CONGRESS CALLS DELHI A 'FORTRESS', SEEKS CEC'S RESIGNATION

NEW DELHI (TSIT)
The national capital has been turned into a "fortress" with armed security personnel deployed across the city amid protests by young people over alleged threats to their constitutional right to vote, Congress general secretary in-charge communications Jairam Ramesh said on Saturday, demanding the resignation of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar and immediate suspension of the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. In a strongly worded post on X, Ramesh accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi and union Home Minister Amit Shah of being unsettled by peaceful demonstrations against what the Congress alleges is the systematic exclusion of eligible voters from electoral rolls. "The nation's capital has been turned into a fortress. Armed security personnel are all over the place," he wrote. "The PM-HM duo is extremely nervous and rattled by a peaceful protest by youth deeply concerned with the planned stealing of their Constitutional right to vote guaranteed by Article 326," Ramesh alleged. His remarks came amid an intensifying confrontation between the Congress-led Opposition and the Election Commission of India (ECI) over the SIR exercise, alleged large-scale deletions from electoral rolls and the accountability of the poll panel. Opposition parties have accused the Commission of compromising the integrity of the electoral process and demanded the restoration of allegedly deleted names, greater transparency in the revision exercise and effective safeguards to ensure that eligible citizens are not deprived of their voting rights. Ramesh also questioned the circumstances surrounding Kumar's appointment as Chief Election Commissioner and criticised the Chief Election Commissioner and Other Election Commissioners (Appointment, Conditions of Service and Term of Office) Act, 2023. The legislation was passed by Parliament in December 2023 amid the suspension of Opposition MPs during the Winter Session.

RSS chief Mohan Bhagwat, CEC Gyanesh Kumar and National Security Adviser Ajit Doval the "villains of this story", saying that they were "slowly finding the space closing around them"."We are surrounding you, and we are not going to back down. EC resolves age discrepancies for 2.7 lakh Maharashtra voters

Mumbai ■ (TSIT):

In a swift administrative intervention, the Election Commission of India (ECI) team on Saturday successfully resolved age-related issues for around 2.7 lakh voters in Maharashtra.

The corrective measures were taken following a special request by the Maharashtra Chief Electoral Officer (CEO) S. Chockalingam.

According to official updates, the discrepancies were addressed promptly before the conclusion of the claims and objections period. "At the request of Maharashtra CEO, the ECI team resolved age-related issues of 2.7 lakh electors in time, that is, before the claims and objections period ended, thus avoiding the need of filling up Form-8 for age correction," the Office of Maharashtra CEO said on Saturday in a post on social media platform X.

This timely intervention has provided significant relief to voters, effectively eliminating the requirement for individuals to manually fill out Form-8 for age corrections in the electoral rolls.

The proactive resolution ensures greater accuracy in voter lists while streamlining the voter revision process ahead of upcoming electoral milestones.

Earlier, the ECI extended the deadline to file claims and objections for the SIR drive to October 12 in Maharashtra, while processing notices, claims, and objections will conclude by November 10.

The state's final voter list will officially be published on November 16.

Notices were issued to 1.22 crore voters flagged for logical errors or missing document matches. To ease the process, citizens no longer need to visit Electoral Registration Officers (EROs) in person—they can respond directly by sending notices and required documents via WhatsApp. Out of 1,51 crore voters whose names were omitted from the draft rolls, only 390,000 have resubmitted fresh registration forms over the past month.

In response, District Collectors have been instructed to conduct dedicated voter registration camps across all junior and senior colleges, with mandatory reporting on student voter enrollment numbers.

The Office of the Maharashtra CEO has launched targeted registration drives and door-to-door verification campaigns across the state.

Operating under the guidelines of the ECI, election authorities have committed to ensuring that no eligible citizen is left off the electoral roll and no ineligible entries remain.

Booth Level Officers (BLOs) are deployed at campus sites to assist eligible students with completing application forms and to resolve queries regarding the SIR workflow, the Office of Maharashtra CEO said in a statement.

BLOs are conducting home visits to identify eligible citizens missing from the Draft Electoral Roll and collect Form-6 following verification. For residents unavailable during home visits, special voter registration camps will be held at all designated polling stations on October 10 and October 11.

