CM seeks Aga Khan Foundation support for heritage conservation, Musi rejuvenation and development projects

HYDERABAD (TSIT):

Chief Minister A.Revanth Reddy on Tuesday invited Prince Rahim Aga Khan V to attend the three-day Telangana Global Summit 2026, beginning December 7 at Bharat Future City, and sought the Aga Khan Foundation's cooperation in key development and heritage conservation initiatives in Telangana.

The Chief Minister met Prince Rahim at Taj Falaknuma Palace in Hyderabad and discussed opportunities for collaboration in education, tourism, healthcare and heritage conservation. Minister Mohammed Azharuddin, Chief Secretary Sanjay Jaju, CM's Advisor Ramakrishna Rao, senior officials and representatives of the Aga Khan Foundation attended the meeting. Revanth Reddy recalled the Aga Khan family's long-standing association with Hyderabad and appreciated the Foundation's contribution to the conservation of the State's heritage. He referred to restoration initiatives undertaken with the Foundation's support, including the Qutb Shahi Tombs and the Legislative Council building.

Briefing the Prince on the proposed rejuvenation of the Musi River, the Chief Minister said the government was preparing an ambitious plan to tackle pollution and encroachments and transform the riverfront into a vibrant economic and recreational corridor. He sought the Aga Khan Foundation's support for restoring the historic City College and Osmania General Hospital buildings situated in the Musi corridor. With a new Osmania Hospital complex being developed at Goshamahall, Revanth Reddy suggested that the existing heritage structure could be conserved and developed with the Foundation's expertise.

The Chief Minister also explained his vision for the nearly 30,000-acre Bharat Future City near Shamshabad, envisioned as a net-zero city with around 15,000 acres of green space. Prince Rahim showed keen interest in the project and enquired about its location and development plans.

NEW DELHI (TSIT)

Ending nearly six years of fully free UPI payments, the government on Tuesday introduced a 0.4 per cent fee on transfers worth more than Rs 2,000 made to merchants through the platform from October 15 while explicitly ring-fencing everyday person-to-person transactions as well as small payments from any charge.

"Customers will not be required to pay any charge when making such payments through UPI," the finance ministry said in a statement, adding, "MDR is a charge within the merchant payment ecosystem. It is not a charge on customers making UPI payments." Also, individuals will continue to have "unlimited free usage, with no monthly quotas, volume restrictions or tiered caps on free UPI transactions", it said.

The carefully calibrated move signalled the end of an era for the world's largest real-time payments system even as the government tried to avoid alarming the hundreds of millions of daily users. The move drew sharp criticism from the opposition parties. Congress leader Rahul Gandhi alleged that the levy was "once again surrender" by a "compromised" Prime Minister Narendra Modi to American pressure.

The BJP hit back, accusing the Congress of spreading "fake news", saying the government had made it absolutely clear that MDR charges would not be levied on consumers. From October 15, a 0.4 per cent Merchant Discount Rate (MDR) will be levied on person-to-merchant (P2M) transactions above Rs 2,000 through UPI (Unified Payments Interface), capped at Rs 300 for payments of Rs 75,000 and above.

Court to decide Bhardwaj's regular bail based on his conduct

NEW DELHI (TSIT):

A Delhi court, which on Tuesday, September 15, granted three weeks' interim bail to Hindutva supporter Swatantra Bhardwaj, issued a slew of directions to the city police regarding its probe in the assault case. It ordered the Delhi Police to collect all evidence: CCTV footage of the alleged assault during the Jantar Mantar protests, videos and photographs taken by officers who were stationed at the time of the assault, Bhardwaj's call records and the location of his mobile from the beginning of the protests until his arrest.

Complete details of the podcast, the center of the case, and who uploaded the content in which Bhardwaj is seen boasting about the episode. "The podcast, videos and a pen drive should be submitted as evidence for forensic testing to check whether they are genuine or edited, manipulated or artificially created," read the court's direction.

The Delhi Police should identify those who allegedly sent threatening or abusive messages to the complainant and his minor daughter, Nishu Azad. The investigating officer should ascertain if any sender is linked to Bhardwaj.

The court also sought a report on the whereabouts of co-accused Suraj Kumar and the progress in identifying other associates, besides a follow-up on the opinion of the Medical Board.

Police should immediately inform the court if Bhardwaj violates the bail condition. His regular bail application is still pending. The court will decide it at the next hearing after looking at his conduct during interim bail and the police investigation report.

India calls Pakistan's Masood Azhar bounty move a 'gimmick'

New Delhi: India on Tuesday, September 15, dismissed Pakistan's fresh announcement of a seven million rupees bounty on Jaish-e-Mohammed chief Masood Azhar, demanding that Islamabad take "concrete actions" to combat terrorism. Pakistan has maintained the bounty on Azhar, who continues to be listed in the country's Federal Investigation Agency's (FIA) "Red Book" of most-wanted terrorists.

Azhar remains wanted in India for major terror attacks, including the 2001 Parliament strike, the 2008 Mumbai attacks, the 2016 Pathankot airbase assault and the 2019 Pulwama bombing.

"Such gimmicks and hoodwinking by Pakistan is nothing new. We have seen similar gimmicks in the past as well," External Affairs Ministry spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal said at his regular media briefing, responding to a question on Pakistan maintaining the bounty on Azhar.

"For a state sponsor of terrorism to make such phoney announcements, we all know how hollow it is. Pakistan must take concrete action and not make phoney announcements. It is of no consequence," Jaiswal added.

India has for years accused Pakistan of sheltering Azhar, while Pakistan has maintained that he fled to Afghanistan – a claim rejected by Afghanistan's Taliban government.

For the last few years, Islamabad has claimed that the JeM founder has been operating from Afghanistan.

However, last week the Taliban regime dismissed Pakistan's repeated claims, with a senior Afghan Foreign Ministry official saying he is not in the country. Islamabad's fresh announcement on the reward for information on Azhar came as it faces pressure from the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) to crack down on terror groups and their leadership.

Toyota Kirloskar Motor Partners with MSRTC to Launch "Hirkani Kaksha" Lactation Pods Across Maharashtra

Mumbai: Toyota Kirloskar Motor (TKM) today signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the Maharashtra State Road Transport Corporation (MSRTC) to launch "Hirkani Kaksha" (Lactation Pods), a transformative gender-responsive initiative designed to support nursing mothers and enhance the safety and dignity of women commuters across Maharashtra's public transport system. Under this initiative, TKM will support the installation of 125 lactation pods across MSRTC bus depots throughout Maharashtra, providing secure, private and hygienic spaces equipped with essential amenities including prefabricated rooms, seating, feeding tables, baby diaper changing stations, sanitary napkin dispensers, and ventilation facilities. The initiative is expected to serve nearly 4.50 lakh women commuters annually, addressing a critical gap in gender-sensitive infrastructure at public transport hubs. Maharashtra's MSRTC operates approximately 22,800 buses across the state with major depots experiencing high daily commuter volumes of 20,000 to 50,000 passengers.

Women constitute approximately 35-45% of total commuters (approximately 1.73 million), with significant demand emerging from high-footfall pilgrim destinations including Tuljapur, Pandharpur, Shirdi, Kolhapur, and Nashik, which collectively attract 10-15 million visitors annually. The growing demand for safe, accessible, and women-friendly public infrastructure presents an opportunity to further enhance the travel experience for nursing mothers and their families. The Hirkani Kaksha initiative is a pioneering step towards creating a more inclusive and compassionate public transport ecosystem. By establishing dedicated lactation pods at MSRTC depots, the initiative provides nursing mothers with safe, private, and hygienic spaces, improving comfort, convenience, and dignity during travel. The project reflects a strong commitment to women's well-being, maternal health, and gender-responsive infrastructure, while setting a benchmark for inclusive public services across Maharashtra. The MoU was formally signed in the presence of Shri. Devendra Fadnis, Hon'ble Chief Minister of Maharashtra; Shri. Eknath Shinde, Hon'ble Deputy Chief Minister; Smt. Sunetra Pawar, Hon'ble Deputy Chief Minister; Shri. Pratap Sarnaik, Hon'ble Minister of Transport; and other senior government officials of Maharashtra, along with TKM leadership. Pratap Sarnaik, Minister of Transport, Government of Maharashtra said "The Hirkani Kaksha project exemplifies how collaborative initiatives between government and industry can create meaningful impact on citizens' lives. This initiative strengthens our commitment to providing gender-sensitive, inclusive public services that prioritize the well-being and dignity of women commuters. We look forward to rolling out these lactation pods across MSRTC depots and setting a benchmark for public transport infrastructure in India." Speaking on the partnership, Vikram Gulati, Country Head & Executive Vice President, Corporate Affairs, Toyota Kirloskar Motor, said, "The Hirkani Kaksha initiative reflects our belief to address the specific needs of inclusive development of all community members. By creating safe and dignified spaces for nursing mothers in public transport, we are contributing to an eco-system that respects women's mobility, health and well-being. This initiative with MSRTC demonstrates private sector and government collaboration to drive social progress meaningfully and make essential services more accessible to all." By investing in gender-responsive infrastructure, TKM contributes to creating a more equitable and inclusive society while supporting the Government of Maharashtra's vision of safe and accessible public services for all citizens. Since 2001, Toyota Kirloskar Motor has been committed to uplifting communities through initiatives spanning education, environment, road safety, skill development, health and hygiene, and disaster management. Through need-based interventions and strategic partnerships with government and civil society organizations, TKM continues to contribute to India's development goals while advancing its global philosophy of "Creating Mobility for All."

