda. "The suspect was a man who was held in high regard and must have been aware of his role and the influence he had as a local administrator," the court explained, adding that he "committed multiple severe crimes". At a football stadium, he instructed Hutus not to let any of the Tutsis escape. Trapped inside, they were pelted with stones, shot at and had hand grenades thrown at them.

OPTIMUS PRIME AND EEEYORE VOICE ACTOR PETER CULLEN DIES

Actor Peter Cullen, who voiced popular characters including Optimus Prime in Transformers and Eeyore in Disney's Winnie the Pooh franchise, has died at the age of 85. The Canadian actor began his most famous role - as the heroic deep-voiced Optimus Prime - for the Transformers TV series in 1984, then returned for seven Hollywood films from 2007 to 2023 and other spin-offs. He voiced depressive donkey Eeyore in TV animation The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh from the late 1980s as well as numerous related shows, films and games. His other memorable voice parts included KARR, the evil counterpart to KITT in TV show Knight Rider; the clicking vocalisations of The Predator in Arnold Schwarzenegger's

1987 film; and the roars of King Kong in 1976. He died on Wednesday at his home in Los Angeles, a statement said. "Peter Cullen passed away peacefully, surrounded by his loving family - and held in the hearts of his many friends and countless fans worldwide. "His family asks that you honour his remarkable legacy by serving your communities and leading others with compassion, integrity, and loyalty and always remember 'be strong enough to be gentle.' Cullen started his career on Canadian TV and radio and was then a regular on programmes like The Sonny & Cher Show before deciding to concentrate on voice acting.

Brother's advice His Optimus Prime voice was inspired by his older brother, a decorated US Marine and Vietnam War veteran, who suggested he should play the character as "a real hero, don't be a Hollywood hero". "He said, 'Don't go yelling and screaming. He's strong enough to be gentle.' "And that resonated with me, and I could hear his voice all the way to the audition. When he drops down, when he gets serious, is where I found Optimus Prime." Cullen gave his brother a cut of the wages he received for playing Optimus Prime until his death. The actor's performance as the character earned him a Daytime Emmy nomination for outstanding performer in an animated programme in 2011.

DRESSING ROOM IN TENTS, WASHROOM 500M FAR: BCCI SLAMS ASIAN GAMES CONDITIONS: REPORT

The Asian Games will start from September 19 onwards in Aichi-Nagoya, Japan. The men's cricket tournament is scheduled from September 24 to October 3, while the women's tournament is scheduled from September 17 to 22. A source from BCCI told ANI that the board and ACC are not satisfied with the facilities and arrangements for cricketers in Japan, and an observer from BCCI could be sent there. The source told ANI, "BCCI and ACC are not happy with the facilities and arrangements in Japan, and the board will send an observer there. The observer will submit its report to us. We told Japan Olympics officials during the ACC in a meeting that the dressing rooms were set up in tents and washrooms were just 500 m away from those tents, which has created an unsatisfying situation for the players. Also, the hotel rooms are really small, and it is a big concern." Team India secured a gold medal in the previous edition at Hangzhou, China, back in 2023, adjudged winners on the basis of a higher seeding over Afghanistan after the final was washed out. They have named a full-strength line-up for the competition, including skipper Shreyas Iyer, the left-handed batting quartet of Abhishek Sharma, Vaibhav Sooryavanshi, Ishan Kishan and Tilak Varma and star pacers Jasprit Bumrah and Arshdeep Singh. India men's T20I squad for Asian Games Shreyas Iyer (capt), Sanju Samson (wk), Abhishek Sharma, Ishan Kishan (wk), Shivam Dube, Tilak Varma (vice-capt), Axar Patel, Washington Sundar, Nitish Kumar Reddy, Varun Chakravarthy, Ravi Bishnoi, Harshit Rana, Arshdeep Singh, Vaibhav Sooryavanshi, Jasprit Bumrah. The Indian women's squad is led by Harmanpreet Kaur and features several big names who are regulars at the senior level.