Citizens whose names appear on the list of absent or migrated voters (compiled during house-to-house enumeration) can apply for re-enrolment or correction. The official list of absent/shifted voters has been published online at ceoelection.maharashtra.gov.in for public verification.

Manipur hills flare up again, Naga-Kuki clashes claim at least 6 lives in 24 hours

Imphal: At least six people have been killed and over a dozen houses torched by suspected Naga and Kuki militants in a fresh flare-up of violence involving the two communities in Manipur's hill districts of Kangpoki, Kamjong and Ukhrul since Friday, sources in the security establishment told The Print.

However, till Saturday evening, there was no official confirmation from the Manipur Police on the exact number of casualties. The epicentre of the flare-up was Chassad village in Kamjong, where suspected militants killed a 42-year-old Kuki woman Friday night. Though Kamjong is a Naga-majority district, Chassad village has a sizable Kuki population.

Following the woman's death, tension started soaring as suspected armed groups on both sides started torching houses of the other community. In the ensuing violence, a 22-year-old man was killed Saturday morning in Chassad village. The clashes between the two communities then reportedly spread to Kangpokpi, a Kuki-dominated district with pockets of Naga population. A senior official said a heavy exchange of fire took place between the security forces and armed groups in Tapon and Makui Ashang villages in Kangpokpi. Both the villages are Naga-dominated.

In a separate incident, a Nepali man was killed in Ukhrul district after suspected militants fired at his vehicle, a senior police official said.

Tension has also been reported in Tamenglong district, which is Naga-dominated, and Noney, which has a mixed Naga and Kuki population.

A senior security official said Saturday evening that the situation has more or less been brought under control, though there is tension between the two communities in the affected districts.

Manipur has been reeling under ethnic conflict since 3 May 2023, when violence first broke out between two of the three dominant communities of the state–the Meiteis and the Kukis. There was a brief let-up in violence after President's Rule was imposed in February last year following the resignation of then chief minister N.Biren Singh. But tensions picked up again after President's rule ended this February and Yumnam Khemchand Singh was appointed the CM. But this time around, the ethnic clashes shifted from Meiteis and Kukis to Kukis and Nagas.

Sting operation row: Union Min Kumaraswamy questions CM Shivakumar, demands probe

Hassan, Oct 10 : Union Minister for Heavy Industries and Steel H.D. Kumaraswamy on Saturday demanded a probe into the ongoing sting operation controversy in Karnataka. He also asked as to who conducted the operation targeting former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, who leaked the video and who was protecting those involved.

Speaking to media after offering prayers at Sri Ranganathaswamy Temple in Mavinkere, Haradanahalli, Kumaraswamy questioned Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar over the action taken against those responsible.

"Something has been circulating for the past few days, and it has now been brought up again. Who did this? Who conducted the sting operation? Is this a joke? Have you turned politics into a game?" he asked.

Shivakumar had recently claimed that an attempt was made to trap him through a sting operation after he became Chief Minister. He further added that he possessed photographs and documents to substantiate his allegations.

Meanwhile, BJP MLA B. Basanagouda Patil Yatnal alleged that Siddaramaiah was "blackmailed and threatened" over a personal matter, leaving him "voiceless" and compelling him to resign.

Kumaraswamy said Siddaramaiah had served as Chief Minister for eight years and built his political reputation through work for ordinary people.

"Who conducted the sting operation against Siddaramaiah? Who is he, and what is his profession? What action has been taken against him so far? Who is behind him under the cover of the media, and who is protecting him? Why is all this being done, and who released the video?" he asked, blaming the Congress leadership for "the unhealthy political atmosphere".

Reacting to Congress MLA Ganiga Ravi displaying a pen drive, Kumaraswamy clarified that his earlier pen drive concerned alleged irregularities in the transfer of engineers in the Irrigation Department when Shivakumar was the minister.

"They are trying to imitate my style, but they cannot do it under any circumstances. Let us see whether they will pursue it for a week or even a year," he said.