From Empowerment to Ownership: Upasana Kamineni Konidela Calls for a BRICS Women's Economic Corridor

Hyderabad 15th September 2026: At the BRICS Women's Business Alliance Summit, she calls for women's participation to translate into capital, contracts, assets and economic ownership. Calling for women's empowerment to move beyond representation and towards measurable economic power, Upasana Kamineni Konidela, Vice Chairperson, Apollo Foundation and Founder, URLife, proposed the creation of a BRICS Women's Economic Corridor to connect women entrepreneurs across BRICS nations with greater access to capital, markets, partnerships and cross-border opportunities. Delivering a special address at the BRICS Women's Business Alliance (WBA) Women-Led Development Summit 2026, under India's BRICS Presidency, Kamineni Konidela challenged policymakers and business leaders to rethink the role of women in economic growth. "The conversation can no longer be only about how we include more women in business. The bigger question is: what would BRICS economies look like if women were at the centre of how growth itself is designed?" She argued that representation without influence, participation without economic power, employment without financial independence, and empowerment without ownership are incomplete. Echoing Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of moving from women's development to women-led development, Kamineni Konidela called for the next phase of the BRICS WBA to be measured by tangible economic outcomes. She proposed three clear shifts: startup platforms that lead to capital, not just awards; networking that leads to contracts, not just exchanged cards; and financial inclusion that leads to assets and investments, not just bank accounts. At the heart of her address was a call to move the global women's agenda from empowerment to ownership defined by three fundamentals: a woman's health, her wealth and her freedom to choose. "Don't just give a woman a seat at the table. Give her equity in the table because that is where real economic power lies." The proposed BRICS Women's Economic Corridor would seek to turn the strength of the BRICS network into an actionable economic platform, helping women-led businesses access investment, buyers, markets and partnerships across member nations. Kamineni Konidela also acknowledged Dr. Sangita Reddy, Joint Managing Director, Apollo Hospitals, who chaired the BRICS WBA India Chapter during India's 2021 BRICS Chairship, and Avarna Jain, current Chairperson of the BRICS WBA India Chapter, for advancing the alliance's women-led growth agenda.

Mangaluru, Sep 15: The CPI (M) Dakshina Kannada district committee has urged the Karnataka government to adopt a people-centric and comprehensive development policy for coastal Karnataka, instead of promoting corporate-oriented public-private partnership (PPP) models. Addressing a press conference in Mangaluru on Tuesday, CPI (M) district secretary Muneer Katipalla said the special cabinet meeting scheduled to be held in Mangaluru on September 18 should focus on addressing the long-pending issues of the people of the coastal districts. The party alleged that the development taking place in the coastal region has not benefited all sections of society equally. It expressed concern over increasing migration, unemployment among local youth, environmental degradation, and the growing influence of corporate investments. Kumaraswamy vows to expose scams

Hassan : Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy on Tuesday hit back at what he described as attempts to intimidate and silence him, declaring that no amount of talk about jail or the release of videos could stop him from raising issues of corruption and irregularities.

Speaking to the media after offering prayers at the memorial of his mother at the foothills of Mavinakere Sri Ranganathaswamy Hill in Haradanahalli, Holenarasipura taluk, and later at the Sri Ranganathaswamy Temple atop the hill, Kumaraswamy said he would continue to bring alleged scams before the people with documentary evidence.

Before leaving for the United States, I had raised several issues, including the KPSC, Bidadi Township and NICE scams. These allegations have shaken certain people at their very foundation. That is why attempts are now being made to bring up jail-related issues to silence our family, he alleged. “I have already said that I will place several matters before the public. Let our opponents speak as lightly as they want; I will not lose my composure. I will come before the people of Karnataka with documents and place the facts before them without fear or hesitation. This is something I have inherited from my father. I will speak only on the basis of evidence,” he said.

Kumaraswamy said he had seen photographs of the NICE project contractor meeting the Chief Minister and had already raised questions about what was being planned with regard to the project. “The present Chief Minister knows what kind of conspiracy was allegedly carried out against my mother when she days, Kumaraswamy said those involved would have to answer for how much sleep they had lost. “I will not hesitate to speak about the many irregularities and scams involving thousands of crores. I came to Mavinakere Ranganathaswamy Temple today and sought the blessings of the deity. Ultimately, he alone must deliver the verdict,” he said. Kumaraswamy said the legislature, executive, judiciary and media constitute the four pillars of the democratic system and warned that If even one of these four pillars is weakened, it undermines the values enshrined in the Constitution. “If even one of these four pillars is weakened, it amounts to an insult to the Constitution written by Dr B.R.

Ambedkar. We must bow before the Constitution and discharge our responsibilities. Today, there is a growing belief that one can make easy money through irregularities and acquire everything with it. I have prepared myself on which issue should be brought out and when. I will come before the people with documents,” he said. He said the people of Karnataka and the four constitutional pillars would ultimately have to decide how the state should be protected. “I say this in the presence of God: I have no personal animosity towards anyone,” he added. Reacting to those arguing that people from their own community were now in power and should therefore be allowed to govern.

S. Manohar Demands Legal Action Against BJP Leaders Inciting Communal Tension

Bengaluru: KPCC General Secretary S. Manohar has demanded appropriate legal action against BJP leaders who are disrupting law and order and inciting communal tension in the name of the Ganesha festival.

Speaking after lodging a complaint with the Director General of Police regarding this matter, he stated that every citizen has the right to celebrate the Ganesha festival by installing the idol of Lord Vinayaka peacefully and harmoniously. He expressed concern that BJP leaders are politicizing the advice and precautionary measures issued by police officials in the public interest and are deliberately targeting the officers themselves with their statements.

He alleged that there is public anxiety regarding attempts to politically incite people using the names of God and religion, as well as efforts to create a volatile situation by bringing in large numbers of people from various districts—including Bengaluru—thereby provoking communal unrest.

In light of this, he urged the police department to implement strict precautionary measures to prevent any form of communal tension or disruption to law and order. Specifically, he referred to BJP leaders such as R. It has been stated that there is a need to examine whether the statements and activities of R. Ashoka and Pratap Simha have compromised public peace and law and order.

It is also necessary to impartially examine whether the statements made or actions taken by BJP MP Yaduveer Wadiyar upon visiting the site contributed to any tension. It was emphasized that elected representatives holding responsible positions should not engage in or facilitate any attempts to incite the public or seek political gain in the name of religion.

Therefore, a request has been made to conduct an impartial investigation into all these matters. If the investigation confirms any violation of law or obstruction of police duties, cases should be registered under applicable laws against Opposition Leader R. Ashoka, Pratap Simha, BJP MP Yaduveer Wadiyar, and other concerned BJP leaders and individuals, followed by appropriate legal action.

Ganeshotsava should serve as a symbol of peace, harmony, and coexistence. Religious observances must not be allowed to become a source of communal tension or political conflict. A request has been made for the police department to immediately take necessary precautionary measures to uphold public peace and maintain law and order.

JASSPER SHIPPING TO INVEST RS 450 CRORE OVER THREE YEARS TO POWER INDIA'S CARGO BOOM

Bangalore : Jassper Shipping, an international cargo logistics company that moves everything from heavy machinery and cement to food grains, fertilisers and farm produce, today announced it will invest up to US$50 million (approximately Rs 450 crore) over the next three years to expand its services across India, the Gulf region and other international markets.

The investment will be made in stages by the company’s promoters and is subject to market conditions, regulatory and board approvals. It comes at a time when India is rapidly building new infrastructure and expanding its farming, manufacturing and trade sectors, all of which need goods and materials moved safely from factories, farms and ports to the places where they are needed. In the first phase, the company will spend US$10 million (approximately Rs 90 crore) to strengthen its cargo-moving business across a wide range of sectors: power, steel, cement, agriculture, fertilisers, petrochemicals, construction materials, heavy engineering, manufacturing and large infrastructure projects.