China's World Humanoid Robot Games Offer A Glimpse Into The Future Of Robotics

In 1997, when a computer defeated the reigning chess world champion for the first time in history, many wondered how long it would take for machines to be able to match, or even surpass, humans in competitive sports that involve a high level of physical exertion. Watching the 2nd World Humanoid Robot Games held in Beijing from August 22 to 26, one couldn't help but return to that thought. The annual event brought together 666 teams from 16 countries across six continents, with over 2,000 robots in action. Over the course of the five days, quite a few humanoid robots ran faster than Usain Bolt's 100m world record times, with a few jumping higher than Javier Sotomayor's world record jump of 2.45 metres. These came just months after a humanoid robot beat the human half-marathon world record in Beijing in April. The significance of these feats couldn't be overstated. That robots can already outrun humans when the robotics sector is still at the beginning of an unprecedented boom makes one wonder what possibilities lie a few years down the road. Not all robots, needless to say, displayed the same level of athleticism or finesse. There were a few erratic ones who malfunctioned or collapsed in the middle of their performances. Yet, the rate of improvement from the first edition of the Robot Games in 2025 was quite stunning. In football, for instance, the robots, albeit still much slower than their human counterparts, showcase improved shooting and passing abilities compared to last year. The underlying aim of the event was to showcase the advances in capabilities of robots. From a practical viewpoint, it did a good job highlighting the progress robots have achieved in supporting humans in everyday life. The Robot Games featured multiple competitions centred on real-life scenarios. Beyond the headlines about robots outrunning humans, these scenario-based events offered a realistic preview of where robotics is headed. These competitions ranged from mundane chores like packing, gardening and electric vehicle charging to more serious activities like retail services and industrial assembling. There was also a fire rescue competition that highlighted how robots could be used in emergency response roles that involve high risks for humans. Strolling around the venue of the Robot Games, the National Speed Skating Oval, yours truly had the chance to explore some of the latest offerings in booths set up by some of China's well-known robotics firms. At a robot-run kitchen, one robot sliced through cucumbers while another baked nuggets. They were slow but steady and precise. At another outlet, a robot served orange juice within a couple of minutes, and at yet another one, a robot seamlessly performed the role of a shopkeeper. At one stall, a semi-autonomous wheelchair wowed visitors with its ability to slowly, but steadily, help occupants down a flight of stairs without outside support. There were exoskeletons, brain-computer interface wearables and many other products that highlighted how robotics is gradually entering the medical field, particularly in eldercare.

Pakistan Refused To Take Field In 2nd Test Over Imran Khan's Sons' Interview: Report

A bizarre report has emerged from England, where the hosts are engaged in a Test series with Pakistan. On Day 1 of the second Test at Lord's, the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) reportedly asked the hosts' broadcaster Sky Sports not to air the interview with former captain Imran Khan's sons during the lunch break. Pakistan reportedly threatened a walkout too if their demands were not met. However, Sky Sports went ahead with the scheduled broadcast and aired the interview. A fuming PCB reportedly asked its players to not take the field, prompting the England board to intervene. The 18-minute interview was done by former England cricketer Michael Atherton - one of the 21 captains to sign the letter to Pakistan Prime Minister - over the worsening health of Imran Khan, who has been behind bars since August 2023. Multiple media outlets, including Cricinfo and The Guardian, claimed that the PCB wasn't happy to see Imran Khan's sons being in the spotlight during the Test. The board even said that Babar Azam's men wouldn't take the field if the interview was shown on TV. Sky Sports continued with the broadcast despite the threats. But Pakistan still took the field in the post-lunch session, thanks to ECB's timely intervention. A total of two letters have been sent by cricket captains all across the world to the Pakistan Prime Minister over Imran Khan's situation in jail. The first of these letters was drafted in February but it failed to trigger the desired change. The second was sent earlier this week, when Imran was returned to the Adiala jail after a brief medical check-up.

'Hope They Educate Themselves': Anaya Bangar Replies To Critics Of WBBL Push

Anaya Bangar's inclusion in the community shield, which is quite literally an entry level competition Down Under, has evoked reactions on both ends of the spectrum. There has been empathy but criticism too like South Africa great Marizanne Kapp's comment on Friday calling Anaya's push for Women's Big Bash League "absolutely ridiculous". Anaya is hoping to play WBBL in March next year provided her testosterone levels remain within prescribed limits. She is also yet to sign up for a local club team. "I think people who want to raise their voice against it should actually educate themselves on this topic.

R ASHWIN TEARS INTO RISHABH PANT:

"DON'T GIVE ME ONCE IN A GENERATION ARGUMENT"

Rishabh Pant, backed by the Indian team management for the wicket-keeper's role for the 2-match Test assignment against Sri Lanka, ended the assignment with 168 runs, including two half-centuries. While statistically, one would say that Pant had a promising outing, former India spinner Ravichandran Ashwin isn't happy with what he has delivered. In a video on his YouTube channel, Ashwin dropped some critical comments on Pant's performances in the Sri Lanka tour, saying his expectations haven't been fulfilled yet. "My expectation from Rishabh Pant hasn't been fulfilled till now. I am very sorry. Sonal Dinusha had his strike rate up there. But the difference is high-risk options. When you have the game in your hand, these are all statements: 'That's how Rishabh plays.' It is about what your team needs," Ashwin said in a video on 'Ash Ki Baat'. When it comes to Pant's Test career, his contributions on the tour of Australia during the Border-Gavaskar Trophy 2020-21. While not taking away anything from Pant, Ashwin said that the knocks from Shardul Thakur and Washington Sundar were also quite important in India's wins. But, the nature of backing Pant has received from the team management despite consistently inconsistent show, baffles Ashwin. "Rishabh played a class knock in Sydney and Brisbane, but you couldn't have won that match without Washington Sundar and Shardul Thakur.