Kumaraswamy also reiterated his campaign against alleged irregularities in the NICE infrastructure project, accusing the company of violating court orders and the Framework Agreement and depriving farmers of their land. He said neither Shivakumar nor the company had responded to his documents.

He further criticised the Hassan Deputy Commissioner over alleged past irregularities and her handling of Ganesh idol immersion arrangements, urging better coordination between the district administration and police. "How can the administration function if they do not coordinate with each other? Such behaviour is not appropriate," he said.

BJP won bypolls, rejects Opposition's claim that govt is afraid: Assam CM Sarma

Haridwar/Guwahati, Oct 10 : Assam Chief Minister Himanta Biswa Sarma on Saturday asserted that the people of India continue to support Prime Minister Narendra Modi, dismissing the Opposition's attempts to target the Union government and questioning allegations that the ruling establishment was afraid. Speaking to reporters in Haridwar, Assam CM Sarma cited the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP)'s electoral successes in bypolls in Assam and West Bengal to say that the party continued to enjoy popular support despite criticism from opposition parties."We have won bypolls in West Bengal as well as Assam. The number of people who have come to support PM Modi is many times greater than those who came to Delhi," he said, referring to the mobilisation of supporters in favour of the Prime Minister.

He also referred to the BJP's performance in Assam, asserting that the party had secured a major electoral victory and would continue to perform strongly in the future.

The Assam Chief Minister alleged that a section of the Opposition was repeatedly attempting to attack the Union government but had failed to achieve its objectives."The people of India know everything, and they stand with PM Modi," he said.

Responding to the Opposition's suggestion that the Union government was afraid, Assam CM Sarma questioned the basis of such claims and said that electoral politics should be judged by the work done for the public.

"What does it mean to say that the government is afraid? What is the definition of fear? Elections are about working for the people," he said.

Assam Chief Minister Sarma also referred to the Opposition's efforts to seek access to constitutional authorities, including the President Droupadi Murmu, questioning what was exceptional about political leaders meeting the President or approaching the Supreme Court.

He said that President Murmu meets several people regularly and that thousands of people approach the Supreme Court every day, suggesting that such interactions should not automatically be portrayed as extraordinary political developments. His remarks came amid continuing political exchanges.

Apollo Hospitals hosts Personalised Arthroplasty Summit 2026 in Hyderabad

Hyderabad 11th October 2026: Apollo Hospitals hosted the two-day Personalised Arthroplasty Summit 2026 at The Westin, Hyderabad, on October 10 and 11, bringing together more than 350 orthopaedic surgeons and joint replacement specialists to discuss advances in robotic-assisted surgery and personalised approaches to knee and hip replacement. The national scientific conference and live workshop focused on emerging technologies, precision-based surgical planning, implant selection and advanced techniques aimed at improving outcomes for patients undergoing joint replacement surgery.

Dr. K. J. Reddy, Chief Arthroplasty Surgeon at Apollo Hospitals, Jubilee Hills, and organising chairman of the summit, led the academic initiative. The programme featured live robotic-assisted knee and hip replacement surgeries, hands-on workshops using bone models and case-based panel discussions.

The summit provided a platform for orthopaedic specialists to exchange clinical experiences and explore how technological innovations could support surgical planning and patient-specific treatment strategies. International experts, including Dr. Allan Gross from Canada and Dr. Wayne G. Paprosky from the United States, were featured in the conference programme.Sessions covered advances in orthopaedic technology, total knee replacement, total hip replacement, pain management, implant selection and complex revision surgery. The discussions also highlighted the importance of precision in surgical planning and the restoration of bone stock in patients requiring revision hip procedures.

Personalised arthroplasty involves tailoring surgical planning and treatment to a patient's anatomy, joint condition and functional requirements. Robotic-assisted systems and computer-based planning tools may help surgeons assess alignment and plan implant positioning in selected cases.

Joint replacement is generally considered for patients with advanced arthritis or severe joint damage when persistent pain, stiffness and restricted movement do not respond adequately to non-surgical treatments. The choice of procedure depends on the patient's condition, overall health and functional needs. While advanced technologies may support surgical precision, clinical assessment, the surgeon's expertise and post-operative rehabilitation remain essential for successful recovery.