The demand for such services is growing fast. India’s major ports handled over 915 million tonnes of cargo in 2025-26, about 7 per cent more than the year before, according to the Ministry of Ports, Shipping and Waterways. The government has also set up 142 Gati Shakti Cargo Terminals across the country as of July 2026, adding roughly 224 million tonnes of new freight-handling capacity every year, according to the Ministry of Railways.

“India is going through a long phase of building new infrastructure, expanding factories and growing its farm and trade sectors. All of this creates big opportunities for a company like ours that moves cargo of every kind, whether it is heavy machinery for a power plant, cement for a highway, or fertilisers and food grains for farmers. Our Rs 450 crore investment will help us build the scale and capability to serve this growing demand,” said Pushpank Kaushik, CEO and Head of Business Development (Subcontinent, Middle East and Southeast Asia), Jassper Shipping.

In simple terms, whenever large goods need to be moved, whether it is heavy machinery for a power plant, cement and steel for a highway or dam, fertilisers and food grains for agriculture, or bulk materials for a factory, they often arrive by ship at a port and then have to be carried by road, rail or river to the final destination. Jassper Shipping handles this entire journey: arranging ships, loading and unloading cargo, and delivering it safely to the site.

AI BECOMES THE FIRST FRONTIER FOR MENTAL HEALTH

AI-based chatbots are increasingly becoming people's first-line contact amid mental health concerns. In moments of loneliness, anxiety, stress, depression, relationship difficulties, or emotional distress, many people are choosing to interact with AI instead of first seeing a therapist. In a vast and diverse country like India, where access to mental health services remains unequal, AI technology offers a new possibility. However, it's important to understand that AI can be a means to expand mental health services, not a substitute for them. The biggest challenges facing mental health services in India include the limited availability of trained specialists, the lack of services in rural and remote areas, the cost of treatment, and the social stigma associated with mental illness. In such an environment, the 24-hour availability of AI creates significant opportunities. Individuals can share their problems at any time and receive information, emotional support, and self-help tips at an early stage. AI-based digital mental health platforms can play a useful role in this direction. Social taboos about mental health issues could also encourage the use of AI. Many people hesitate to express their feelings to family, friends, or therapists. Relatively anonymous digital conversations allow them to express their concerns, fears, and concerns. Chatbots can thus serve as a first step in mental health communication and encourage individuals to seek further professional help if needed. An important benefit of AI is early screening. By analyzing a person's communication, behavior, and certain digital signals, AI can help identify potential anxiety, depression, or other mental health risks. However, such screening should not be considered a final medical diagnosis. Its purpose should only be to identify potential risks and help direct the person to the appropriate specialist. Multilingual AI technology is also of particular importance given India's linguistic diversity. If mental health information and initial support are limited to English or a limited number of languages, large populations will be excluded. Language technology and digital systems developed for Indian languages can bridge this gap. In the future, such services could be integrated with government mental health initiatives like Tele-Manas to provide initial support to remote areas. Personal assistance can also be a useful feature of AI. Reminding people to take medication, motivating them to stay focused on sleep and routines, suggesting stress-reduction exercises, or guiding them through structured self-help activities based on cognitive behavioral therapy are just some of the areas where AI can play a supportive role. For clinicians, AI can also help with regular patient monitoring, identifying and prioritizing high-risk cases. This can enable more effective use of limited human resources. But along with the opportunities, there are also significant risks. A person in emotional distress is in a highly vulnerable state. If AI provides inaccurate, incomplete, or out-of-context information, it could exacerbate the person's distress. If a chatbot inadvertently reinforces a negative or delusional belief instead of challenging it, the consequences could be serious. This is why AI systems for mental health must clearly distinguish between chatbots that provide general information and tools proven to provide clinical assistance.

India-China Are Suddenly Getting Along. But What's On Offer?

ANTARA GHOSAL SINGH

After nearly five-years of diplomatic and military freeze post-2020 border clash, China-India relations seem to be turning a corner. It was in August 2025 when Prime Minister Narendra Modi visited China to attend the SCO Tianjin Summit, marking his first trip to the country since 2018. Now, Chinese President Xi Jinping visited India to attend the BRICS Summit after nearly seven years. The coming together of the leaders of Asia's two largest economies, after so long but within such a short time, is indeed a matter of great significance. What does it mean for the current state and the future of India-China bilateral ties? What are India and China up to while the global shifts? A complex negotiation has begun. Analysing the dominant discourse in both New Delhi and Beijing, it becomes apparent that in the context of the uncertainty emanating from Trump 2.0 policies, there is a growing consensus on both sides of the Himalayas that now is a rare window of opportunity for both sides to strike a quick bargain and risk-proof China-India relations from subsequent political changes in Washington. Accordingly, both sides seem to have initiated a complex negotiation, encompassing every aspect of the bilateral ties, from border issues to economic relations and multilateral cooperation. India has apparently put forward three broad demands vis-à-vis China - peace and tranquillity in border areas, fair market access/trade balance, and supply chain predictability. Meanwhile, China is building up pressure on India to more explicitly reiterate the 'one-China' policy, particularly with respect to Tibet and Taiwan; it's also demanding more economic concessions in return for a stable border.

A closer look at the official statements issued by both sides in recent high-level exchanges, including the recent bilateral, throws light on the issue. In terms of bargaining chips, China argues that India's 'China-decoupling' strategy has actually failed, for bilateral trade is expected to reach a historic high of USD 155.6 billion. It is now clear that in today's world of de-globalisation, only China has the ability to help India efficiently expand its manufacturing sector - and that is its biggest leverage in this negotiation process. Meanwhile, India retorts that China's current economic development is under tremendous pressure, as it is unable to generate domestic demand and is highly dependent on external markets and exports. At a time when relations with key trading partners, such as the US or the EU, are faltering, retaining the Indian market is absolutely critical for the Chinese, and that reinforces India's bargaining stance. The Limits Of 'Mutual Concessions' In terms of concessions, India has already made a series of policy adjustments in recent months to reassure China. It amended its foreign direct investment rules and adjusted visa policies to restart direct flights. But on issues of Taiwan and Tibet, India seems to be pushing back against Chinese demands, arguing that 'India does not violate China's sovereignty in any manner, but it is China that is illegally occupying Indian territory in Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh since 1963 ... Also, there are Chinese projects on territories in Jammu and Kashmir that belong to India, which India objects to.' India also formally renamed 27 places and features located in Arunachal Pradesh on the official maps of the Survey of India, in retaliation towards Beijing's repeated attempts to rename places in Arunachal Pradesh; the latest such exercise was carried out in April 2026. Not only has India's vocal assertion of sovereignty at this point irked the Chinese side, but they are also far from satisfied with India's economic concessions. The Chinese argue that India's policy adjustments in the economic space are by no means friendly concessions but calculated strategic moves, aimed at grabbing Chinese financial resources and technology in order to fill key gaps in India's industrial chain. China remains deeply concerned and has been taking countermeasures in terms of export-controls of key machineries and equipment to restrain India to the level of a mid-to-downstream supporting supplier within China's supply chain. China's repeated reference to China-India being "partners and not competitors" should be read in this context. On India's demand for balanced trade, China's position is shifting. It no longer seems to be playing a blame game with India and has lately expressed its willingness to expand domestic demand and open wider to the world. In that context, it has been welcoming Indian trade delegations in recent months to reassure India on the issue of trade imbalance. China's changed stance, however, is yet to make an impact on the balance sheets. On the border issue, too, China's position seems to have softened to a certain extent. Although the two sides are currently far from reaching a "breakthrough" in resolving border disputes, in the past two years, there has been substantial progress in this space. The border has evolved from tense close-range military contact in 2020 to disengagement with "buffer zones", while in terms of border management, the approach has shifted from crisis control to normalised border governance; there are even talks of "early and substantial harvest". China has also taken some measures, such as resuming and expanding the scale of the Kailash Mansarovar pilgrimage, reopening border trade sites, and restarting cross-border river-related data-sharing mechanisms to show goodwill towards India. A New Consensus In a multilateral platform like BRICS, although significant divergence continues to exist between Chinese and Indian positions on issues related to de-dollarisation, energy security, geopolitics, and relations with the West, there seems to be a new consensus emerging between the two sides.