Garry Kasparov Reacts As R Praggnanandhaa Scripts History With Grand Chess Tour Triumph

Russian chess legend Garry Kasparov and Indian grandmaster Vidit Gujrathi congratulated R Praggnanandhaa after his Grand Chess Tour (GCT) title win. R Praggnanandhaa staged a stunning comeback against GM Fabiano Caruana to win the final match and claim his maiden Grand Chess Tour Finals title, along with the $200,000 first prize on Thursday (local time) in St. Louis. The 2026 edition of the most electric Grand Slam, the US Open, has been a starry affair even before the start of the main draw, but Gael Monfils and Elina Svitolina, the only married couple in the mixed-doubles draw, have drawn the spotlight towards them, making it into a memorable family affair. What began as a wild-card entry into the draw, with the couple teaming up in mixed doubles for the first time, turned into a memorable run at the US Open 2026 before ending in the semi-finals, made all the more special by the fact that it came in Monfils' final year of professional tennis. Svitolina credited the couple's understanding and support for helping them come through the contest against the World No.1 doubles players, Henry Patten and Katerina Siniakova, in their quarter-final victory. "We had lots of nice moments, and I think we understand each other and what we're going through during this moment after the win. So, yeah, it's amazing to have my husband next to me and supporting me. I think this is what got us through." With Monfils in the final year of his professional career, Svitolina knows their run is about more than results. "It would be the most special year for Gael, as the last one, and of course, playing together. It's amazing, and yeah, just looking forward to more memories," she said. For Monfils, however, the significance runs even deeper. The 39-year-old sees their unexpected US Open adventure as a memory their daughter will cherish long after his playing days are over. "It's a great honour, to be honest, in the last year, playing together for the first and last time.

MEGASTAR CHIRANJEEVI PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE LATE ACTOR AND PRODUCER G.V. NARAYANA RAO

Megastar Chiranjeevi paid his last respects to the late actor and producer G.V. Narayana Rao. Chiranjeevi, who attended the funeral held at Jubilee Hills Mahaprashtanam, recalled his connection and fond memories with Narayana Rao. On this occasion, Megastar Chiranjeevi said.. Our acquaintance dates back to the days of the Film Institute. He was already a senior in the institute. When we were training, he would come and share his experiences. That's how we became close. When we grew up in the industry, when I got a star image, he asked, "I want to become a producer. Do you want to make films?" That's how he produced two films. He also gave me opportunities as an actor in my films. That's how our relationship continued. Coincidentally, about ten days ago, he said, "I have made a film. Inspired by Manchu Palki, I have made a film about five boys... what they will be like when they grow up. The trailer should be launched. It would be good for everyone if you cooperate." I said I would definitely do it. At that moment, he asked me to come and take a photo together. Maybe that was his last film. We talked for a long time at that time. I told him to take care of his health. At that moment, I told him all the best. But I didn't think that that would be a permanent goodbye. May Narayana Rao's soul rest in peace wherever he is, his family members are also my family members. I express my deepest condolences to them.

SOBHITA MIXES NIZAMI GLAM WITH GENZ EDGE

Sriwass, Mahankali Nagaraju, Madhavi Creations' Phoenix Raja: First Poster And 2D Motion Teaser Unveiled, Promising A Gripping Battle Of Truth, Power And Politics

The prodigious and hard-hitting filmmaker Sriwass has announced his next big and ambitious project. Produced by Mahankali Nagaraju under Madhavi Creations and co-produced by Arigapudi Sumit Kumar, Shailesh Bhambure and Shyam Bodapati, the film is titled Phoenix Raja. The film's first poster along with a powerful two-minute 2D motion teaser, were unveiled at Novotel Hotel, Juhu, Mumbai. The promotional material, which brings to the fore a gripping battle involving truth, power and politics, was presented in a refreshingly unique manner- probably for the first time in Indian film history- as the media representatives present at the event unveiled it themselves, as wished by the makers. To be made in different languages, including English, and mounted on a grand scale across various shooting locations in India and abroad, the multilingual movie Phoenix Raja, as director Sriwass, already an acclaimed name in Telugu cinema, says, "will strive to set a benchmark in storytelling by presenting real incidents in a lucid yet impactful manner."

At the heart of Phoenix Raja is an honest businessman who chooses to build his life through hard work, principles and integrity rather than political connections or influence. When powerful forces turn against him, his personal struggle transforms into a larger fight for truth, dignity and the future of the next generation. One of the film's significant themes is the growing influence of the drug mafia on Gen Z, raising a disturbing yet relevant question: "If the future of Gen Z can be controlled, who controls tomorrow?" While the film is being mounted on a lavish scale and planned to be shot across India and abroad, it presents a world dominated by power and manipulation, alongside a strong counterforce in the form of an honest officer, a powerful judiciary and individuals who refuse to remain silent in the face of injustice. They do not stand behind one individual. They stand behind the truth.