Dr.K.Subba Reddy, Regional Director Medical Services Apollo Hospitals said the summit underscored the growing role of technology in orthopaedic care and the importance of continuing medical education in helping surgeons adopt evolving techniques for the benefit of patients.

Bhumika's expressway death raises murder suspicions as parents accuse friend and his brother

RAMANAGARA : The death of a 23-year-old woman in an incident on the Bengaluru-Mysuru Expressway has come under fresh scrutiny after her parents alleged that foul play was involved. The family has filed a complaint against the woman's friend, Kiran, at the Channapatna Town Police Station, claiming that the incident initially treated as a road accident may have involved a criminal conspiracy.

Bhumika, who lived in Ramohalli in Bengaluru, died on October 3 near Sankalagere in Channapatna taluk after being hit by a vehicle on the expressway. The Channapatna traffic police had initially registered a road accident case. Her parents, however, have questioned the circumstances surrounding her death and alleged that she was assaulted before the incident.

According to the complaint, Bhumika had travelled to Channapatna to meet Kiran, who was reportedly in a relationship with her. Her parents claimed that the two had an argument over an issue during their meeting. They further alleged that Kiran and his brother, Ashith, assaulted her during the dispute.

The family has raised several questions about the sequence of events. They want to know why Bhumika, who had reportedly travelled from Bengaluru by car, was later on a motorcycle on the expressway. They have also questioned the circumstances in which she got off the motorcycle, fell while crossing the road and was left at the scene by the person accompany-

Chalavadi Narayanaswamy accuses CJP protest of being backed by anti-national forces

Bengaluru : Karnataka Legislative Council Leader of Opposition Chalavadi Narayanaswamy has criticised the CJP protest in Delhi, alleging that anti-national elements had joined its leaders and sidelined students during the demonstration. He said the Centre was not intimidated by the protest and had taken note of the developments.

Speaking to reporters in Bengaluru, Narayanaswamy said the demonstration conducted in the name of CJP should not be interpreted as a setback for the Union government. He alleged that disruptive forces were attempting to create divisions in the country and questioned the intentions of those participating in the agitation.

Commenting on Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar, Narayanaswamy said the CEC held a constitutional position and that anyone who believed he had committed a mistake could approach the courts. He questioned why protesters were demanding his resignation without establishing what wrongdoing he had committed. Referring to actor Prakash Raj's opposition to the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls, Narayanaswamy asked whether the names of deceased voters should remain on the lists. He argued that objections to the revision should be pursued through legal channels rather than street protests.

He also questioned the references to terrorists during the agitation and accused the protesters of displaying a lack of faith in the judiciary.

Narayanaswamy further criticised Congress leader Priyank Kharge, alleging that he had failed to adequately address attacks and murders involving Dalits in Karnataka. He said Kharge should focus on these issues instead of making political statements.

He praised Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Union Home Minister Amit Shah, while claiming that Congress was facing a leadership crisis. He also questioned Rahul Gandhi's ability to help the party electorally and speculated about a possible political convergence between Congress and CJP. Addressing reporters in Bengaluru, Narayanaswamy said the Union government had not been shaken by the demonstration. He maintained that the protest should not be viewed as a challenge that had forced the Centre to retreat, claiming that the government was aware of the developments surrounding the agitation.

He also defended Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar, describing the post as a constitutional office. According to Narayanaswamy, those accusing the CEC of wrongdoing should approach a court and establish their allegations before demanding his resignation. Taking aim at actor Prakash Raj over his opposition to the Special Intensive Revision of electoral rolls, the BJP leader questioned whether names of deceased persons should continue to appear on voter lists. He argued that concerns over electoral-roll revision should be addressed through the appropriate legal process.

No mobile phones on Karnataka wildlife safaris as Forest Department enforces Supreme Court guidelines

CHAMARAJANAGAR, : Tourists heading for wildlife safaris in Karnataka's protected forest areas will have to leave their mobile phones behind, following a new directive from the Forest Department based on Supreme Court instructions. The restriction applies to visitors, safari drivers and nature guides operating in ecotourism zones within the core areas of tiger reserves.