75 Manifestos For 75 Districts:

AKHILESH YADAV'S MOVE FOR 2027 UP POLLS

The Samajwadi Party will break the tradition of releasing a single manifesto for all of Uttar Pradesh ahead of the 2027 Uttar Pradesh assembly polls. Party chief Akhilesh Yadav has put his stamp on a new mantra - "75 manifestos for UP's 75 districts". Virtually taking a leaf out of the UP government's "one district, one product" campaign, the party has created a plan to address the assessment that each district of Uttar Pradesh has different socio-economic equations, aspirations and challenges. Party leaders say "The One District, One Manifesto" formula will help in creating exclusive micro-level promises ahead of the elections. This is expected to help the Samajwadi Party align its candidates closely with what's driving the vote on the ground in each district. The template in each district will not be what the party promises to achieve across the state if voted to power. Instead, the focus will be on "how the party plans to transform the district". The micro-zoned manifesto has a big political advantage for the Samajwadi Party. It will help in making promises aligned with the varying caste and community equations in each district, something which a single state level manifesto fails to do. Since 2017, the SP has been contesting elections with big political players as allies. For the 2017 Uttar Pradesh assembly elections, the SP had allied with the Congress. On February 11, 2017, during a joint press conference, Akhilesh Yadav and Rahul Gandhi released a 10-point common minimum programme, outlining shared development goals if they came to power. Later both parties released their own independent manifestos for the campaign. Similarly in 2019, the SP tied up with the BSP. There was no joint manifesto. Both chose to issue their own set of promises. In the 2024 Lok Sabha polls in UP, the SP and Congress released their own individual manifestos. The Congress manifesto called the Nyay Patra was released on April 5, 2024, while the Samajwadi Party manifesto was released shortly after on April 10, 2024. But in almost every election the manifestos didn't gain traction. Alliances meant that the party's statewide manifesto used to stay extremely invisible. Also, the allies campaigned on separate party documents but parties shared common opposition themes against the ruling BJP. Still their specific promises diverged on several issues - such as the Samajwadi Party promising the revival of the Old Pension Scheme, which didn't find mention in the Congress manifesto. This time around, Akhilesh Yadav is trying to remove this deficiency to make the manifesto exercise truly count. During a selection strategy meeting nearly two months ago with district level office bearers, Akhilesh Yadav had moved the idea. He had told the party men that the challenges faced by Poorvanchal, Paschimi, Awadh and Bundelkhand regions are poles apart. "A common overarching manifesto for all of UP in the past used to miss the specific demands of people of different regions," he told party workers. Then party's state chief Shyam Lal Pal had issued the orders for its execution. The Samajwadi

Party's district level leaders have been asked to compile a comprehensive list of aspirations and challenges from each district. They have to put together a list of five key problems, projects which are lying dormant or neglected and what kind of employment opportunities already exist on the ground. The five target areas identified include education and health, jobs and industry, farmers and other artisans, infrastructure and tourism. A senior party leader said that the "think global act local" approach can help candidates contesting the assembly polls to reach out to the voters with a clear roadmap. Akhilesh Yadav had first planned the idea at a party meeting in Agra on September 12, 2025. He had later posted on X that the party is planning to create "local district level manifestos". "A manifesto for Noida in western UP can't be the same as the manifesto for Banda in Bundelkhand. Noida has urban infrastructure problems but it's an employment generating district. On the other hand in Banda infrastructure is poor and it's an employment seeking district," a leader said. The other factor cited for micro-zoning the manifesto was the difference between Lok Sabha and assembly elections.

The 'AIPC' Was Once Congress' Boldest Idea. What Happened To It?

RASHEED KIDWAI

In the Congress, creating an organisation has rarely been the difficult part. What has been challenging has been sustaining its relevance. The All India Professionals' Congress (AIPC) was one of those rare experiments that, when launched in 2017, appeared to answer a genuine political problem rather than merely accommodate another leader. Rahul Gandhi had correctly identified a constituency that had drifted almost completely outside the Congress ecosystem: doctors, lawyers, entrepreneurs, bankers, academics, technologists, management professionals, and an expanding urban middle class that followed politics intensely but wanted little to do with conventional party structures. Shashi Tharoor, as the AIPC's founding chairperson, was an obvious choice to lead it. He had the intellectual profile, an independent public following, and, crucially, the ability to make political participation respectable to people who were more comfortable in a boardroom or university seminar than inside a district Congress office. Nine years later, the wheel has turned again. On September 9, Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge appointed former Nizamabad MP Madhu Goud Yaskhi as the AIPC chairperson, succeeding Praveen Chakravarty, who has moved to the Rajya Sabha. Yaskhi inherits an organisation whose original argument has actually become more compelling with time. A Bridge Congress Briefly Built Tharoor understood something about professionals that conventional politicians often do not: most of them were not looking for political careers. They wanted political access without having to become full-time political workers. The early AIPC, therefore, deliberately behaved differently. Chapters met on weekends, sometimes in hotels and clubs rather than party offices. Professionals could contribute knowledge, policy suggestions, research, or campaign expertise without first mastering the Congress hierarchy. By April 2018, it had established 45 chapters across 20 states. A year later, membership was approaching 8,000. Professionals associated with it were helping the Congress with research, communication, and manifesto-making. In Chhattisgarh, the AIPC teams accompanied the manifesto committee through extensive stakeholder consultations ahead of the 2018 election. There was also an interesting contradiction. The more successful the experiment became, the more Tharoor himself became politically consequential. What began as Rahul's experiment in opening Congress politics to outsiders increasingly carried the imprint of a leader with an independent political constituency. Tharoor remained the AIPC chairman until November 2023, when Praveen Chakravarty replaced him. Years Of Invisibility Chakravarty was hardly an illogical appointment. An investment banker and political economist before entering Congress politics, he had headed the party's data analytics operation and had been closely associated with important policy exercises. On paper, he was precisely the sort of professional the AIPC was intended to attract. Nor is it accurate to say that absolutely nothing happened during his tenure.

The AIPC reorganised its professional domains, ran membership initiatives, sought inputs for party programmes, and took up issues affecting salaried professionals. Its campaign against the withdrawal of indexation benefits after the 2024 Budget was one example. Chakravarty also repeatedly made an argument the Congress badly needed to hear: that social justice alone could not substitute for an appeal to urban aspiration. After the Haryana defeat in 2024, he argued publicly that the Congress had failed to speak sufficiently to urban voters and should tell young Indians that there was nothing wrong with wanting to become prosperous - that the politics of aspiration and the politics of justice were complementary, not contradictory. It was an important argument. Yet the AIPC itself never acquired under Chakravarty the political personality it had possessed during its early years.

PI Industries brings CARVINT – A new generation insecticide to Indian farmers for advanced pest management

September 2026: PI Industries today announced the launch of CARVINT (Flometoquin 10% SC), a next-generation insecticide designed to provide effective control of Thrips and Diamond Back Moth (DBM) in crops like chilli, cabbage and cauliflower. With a distinct mode of action and long residual control, CARVINT is positioned as a new tool for progressive farmers seeking effective and sustainable pest-management solutions in focus on key markets across Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Maharashtra, Gujarat and Madhya Pradesh. Pest pressure remains a persistent challenge for vegetable farmers, particularly in high-value crops such as chilli and cole crops (cabbage and cauliflower). Thrips can reduce chilli yields by 25-50%, while Diamond Back Moth can cause significant losses in cabbage. Farmers also face challenges such as frequent sprays, shorter control duration, rising costs and growing resistance to existing chemistries. CARVINT addresses these challenges through a new active ingredient i.e. Flometoquin 10% SC, which belongs to IRAC Group 34, a new class of insecticides for Indian markets. This provides farmers with a differentiated option for managing key pests and supports resistance-management programmes through rotation with existing insecticide chemistries. Commenting on the launch, Mr. Saket Bhatnagar, CEO India

Brands, PI AgSciences, "Farmers today are navigating growing pest resistance, frequent spray requirements, shorter control duration and rising crop-management costs. CARVINT brings a differentiated mode of action that provides farmers with a new tool for effective and sustained pest management. Its novel mode of action also makes it a useful option within resistance-management programmes, enabling the responsible rotation of chemistries. Through innovations such as CARVINT, we remain committed to bringing differentiated solutions to Indian agriculture that address evolving challenges and support farmers in managing their crops more effectively." The launch adds to PI Industries' portfolio of differentiated agricultural solutions. With the launch of CARVINT, PI continues to expand its portfolio of innovative crop-protection and agricultural solutions.

SEBI Proposes Changes To Stock Market Timings; Two Options Suggested For CAS And F&O

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) on Saturday has proposed two alternative trading schedules for the closing auction session and equity derivatives market. This is a part of a wider review aimed at improving liquidity, transparency and price discovery. Under Option A, normal trading in stocks eligible for the closing auction session, or CAS, would continue until 3:30 pm. The CAS would then run from 3:31 pm to 3:40 pm, while trading in the futures and options segment would remain open until 3:45 pm. Option B proposes an earlier close for the affected cash-market stocks. Continuous trading would end at 3:15 pm, followed by the CAS from 3:15 pm. to 3:25 pm. The F&O market would close at its existing time of 3:30 p.m. Also Read | Layoffs Are Rising In Tech, But These Skills Are Helping People Unlock Better Pay SEBI has also proposed reducing the transition period before the CAS to one minute from five minutes. The trading window for equity derivatives after the auction would be shortened to five minutes from 10 minutes. The regulator has presented two approaches for determining derivatives settlement prices. The first would use trades from both the continuous trading session, or CTS, and the closing auction. The second would retain CTS-only settlement prices initially and consider including CAS trades after at least one year. No indicative index value based on the indicative equilibrium price would be displayed during the auction. Limit orders placed $\pm 1\%$ of reference price cannot be cancelled during CAS. Such orders can only be modified to improve the price. Unexecuted Iceberg orders would enter the auction as regular, fully disclosed limit orders.

TECH STOCKS FALL AFTER CALLS FOR AI DEVELOPMENT TO SLOW DOWN

While we wait for the US stock market to open in a few minutes, let's go over some of the questions our AI experts answered earlier. What is AI? Artificial intelligence is software that "can do things we normally associate with human intelligence" like pattern-spotting, making predictions and solving problems, AI correspondent Marc Cieslak explains. Could AI truly threaten humanity? We don't really know, writes our cyber correspondent Joe Tidy. He says some doomsday scenarios see the internet and all connected devices going down, plunging modern life into chaos, while others say the chance of an existential risk is low. Can we slow down AI? International agreements to slow AI will not be easy, senior technology reporter Chris Vallance says. OpenAI boss Sam Altman says pacing its development would not mean stopping, but development should be slower. What threat does AI pose? AI correspondent Marc Cieslak says many of the scenarios are "much in the realms of science fiction", but if a hostile nation used AI to break into a country's critical national infrastructure it could wreak "absolute havoc". Are there laws in place to protect against AI?

There are none, says Stephanie Hare, co-host of AI Decoded. What is AI's impact on the global market? AI now makes up somewhere between 30-40% of the US stock exchange value, says Stephanie Hare. A fall in stocks hurts the US economy, and because of this the US government doesn't want the market to stop. China's top intelligence official says the country must "balance development and security" when it comes to AI. Chen Yixin has called for stronger governance of the emerging technology, while warning of the national security risks it could pose. AI has become "a new arena for strategic rivalry among major powers", he wrote for China Cyberspace, a journal run by internet watchdog body the Cyberspace Administration of China. Chen says existing laws, regulations and ethical guidelines must be improved, and risk warning and emergency response systems should be developed as safeguards. He warns of the dangers of "hostile forces" such as foreign intelligence using AI and calls for international cooperation. As we just mentioned, OpenAI's Sam Altman is among those calling for caution with AI development. On Saturday, Altman wrote on X that he will follow Anthropic's lead and introduce independent evaluators with "employee-like access" to the company. He followed this up a few hours ago with two more posts in which he warns of two outcomes to be avoided: that humanity could "lose control of the future to AI", or that it produces a world with "too much concentration of power". He notes that "when we talk about 'pacing', we do not mean 'stopping'", but that progress "should be slower than it otherwise could be". "We are unapologetically on Team Humanity, and AI must always serve people," Altman says. Since it was founded in 2015, OpenAI has faced scrutiny over several incidents, including in July - when its models went rogue during a test and hacked online platform Hugging Face. Dario Amodei of Anthropic and Sam Altman, chief executive of OpenAI, have both called for regulation and a "slow-down" of AI's development. It's not the first time bosses or wider industry voices have clamoured for such action. But questions have continued to mount over what any sort of "slow-down" - also backed by SpaceX boss Elon Musk - would actually look like.

Dubai's tourism sector records highest visitor numbers since February as Arabian Travel Market 2026 opens

Hotel sector highlights strong performance as DET and its partners leverage the industry event to deepen global trade relationships and drive future demand Hotel occupancy of 66% in August 2026 represents 89% of the occupancy rate over the same period during the previous year DET is hosting more than 300 international travel trade professionals from over 40 countries through its 'ATM Hosted Buyers Programme' India, 15th September 2026: Dubai's tourism industry is increasingly demonstrating its strength, with the city's hotel sector delivering sustained performance growth, according to the latest data released by the Dubai Department of Economy and Tourism (DET) on the opening day of Arabian Travel Market (ATM) 2026. The performance through August reflects the strength of the systems, partnerships and diversified market base that Dubai and its partners have built over the years. It is a testament to the resolve of an industry that has continued to invest, innovate and deliver for its guests, and it underlines confidence in the destination's position heading into the final months of 2026. Hotel occupancy reached 66% in August, representing 89% of the city's occupancy levels in August 2025, and continuing a steep climb from 36% occupancy in March 2026. That sustained upward trajectory is a clear signal of underlying demand and the strength of Dubai's hospitality sector. As a number of properties have begun implementing extensive renovation projects to further elevate the guest experience and embed future readiness, hotel room inventory approached 149,000 rooms by the end of August 2026. In the first eight months of the year, the emirate's hotels recorded 21.61 million occupied room nights, underscoring the scale at which the industry continues to operate. The strong hotel performance was reflected in visitor numbers, with Dubai welcoming approximately 869,000 international overnight visitors in August 2026, building on month-on-month, double-digit growth since March. This represented its strongest monthly volume since February 2026, taking total international visitation to 6.97 million across the first eight months of the year. Dubai continued to draw visitors from a broad mix of international source regions. Western Europe remained the leading regional contributor from January to August, accounting for 20% of visitation, followed by South Asia at 17%, the GCC at 16%, CIS and Eastern Europe at 14%, MENA at 10%, North East and South East Asia at 9%, Americas at 7%, Africa at 5% and Australasia at 2%. This diversified mix provides a vast international base from which DET, and its partners can continue to stimulate demand across established and emerging markets. It also aligns with the goals of the Dubai Economic Agenda, D33, to further consolidate Dubai's position as a leading global destination for business and leisure and build a resilient and future-focused visitor economy. Diverse source markets His Excellency Issam Kazim, CEO of Dubai Corporation for Tourism and Commerce Marketing (DCTCM), part of the Dubai Department of Economy and Tourism, said: "The true grit of any city is tested not when the path is smooth, but during challenging times, and in line with our leadership's direction, we do not wait for the perfect conditions to continue delivering.

RS 10 LAKH IN SMALL-CAP FUNDS: HOW MUCH RISK ARE YOU TAKING?

Investing Rs 10 lakh in small-cap mutual funds can offer higher growth potential over the long term, but it also exposes investors to sharper price movements. Small-cap stocks tend to react strongly to changes in economic conditions, earnings, interest rates and investor sentiment. For an investor with Rs 10 lakh in small-cap funds, a market correction can therefore lead to a substantial fall in portfolio value. What Are Small-Cap Mutual Funds? Small-cap funds are equity mutual funds that primarily invest in small-cap companies. Under SEBI's classification, small-cap companies are ranked 251st onwards by full market capitalisation. Also Read | Layoffs Are Rising In Tech, But These Skills Are Helping People Unlock Better Pay These funds must invest at least 65% of their assets in small-cap companies. Since smaller companies generally have lower trading volumes and less established businesses than larger firms, their stocks can be more volatile. Key Risks Of Small-Cap Funds Market risk: Small-cap stocks can fall during economic slowdowns, market corrections, changes in interest rates or company-specific problems. Volatility: Prices can move sharply in either direction. A Rs 10 lakh investment can gain quickly during a rally but lose a sizeable amount during a correction. Liquidity risk: Smaller companies can have lower trading volumes. During a market sell-off, this can make it harder for fund managers to buy or sell stocks at desired prices. Longer recovery: Small-cap stocks may take longer to recover after a sharp correction.