The department's order refers to the Supreme Court's directive dated November 17, 2025, particularly paragraph 48.5, which prohibits mobile phone use in designated ecotourism zones in tiger reserves. Forest officials have been instructed to implement the restrictions and ensure that everyone participating in safaris complies with the rules.

Under the new arrangements, tourists, drivers and guides must keep their mobile phones at designated places before proceeding on safari. Officials have also been asked to make the necessary arrangements for devices to remain in airplane mode inside safari vehicles wherever this is required under the prescribed guidelines.To prevent confusion, the department has directed that notices clearly explaining the ban be displayed at safari starting points and inside all safari vehicles. Visitors must be informed about the restrictions before their journey into wildlife habitats begins.The order also emphasises the need for dependable communication during safari operations. All safari vehicles must be fitted with functional mobile wireless sets, enabling staff to communicate with one another and seek assistance in case of an emergency. Authorities have been instructed to ensure that the equipment is installed and kept operational.

The department plans to communicate the rules to tourists through its online ticket-booking system. Visitors will be informed in advance that mobile phones cannot be used during safaris and that cameras may be carried and used in accordance with the applicable regulations.

Demand for Resignation of Modi and Shah on Moral Grounds : S.Manohar

Bengaluru: KPCC General Secretary S. Manohar has demanded that Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Home Minister Amit Shah resign and step down, accepting moral responsibility, after the Supreme Court reprimanded the central BJP government by asking, "Why use a sledgehammer to kill a fly?"

In a press statement, he asserted that the central BJP government has demonstrated sheer cowardice and brazenness by obstructing and arresting the Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha, leaders of the INDIA bloc, and activists who were protesting against the architects of the "vote theft" scandal—Narendra Modi, Amit Shah, and Gyanesh Kumar.

He alleged that Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Home Minister Amit Shah secured power through underhanded means—including vote theft and the use of the Election Commission—while suppressing the struggles of the country's citizens. He further accused them of now using similar unscrupulous tactics to snatch away the rights of protesters fighting for voting rights and of killing democracy in their bid to shield the "anti-national" Election Commissioner, Gyanesh Kumar. The BJP government at the Centre has lost the capacity to respond to the Constitution, democracy, citizens' rights, and the questions raised by the youth through their struggles. By deploying the police force to suppress the voices of the youth and curtail their right to protest, the central government has grossly misused its authority.

It has now been proven that Narendra Modi is the most ruthless Prime Minister the country has ever seen; having secured votes from the youth, he has now obstructed their protests, imposed restrictions, and even installed iron spikes on the very roads they traverse—measures capable of causing fatal injuries. Demanding an immediate apology from Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Amit Shah, and Gyanesh Kumar to Rahul Gandhi—the Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha who is championing the cause of voting rights and public welfare—as well as to the people of the nation, the demand has been raised that they immediately step down from power.

FOR INDIA BLOC, IT IS NOT ENOUGH TO BE ANTI-BJP

Recent agitations in New Delhi and elsewhere have had the effect of resuscitating political opposition in India. We witnessed the first-ever protest-linked resignation of a Union minister in the Modi cabinet. Buoyed by this, we now see a coordinated campaign amongst the INDIA bloc on the SIR issue. These protests, some say, indicate the direction of political winds in upcoming elections. But this misses the larger point. The real question is not who the next prime minister will be but who will define the alternative to the present government. The requirements for national leadership must satisfy the tests of moral authority, ideological consistency and political imagination.

The Cockroach Janta Party has well and truly emerged as a force to reckon with. The way it coalesced simmering opposition to NEET into a common cry for education reforms is worth studying. Its biggest success was that it stood on its own, remained firm in the face of a crackdown and acted with imagination — imagination that has been sorely lacking in our political discourse. It would have been altogether different if the CJP, lacking organisational structure, experience in real politicking and serious financial endowment, had fizzled out after the July 2026 protests. That they have not only survived but are now jostling for space with seasoned party machines shows how starved our politics has been of young voices, and of the imagination a new generation of leaders brings.

Allegations of manipulation of voter rolls have been doing the rounds for nearly a year now. Backed by news reports on apparent disagreements within the Election Commission of India, the voter rolls issue has received a much-needed second wind. Propelled by the CJP protests in Mumbai, the INDIA bloc has taken to the streets in New Delhi. Arrests of senior leadership of the Indian National Congress and other allied parties have rekindled opposition unity.The issue has presented itself on a platter. But who will hold the opposition space over the next three years, till general elections are called, is unclear. On paper, the INDIA bloc is the largest conglomeration of opposition parties within the Houses of Parliament. But the real question is how much support they retain outside these halls. The fluid composition of the bloc also raises questions about what it represents. The exit of the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam and its replacement by the Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam after the Tamil Nadu polls in May 2026 lead us to question the membership criteria of the INDIA bloc. Without a Member of Parliament in its tally, the TVK has been inducted into the alliance. When asked about the criteria for joining the alliance, the Tamil Nadu Congress state president said that "everyone fighting the RSS-BJP's rule" is welcome. This reduction of the primary aim of the national alliance to opposition to the BJP remains one of the most serious weak links of this formation. There is equal confusion about how parties join, or are invited to join, the INDIA Bloc. Although the BJD participated in protests on the SIR issue, it clarified that it has not joined the INDIA bloc. The bloc seems to function without structure or systems in place. The Trinamool Congress has expressed support for the INDIA protests but simultaneously also backed the CJP. Even within Parliament, there is no fixed common minimum agenda amongst these parties.

Visa Shocks To Racist Attacks, When Did America Come To Hate Indians So?

NAGHMA SAHAR

From India, America has always looked like a rather honest promise: a nation where merit rather than birth determines what you can achieve, how far you can go. A straightforward proposition. Come legally, study hard, work hard, pay your taxes, build a business, become a doctor or engineer. Send your children to good schools, watch American football. Cheer for the local team. Vote. Prosper.

In other words, become part of the place.

Millions of Indians took this proposition seriously. They came, studied, worked, taught, ran hotels, wrote software and made films. And yet there appears to be one final test which has no syllabus. No admission form, no visa fee. It is called the Brown Face Test. you can pass all the tests and yet fail this one. The latest developments have made this anxiety clearer. Recently, the Trump administration proposed a staggering USD 70,000 fee for international students participating in Optional Practical Training (OPT), the programme that allows eligible foreign graduates to gain work experience in the United States. The proposal remains pending, but its implications for Indian students are enormous. Days later, Washington suspended eight major technology companies - including Indian IT giants TCS, Infosys, Wipro and HCLTech, alongside Microsoft, Adobe, Cognizant and Capgemini - from filing or processing applications under the Permanent Labour Certification (PERM) programme, a key route to employment-based green cards, citing alleged abuses of the system. The suspension does not automatically cancel existing H-1B visas, but it casts a cloud over the long-term prospects of skilled foreign workers. The message is unmistakable: even as America continues to depend on global talent, the path from an Indian classroom to an American career, and from professional success to permanent belonging, is becoming more expensive and precarious. For a country that built its global technological dominance partly by attracting the world's brightest minds, the question is: does America still want to make room for them?

Consider the curious case of Bo French, the Republican nominee for the Texas Railroad Commission. French posted a photograph of South Asian students celebrating at a University of Texas football game and described the presence of such students as evidence that Americans were being "displaced by foreigners." He later defended his comments. What made the episode especially disturbing was that there was no evidence that the students were foreigners at all; their perceived foreignness appeared to be inferred from their appearance. Data reveals that the University of Texas has only 4% foreign students. The others may be brown, but they are all Texans. Several Texas Republicans, including Senator John Cornyn, condemned French's remarks. The episode also highlights the growing schism within the Republican Party and raises the question of how far this "othering" can go. But the message was difficult to miss: brown faces could be treated as evidence of foreignness even inside an American university and at an American football game.