Smartphone Makers Want GST Slashed To 5% To Offset 45% Price Hike On Entry-Level Handsets; Write To FM

India's smartphone industry has sought a sharp reduction in the Goods and Services Tax (GST) on mobile phones, with industry body the India Cellular & Electronics Association (ICEA) urging the government to cut the rate from 18% to 5%. In a letter to Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman and Electronics and Information Technology Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw, ICEA has sought that the proposal be placed on the agenda of the next GST Council meeting. The industry body has argued that a lower GST rate could help bring down handset prices, revive weak domestic demand and support the next phase of India's smartphone manufacturing growth. According to ICEA, weak domestic demand has emerged as a growing concern for the smartphone industry, even as India continues to see growth in mobile-phone exports. The industry body said entry-level handset prices have increased by around 35-45% over the past year, putting additional pressure on consumers, particularly in the affordable smartphone segment. ICEA also highlighted a sharp increase in memory costs, saying memory prices have surged nearly fourfold as AI data centres absorb a growing share of global supply. The combination of higher component costs and elevated handset prices has made affordable smartphones increasingly difficult to access for consumers. The impact has been particularly visible in the entry-level segment. ICEA said smart smartphones priced below Rs 10,000 now account for less than 5% of industry supply. The industry body believes a reduction in GST could provide some relief to consumers by lowering the tax burden on handsets and helping manufacturers address affordability concerns. ICEA has therefore called for mobile phones to be moved from the existing 18% GST rate to the 5% slab. ICEA said the proposed GST reduction could have a broader impact on the sector by improving smartphone affordability, reviving consumer demand and increasing smartphone adoption. The association has also linked the request to India's ambitions of becoming a major global electronics manufacturing and export hub. While India's mobile-phone exports have expanded significantly in recent years, ICEA has flagged weak domestic consumption as a challenge for the industry's next phase of growth. The industry body has argued that stronger domestic demand would complement India's export-led manufacturing push and help sustain the expansion of the mobile-phone ecosystem. The request comes as smartphone makers face a difficult combination of rising component costs and weaker affordability. The sharp increase in memory prices, in particular, has become a concern as AI data centres compete for memory and other semiconductor components. With higher input costs being reflected in handset prices, the industry is seeking policy support to prevent further erosion in demand. ICEA's proposal will now be closely watched ahead of the next GST Council agenda, with the industry hoping that a lower tax rate can provide relief to both consumers and manufacturers.

Russia hits Ukrainian train shortly after Boris Johnson and top European officials leave station

A Russian drone has hit a train near the Ukraine-Poland border shortly after former UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson and top European security officials had passed through. No casualties were reported after the strike at Yahodyn, which hit the train's engine. All the passengers had been evacuated, Ukrainian authorities said. Johnson and other European national security advisers, including the UK's Jonathan Powell, had passed along the same line on a different train on their way back from a conference in Kyiv. Russia's defence ministry said it had struck "railway infrastructure" in western Ukraine, but Ukraine's state railway company Ukrzaliznytsia said the drone's target "could have been the diplomatic train".

Professor Katarzyna Pisarska, chair of the Warsaw Security Forum, told the BBC she was in the same carriage as Johnson and Powell, and the attack had happened about 30 minutes after their train had crossed into the Polish border. In a statement, Ukraine's railway authority Ukrzaliznytsia said the diplomatic train "had left the station earlier than expected because of the timetable change... due to constant threats of Russian strikes". It also said that an evacuation order for passengers on the hit train had been given "just 15 minutes" before the strike by a Russian jet-propelled drone. Former CIA chief David Petraeus, who had been on board another train at Yahodyn station at the time of the strike, said the incident was "terrifying". In an interview with the New York Times, Petraeus said: "This is the act of a truly barbaric leader trying to terrorise Ukrainian civilians." Both Ukrainian and Polish authorities said the Russian drone had struck 2km (1.2 miles) from the Polish border. Former Swedish Prime Minister Carl Bildt, who had also attended the conference in Kyiv, told the BBC that passengers on board his train had been told to prepare for evacuation before subsequently being allowed to continue their journey. That train then safely arrived at Poland's border station in Dorohusk. Some reports have suggested Bildt was on the same train as Johnson, but the former UK prime minister has not confirmed any details. Johnson wrote on X: "I don't know what warped logic drove Putin to blow up a stationary Ukrainian locomotive on the Polish border this morning. He said this was "the kind of random and senseless attack Ukrainians are enduring every day - even on civilian railways" and urged Kyiv's allies to urgently provide Ukrainians "the air defences they need". Ukraine has made repeated pleas to its allies - particularly the US - to provide more interceptors to defend against daily Russian attacks that increasingly use fast-moving ballistic missiles and jet-propelled drones. Ukrainian Foreign Minister Andrii Sybiha said the "barbaric strikes" at the Ukraine-Poland border in Yahodyn amounted to "[Russian President Vladimir] Putin's terror 'knocking' directly on the doors of the EU and Nato" and renewed calls for more sanctions on Moscow. "Putin needs to understand that his barbarism will be met with decisive action that increases the cost of war for him to an unacceptable level. This is the only way to stop him," he said. In Poland, Prime Minister Donald Tusk held an emergency meeting to discuss the latest developments. "The escalation of the actions from the Russian side is becoming a reality, and they are getting closer and closer to our border." The EU's foreign policy chief Kaja Kallas has accused Russia of attempting to scare Western countries with the attack. "I think we should act the opposite. We should show that we are there for Ukraine and we are not scared," she told reporters in Finland during a summit on Arctic strategy. Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters on Monday: "Our military has been conducting operations across the entire territory of Ukraine and will continue to do so." Johnson and other top European security advisers were on their way back from the Yalta European Strategy (YES) conference in Kyiv - an annual event that brings together leaders and experts from politics, business, security and mass media. Ukraine said strikes had continued overnight, with the country's air force reporting that 85 of 108 Russian drones that were launched had been shot down. Police in Chernihiv said on Monday morning that three people had died after a warehouse belonging to an agricultural business was struck in Pryluky. Russia's defence ministry also reported that nearly 400 Ukrainian drones had been destroyed over Russian regions overnight. Russia appears to be escalating its war against Ukraine by targeting trains, railway depots, petrol stations and border crossings.

China criticises idea it is in 'malicious competition' over AI

China has hit out against what it has called "threat narratives" over AI governance and warned against "engaging in confrontation and malicious competition". It follows Anthropic CEO Dario Amodei's calls for a slowdown in AI development - but in a way that prevents China from pulling ahead in the AI race. Over the past week, industry insiders at the leading US artificial intelligence labs have been warning in extremely stark terms about the potential threat AI poses, with some saying it could wipe out humanity. But US President Donald Trump has said that his priority is making sure the US develops the tech faster than China. On Monday, China's foreign ministry spokesperson Guo Jiakun told reporters that "narratives of threat, confrontation, and malicious competition serve only to disrupt the process of global AI governance and are not in anyone's interest". "All parties should work together to advance AI in a manner that is open, inclusive, beneficial to all, and oriented toward the good," he added. His comments highlight the difficulties in getting an agreement between the world's two leading AI powers. An agreement between the US and China to regulate AI development is "next to impossible", says Chang Jun Yan, an assistant professor with the military studies programme at Singapore's S Rajaratnam School of International Studies. "As part of each state's core national security ty interests, cooperation in taking things slower and more safely in relation to AI, is very, very unlikely." Artificial intelligence now sits at the heart of the US-China rivalry as the world's two largest economies seek to gain an edge in advanced tech. Despite US export bans on critical chips, Chinese AI innovation has been expanding, driven by open-source technology and Beijing's backing. Many experts believe the US is still ahead, and Chinese firms are trying to catch up as they struggle to raise the hundreds of billions of dollars that investors are ploughing into American AI. But Beijing, including Chinese leader Xi Jinping himself, has also spoken about the risks posed by AI. China must "balance development and security", and introduce and improve relevant laws and ethical guidelines, and strengthen prevention of risks, to "safeguard the interests of the people and national security", state security minister Chen Yixin wrote on Sunday. He warned of the dangers of

"hostile forces" such as foreign intelligence using AI and called for international cooperation. "There are strong signals that Washington and Beijing share an understanding of frontier risks," Kenton Thibaut, a senior resident China fellow at the Atlantic Council, wrote recently. China has "technical reasons" to work with the US, she argues, because its developers would be able to see how their models are deployed outside China, and detect and understand vulnerabilities. In July, China set up the World AI Cooperation Organisation, which aims to shape global AI governance. And speaking at the Brics summit in India on Sunday, Xi proposed creating a community for open-source AI. All this comes as calls for AI regulation grow louder in the US, especially after a former Anthropic researcher Jacob Coxon said last week that "there is a strong chance that we could all die in the immediate future" if the current pace of development continued.