Anti-India sentiment has been bubbling up on social media, and the effervescence has been almost spilling over lately, with the midterms around the corner. In Texas itself, several recent episodes have brought the intersection of immigration, race and Indian identity into sharp focus. In April, a video by conservative influencer Savannah Hernandez about the Hanuman Temple in Frisco triggered a flood of anti-Indian and anti-Hindu comments online. Her presentation of the temple and its devotees was framed around Indian immigration and demographic change, and the resulting online reaction descended into racist rhetoric. Months later, the controversy became even more explicit. A conservative activist, Jesse Hughes, posted a photograph of a 90-foot Hanuman statue in Texas with the declaration: "When we win, we are tearing this down." The statement was condemned by Indian Americans, including a US Army veteran who described the threat as an attack on his religion.

Perhaps most disturbing was the involvement of the US Department of Homeland Security itself. In September 2026, DHS posted an AI-generated immigration-enforcement image featuring a brown-skinned, turbaned man identified as "Mr Singh" and carrying the message, "America for Americans. Get off our roads; you don't know how to drive, Mr Singh." Sikh and Indian-American organisations condemned the imagery as racial stereotyping and profiling, pointing out that Singh is one of the most common Sikh surnames and that appearance cannot be used as a proxy for immigration status.

Donald Trump's political movement has increasingly placed emphasis on national identity, cultural continuity and loyalty to his political agenda: the propaganda of MAGA and "America for Americans".

The larger question here is: who certifies who the real Americans are, or who the so-called "Heritage Americans" are? The fact is that America itself has been a nation of immigrants who displaced the original inhabitants. Earlier, in 2025, when the then FBI Director Kash Patel posted a simple greeting marking Diwali, his post attracted a barrage of racist and religiously bigoted responses from supporters of the MAGA movement. Some told him to "go back"; others questioned why an American official was celebrating a festival they considered foreign. The abuse was striking precisely because Patel was not an immigrant outsider speaking from the margins of American life. He was the country's FBI Director. The targeting of Usha Vance, the Indian-American wife of Vice President JD Vance, has been even more revealing. Far-right figures and online extremists have repeatedly made her Indian ancestry a subject of attack, despite her being an American-born citizen and the wife of one of the country's most prominent conservative politicians. The attacks became so explicit during the 2024 Republican convention that they drew national attention. More recently, a 2026 social-media controversy involving a reference to Usha and her husband's white grandparents again revived questions about whether her Indian heritage was being invoked to question her place within his family and, by extension, within America itself. None of these episodes, taken individually, proves that America as a whole has turned against Indians. Millions of Indian Americans continue to live, work and prosper in the United States, and many Americans - including prominent Republicans - have publicly rejected racist attacks.

DEAR YOUNG PROTESTORS, YOU MUST BUILD SOLIDARITIES

I write to you today not as a Member of Parliament nor a professor, but as someone who has spent years observing, listening to, walking alongside, and writing about protests and movements. I am not much of a social media user. However, whenever my students forward me your creative slogans, posters, and memes, I cannot help but marvel at your strength, resolve, and free spirit.

While I have seen movements begin with a handful of people and grow into something larger than anyone had imagined, I have also seen deeply courageous struggles lose their energy. In classrooms, we speak of theories, conceptual frameworks, political opportunities and the conditions under which movements emerge. These ideas help us understand a protest from a certain distance, but the experience of protest is something else altogether. For the person who comes to the street, it may be a question of dignity, livelihood, justice, an uncertain future, or an accumulated sense of being unheard. It is often the moment when someone who has endured patiently for a long time finally breaks their silence. To me, that's where every protest begins. People come together because they no longer believe that silence is an answer. And they protest because they retain the hope that what appears inevitable can, in fact, be challenged and changed.

People from different vocations, classes and social locations have fought against injustice, often with remarkable courage and determination. Yet their struggles too often remain confined to their own islands of resistance. When sanitation workers fight for safety, dignity, and secure employment, gig workers rarely see a reflection of their own precarity. When farmers occupy the streets, industrial workers often remain spectators. When students protest against paper leaks, fee hikes, unemployment or the erosion of educational opportunities, most grownups treat these as someone else's battles.