Hyrox apologises for allowing race to continue after athlete soils herself

International athletics brand Hyrox has issued an apology after it came under fire for allowing an athlete to complete a race in Beijing despite soiling herself midway through the event. Footage of the woman competing in the indoor fitness competition raised concerns around hygiene and questions over why race organisers allowed her to continue. After a wave of criticism, Hyrox co-founder Moritz Fürste apologised to all those affected "directly or indirectly" by the incident and said the brand is working to make immediate rule changes. However, one expert told the BBC that allowing the athlete to continue could represent an attitude within the company that places sporting results over important factors. In a statement posted to Instagram, Fürste said Hyrox "did not handle the situation like we should have". He accepted responsibility for failing to foresee the incident and committed to "improving event processes" to "prevent situations like this from happening again".

SWEDISH LEFT-WING BLOC NARROWLY AHEAD WITH ELECTION TOO CLOSE TO CALL

Sweden's general election remains too close to call with the left-wing bloc marginally ahead as the vote count continues. With more than 90% of ballots processed early on Monday, the left-wing bloc was in front by approximately 20,000 votes. Preliminary counts by Sweden's electoral authority projected the Social Democrats' Magdalena Andersson would likely finish with a three-seat majority over the rival four-party coalition led by current conservative Prime Minister Ulf Kristersson. Kristersson has been supported in government by the hard-right Sweden Democrats (SD), which have neo-Nazi roots. He has promised cabinet jobs for the SD if he stays in charge. Early on Monday morning, Kristersson said it remained unclear who would form the next government. "The voters have had their say, but we still don't have a final result. Which government will lead Sweden in the coming years is still an open question," he told supporters. No major media outlets have declared a winner yet. Sweden uses a mandate distribution voting system, a proportional representation method to elect "mandates", or "seats", in the Riksdag - the Swedish parliament. A party needs at least 4% of the vote to enter parliament. With 95% of votes reported, the left-wing bloc led by the Social Democrats was ahead with 176 mandates compared to the right-wing bloc's 173. Counting will continue on Wednesday before the final results determine which side has a clearer path to majority. The counting restarts then to include early votes that were submitted late, as well as votes from abroad that did not arrive before election day. It is not yet known how many votes will be counted on Wednesday, but back in 2022, more than 220,000 votes were included in the later count. If the figures are similar this year, Wednesday's count could make the difference in the outcome, given that only about 28,000 votes currently separate the blocs. Sweden has two major political blocs featuring four parties on the right and four on the left - meaning coalition and minority governments are relatively common. On Sunday night, Andersson - the leader of the country's main opposition party - urged supporters to wait for the final result, but added that if the current results hold, "Sweden will have a new government." Her party, the Social Democrats, have been a major force in Swedish politics since the end of World War Two. But SD - founded by Nazi sympathisers in the 1980s - had been shunned for years until 2022 when it became the country's second largest party after campaigning on violent crime and immigration. Both Andersson's party and the far-right SD have lost support, according to early count results. As of Monday morning, the Social Democrats were on track for their worst result in more than a century with 28 per cent, while the count showed the hard-right SD party was losing support for the first time since 2010 when it entered the Riksdag. Other parties comprising the left-wing bloc, including the Left Party, Greens and Centre Party have increased their support. Turnout also dropped to approximately 80%, down four points compared to the 2022 poll.

Malaysian boy acquitted for murder of schoolgirl on grounds of insanity

A Malaysian teenage boy charged with the high-profile murder of a female schoolmate has been acquitted, with the judge finding the boy was mentally unsound during the incident. He had fatally stabbed Yap Shing Xuen in a toilet at their secondary school on the outskirts of the capital Kuala Lumpur. The killing of the 16-year-old girl had shocked Malaysia and sparked debate about the effects of social media on children. Police previously had said they suspected social media could have influenced the boy, who was 14 at the time. The case was seen to have spurred authorities to limit children's access to social media, which began earlier this year. The boy - who cannot be named under Malaysian law as he is still a minor - had pleaded not guilty to the murder charge. During the trial defence lawyers did not deny that the boy killed the girl, but argued that he had suffered from poor mental health for years and asked for his acquittal on the grounds of insanity. An expert witness, a psychiatrist, testified that the boy had schizophrenia, and had suffered from mental illness and experienced delusions since he was nine years old. The boy's condition was said to have worsened during the pandemic and when he eventually returned to school. Lawyers had said that the boy would need medication for the rest of his life to manage symptoms. On Monday the judge ruled that the boy would be acquitted, but also ordered for him to be detained and to receive treatment at a psychiatric hospital.

SIX DEAD, 130 MISSING AFTER INDONESIAN FERRY CAPSIZES IN JAVA SEA

Six people have died and 107 have been rescued from a capsized Indonesian passenger ferry in the Java Sea, authorities have said. Another 130 people are still missing after contact was lost with the Virgo Transport8 ship, as it encountered bad weather. The ferry was travelling from Surabaya to the South Kalimantan city of Banjarmasin and was last reported to be about 150km (93 miles) south of Banjarmasin around 02:00 on Sunday (18:00 GMT on Saturday). Ships and a helicopter have been deployed to the scene, with 280 personnel taking part in a search and rescue operation. All vessels in the area of the Java Sea have been alerted to report any signs of passengers. There were 213 passengers and 30 crew members on board the 390ft (119m) ferry. The ship left Surabaya at 10:33 on Saturday and was scheduled to arrive in Banjarmasin on Sunday at 14:00, according to data from two maritime monitoring sites. Authorities received the initial distress report at 04:10. A joint task force involving Indonesia's search and rescue agency, navy, maritime police and other parties has been set up for the rescue effort. Rusmilawati, a resident of Banjarmasin, went to the port to seek information about eight relatives who were passengers on the ship. They were travelling back to Banjarmasin after visiting the tombs of several Islamic scholars in Java.

"They flew there initially, but for the return journey they wanted to try travelling by ship," she told BBC Indonesia. As of Sunday afternoon local time, Rusmilawati said she had not received any information from officials about whether her relatives had been rescued. The family last heard from one of the relatives through a WhatsApp status update. In the post, the relative wrote: "The waves are really frightening tonight. Or is this just what it's normally like travelling by ship, rocking and crashing against the waves?" "Hopefully they're safe," Rusmilawati said. Meanwhile, Misnah broke down in tears after learning that her husband, Ahmad Supandi, had survived.

BCCI Explains Pak's Mohsin Naqvi Snub, Issues Clear Statement On Asia Cup Trophy Row

The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) Secretary Devajit Saikia on Monday said the women's cricket team's refusal to accept the Asia Cup trophy from Asian Cricket Council's (ACC) Pakistani chief Mohsin Naqvi was a "conscious, institutional" call taken by the Board, keeping circumstances and sentiments in view. The Indian women's team defeated Sri Lanka by 72 runs in the final on Sunday in Dubai but did not accept the trophy from Naqvi, continuing a trend started by the men's team during the 2025 Asia Cup following the Pahalgam terror attack that killed 26 people. Naqvi could only hand over the runners-up medals to the Sri Lankan women's team and continued to wait on the podium for Harmanpreet Kaur and Co., but they refused to change their stance. In the end, the Indian team celebrated the triumph without the trophy, much like Suryakumar Yadav's men last year. It was later explained that the BCCI had asked the Indian women's team to adopt this stance, in sync with the bitter political relations that exist between India and Pakistan. However, Saikia explained that the stance is purely an institutional decision, and not against the tournament, the players or the sport. "We had taken a conscious decision, considering all prevailing aspects, and our position had been communicated to the ACC in advance, that the Indian team would not participate in the trophy presentation under the circumstances," Saikia told PTI. "Given the circumstances and the sentiments prevailing in the country, the BCCI felt that it would not be appropriate for the team to receive the trophy in the proposed manner. "This was a firm institutional decision, reflective of the position we have maintained, and was not directed at the players, the tournament or the sport," he added. Following the terror attack in April last year, the two countries were also engaged in a brief military showdown in May. While there is a prevailing debate whether India should boycott all games against Pakistan, secretary Saikia reiterated that all sporting commitments would always be fulfilled as government of India has allowed them to play the hostile neighbours in multi-nation tournament. "Our participation in the Asia Cup was in fulfilment of our sporting commitments as a member of the ACC by adhering to the policy in place, and there was never any question of compromising on the spirit of the game or our commitment to international cricket. "However, participation in a multinational tournament and the manner in which the trophy is received are two separate matters," the Advocate General of Assam stated. While holding the trophy aloft would have been a great moment, the BCCI secretary is happy that Harmanpreet Kaur's side accomplished its assignment to perfection. "The Indian women's team has done what matters most, they have won the Asia Cup through their outstanding performance on the field. We as well as whole nation are immensely proud of the team, and the achievement belongs to the players and to Indian cricket." The women's team will now be flying to Japan to defend its gold medal won in Hangzhou during the last edition of the Asian Games.

Vaibhav Sooryavanshi On Bench, Pressure On Sanju Samson After Fresh Failure

The first T20I of the three-match series against Afghanistan began on a dominant note for India as they registered a seven-wicket victory in Delhi. Opting to bowl first, India restricted Afghanistan to 156/8, with pacer Arshdeep Singh returning impressive figures of 3/19 in four overs. Azmatullah Omarzai was the lone bright spot for Afghanistan, scoring 64 off 44 balls. In reply, fans at the Arun Jaitley Stadium witnessed a batting masterclass from Abhishek Sharma, who unleashed complete carnage. The left-hander hammered 82 off just 32 deliveries, including seven fours and seven sixes, as India chased down the target in only 13.4 overs. Despite the emphatic win, Team India's selection decisions have come under scrutiny, with the exclusion of batting prodigy Vaibhav Sooryavanshi raising plenty of questions. The 15-year-old sensation, who has already taken the cricketing world by storm with his fearless strokeplay, was benched for the opening match as the management opted to field the experienced Sanju Samson alongside Abhishek Sharma at the top of the order. However, the decision did not pay off immediately, as Samson managed only 10 runs before being dismissed by Omarzai in the third over. Sooryavanshi's Rise Sooryavanshi earned his maiden India call-up for the two-match T20I series against Ireland in June this year but did not get a game. As India suffered a disappointing whitewash in that series, the youngster's exclusion became a talking point, especially after his blockbuster IPL campaign. Later, during India's five-match T20I series against England, Sooryavanshi finally made his international debut in the second game and featured in a total of three matches. However, he failed to make a significant impact and was subsequently dropped for the final match, with Samson returning to the playing XI. Sooryavanshi's breakthrough moment came against Zimbabwe, where he became the youngest player to score a T20I half-century and announced his arrival on the international stage.

BEN SHELTON HUNGRY FOR MORE GRAND SLAM CHANCES AFTER US OPEN DISAPPOINTMENT

Ben Shelton's first Grand Slam final ended in defeat on Sunday, but the 23-year-old American said his four-set loss to Alexander Zverev at the US Open only whetted his appetite for more. "It's such a cool moment. Walking out on that court today, there's nothing like it. I've never felt anything like that before" Shelton said. "It's an addicting feeling being in positions like this." Shelton came up short in his bid to become the first American man in 23 years to lift a Grand Slam trophy. But his best-ever run in a major included a stunning five-set win over seven-time Grand Slam champion Carlos Alcaraz and a gritty semifinal fightback against Frances Tiafoe. It was a dramatic turnaround from a second-round exit at Roland Garros and an even more disappointing first-round defeat at Wimbledon. "Obviously, for me, it sucked the last couple of Grand Slams sitting at home for 10, 11, 12 days while the tournament is still going on, watching everyone else run through the draw," Shelton said. "It's motivating.

Losing in the final is also motivating, but this is the position I want to be in." Shelton enjoyed a quick rise after turning professional in 2022, breaking into the top 20 the following year after reaching the Australian Open quarter-finals, the US Open semi-finals and bagging his first ATP title in Tokyo. Now he wants to be a consistent contender on the game's biggest stages, where the best-of-five set format over two weeks against the game's best is a physical and mental grind. "I was tired before I took the court today," he said. "Finals of a Slam, played almost 30 sets, something like that, over the last two weeks. "It's something that I can continue to work to improve, but obviously my first time that I've been here in this position, the most tennis that I've played in two weeks." The big-hitting American also believes he has plenty of room to improve his game. "I don't think I'm anywhere near the player that I want to be," he said. "To win on Sundays, you've got to play very, very high level of great tennis.

Pakistan Hit Rock Bottom, ICC Imposes Huge Penalty, Deduct Points For Code Of Conduct Breach

Pakistan were on Monday fined 50 per cent of the match fess of their third and final Test against England at Birmingham, along with a deduction of 11 World Test Championship points for maintaining slow over-rate. The ICC said on their website that Pakistan, who were crushed 0-3 in the Test series by hosts England, were found to be 11 overs short of the target "after time allowances were taken into consideration". Pakistan had lost the series opener at Leeds by an innings and 103 runs, the second Test at Lord's by 194 runs and the third Test at Edgbaston by 8 wickets. "Pakistan have been hit with a pair of sanctions for maintaining a slow over-rate during the third and final ICC

World Test Championship contest against England in Birmingham," the ICC said. The sanctions were imposed by ICC match referee Ranjan Madugalle, on-field umpires Paul Reiffel and Chris Gaffaney, third umpire Allahudien Palekar and fourth umpire Russell Warren. "It means Pakistan lose ground at the bottom of their match fee for each over their team fails to bowl within the allotted time, with the maximum penalty capped at 50 percent of the match fee." "In addition, as per Article 16.11.2 of the ICC World Test Championship playing conditions, a side is penalised one point for each over short. Consequently, 11 World Test Championship points have been deducted from Pakistan's points total," the ICC said. Languishing at the bottom of the WTC points table in the ninth position, Pakistan have only two wins to and seven defeats from nine Tests so far. Pakistan will host Sri Lanka for a two-Test series in November at Rawalpindi and Lahore in their next WTC assignment.

Honda changes F1 design boss after slow start to return

Hunt responds to controversial Sweeney advert

British sprinter Amy Hunt is among the female athletes to speak out against a controversial sports gambling advert starring actress Sydney Sweeney. The advert has gone viral online and features American Sweeney naked but covering parts of her body with various pieces of sporting equipment. Hunt, who became a four-time European champion earlier this summer, referenced the advert after she ran a season's best 22.10 seconds to finish fourth in the 200m final at the Ultimate Championship in Budapest on Sunday. "Sydney Sweeney, this is what women in sport look like," Hunt said in her post-race interview with Sport.

SHANE LOWRY CAPS FOUR-YEAR DROUGHT WITH RECORD 11-SHOT IRISH OPEN WIN

Aspinall vacates UFC heavyweight title

Britain's Tom Aspinall has vacated his UFC heavyweight title because of complications in his recovery from an eye injury. The 33-year-old has not fought since October, when the first defence of his title against Cyril Gane ended in a no-contest following several eye pokes. Aspinall was diagnosed with a rare eye condition, and has had persistent double vision and several operations. "I am absolutely gutted. I have chased this dream since I was 10 years old," he said in a statement. "I know what it's like to have your career put on hold and I want the other fighters to have the opportunity to compete for the title." In June Aspinall said he had returned to full training for a rematch with France's Gane and suggested they could fight in September. In August Aspinall rejected reports that he would leave the UFC. "I am not done. Stepping away from the title is not stepping away from the sport or the dream," he said on Monday. "I will continue doing everything I can to get healthy, get cleared and get back to competing as soon as possible." UFC president Dana White hinted over the weekend that Aspinall could be stripped of the title. This month Valentina Shevchenko vacated the women's flyweight title because of persistent injuries. Gane beat Alex Pereira to win the interim heavyweight title in June before calling for a rematch with Aspinall. Why Did Tom Aspinall Give Up The UFC Heavyweight Title? Tom Aspinall's championship run stalled the moment Gane caught him with two accidental eye pokes at UFC 321 in Abu Dhabi. At the time, referee Jason Herzog ruled the incident unintentional before waving the fight off as a no contest. "Ongoing eye complications mean I cannot get cleared to fight right now. I've had multiple surgeries, accidents and infections, and done everything possible to get back to competing. I had previously agreed to a fight date and was back sparring, Shane Lowry gave Irish golf fans a Sunday they will remember for years. The 39-year-old produced a stunning 7-under 63 to win the 2026 Amgen Irish Open by a record 11 shots at Doonbeg. Lowry finished 23-under for the tournament, breaking the event's 72-hole scoring record and ending a four-year wait for an individual title. The victory also gave him his second Irish Open crown, 17 years after winning the event as an amateur. Shane Lowry's Record 11-Shot Irish Open Win Lowry entered Sunday with a four-shot lead after shooting a course-record 62 on Friday. He never allowed the chasing pack back into the contest, making eight birdies and just one bogey during his final round. His four-round total was 257, seven shots better than Jon Rahm's previous record of 264. Patrick Reed and Joaquin Niemann finished tied for second at 12-under, while Rasmus Neergaard-Petersen took third at 11-under. Lowry's 11-shot winning margin also broke Bernhard Langer's previous Irish Open record of 10 shots, set in 1987. His victory came at Trump International Golf Links & Hotel in Doonbeg, County Clare. The final hole brought another memorable moment. Lowry made a long birdie putt on the 18th as the home crowd celebrated around him. U.S. President Donald Trump, who owns the venue, was also present and handed Lowry the trophy after the round.