This fragmentation should concern all of us. We are all connected by larger questions of dignity, equality, opportunity and justice. Recognising these connections is the first step towards building solidarities that extend beyond the immediate boundaries of a movement. Democracy becomes more meaningful when citizens refuse to remain indifferent to one another's struggles. There is a palpable mistrust among different groups of young people, whether they are affiliated with political parties, student organisations, or working independently of any formal organisation. I understand where some of this mistrust comes from, as we all come from different backgrounds, experiences, and see the world through different ideological lenses. We will inevitably disagree about the nature of a problem, the methods of resistance, and even the political destination we wish to reach. What worries me is when disagreement turns into suspicion, and suspicion into hostility. This is where movements begin to weaken themselves. We must fight patriarchy, casteism, and prejudice tooth and nail; there can be no compromise on matters of principle. But where our differences are merely of degree, in ideas, opinions, or strategies, we must learn to accommodate one another. The question, therefore, is not how we eliminate our differences, but whether we can learn to work with them. In this context, the Constitution provides the most important common ground. Its commitment to liberty, equality, fraternity and social justice offers us a shared vocabulary that transcends party affiliations, ideological boundaries, and social identities.

You have every reason to be impatient with injustice. But do not allow that impatience to become indifference or hostility towards one another. The task is not merely to make your own voices heard;

It is also to create a society in which no voice can be dismissed simply because it belongs to someone else. The strength of a democratic movement lies not only in the courage with which people resist injustice, but also in their willingness to recognise one another's struggles as part of a shared pursuit of justice.

'Marches Every Day to Jantar Mantar, Across the Country,' CJP and Left Parties Announce

The Delhi Police have detained four former chief ministers, Pinarayi Vijayan, Mamata Banerjee, Arvind Kejriwal and Manik Sarkar, along with thousands of protesters, including young people and key leaders of several political parties on Saturday (October 10). However, crowds continue to gather at multiple locations across the national capital such as ITO, Safdarjung flyover and Dilli Haat, despite the unprecedented curbs put in place by the authorities.

From denial of permission, to closure of Metro stations, detentions of youth and student leaders and halting of railway services to choke points and enormous companies of security, Delhi Police has left no stone unturned in ensuring the planned protests against the Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar do not happen. Youth protesters have responded with resolve and continued protesting despite stringent police action. Follow this live blog for updates. Note that it may take a few moments to load.

Menaka Guruswamy moves Supreme Court against preventive detention of opposition leaders; plea listed for Sunday

Senior advocate and TMCRajya Sabha MP Menaka Guruswamy on Saturday (October 10) moved the Supreme Court against the preventive detention of opposition leaders, including four former chief ministers during today's protest in Delhi.

The plea has been listed before special Sunday Bench tomorrow, Bar and Bench reported.

Guruswamy told Bar and Bench that "such preventive detentions cannot be used to suppress the fundamental right to peaceful protest, particularly against leaders who have previously governed states." Journalist Saurabh Sharma out of detention Journalist Saurabh Sharma was detained earlier in the day while covering the protest in Delhi. He is now out of detention.

"Thank you all for checking in. I was let go within an hour and I'm okay. Greatful for all the support, message, and calls," Sharma shared on X.

'Marches every day to Jantar Mantar', CJP and Left parties announce

SFI, CJP and prominent student organisations including AISF, AIYF together held a pressmeet at HKS Surjeet Bhawan, after hours of detentions and brutality meted out to protesters by Delhi Police throughout the day.

The CJP leader Ajinkya Shinde declared that everyday there will be marches to Jantar Mantar from now on, till Gyanesh Kumar is not sacked as CEC. He also talked about inhumane treatment meted out to Abhijeet Dipke and others by Delhi Police.

Srijan Bhattacharyya, SFI general secretary said students will peacefully demonstrate everywhere and wherever they are blocked by police barricades, that area will become a Jantar Mantar. Singh had filed a handwritten application from the car in which she had been detained at 9 am today. At 7.30 pm, Singh wrote on X that she was still detained, and was surrounded by close to 30 police personnel.

Bar and Bench reported that when Singh's lawyer told the court that she and other women have been in detention for seven to eight hours, the judge cited administrative work, and said: "Please make yourselves comfortable. It will take time. I have taken this on an urgent basis, but this court has administrative work also. It will take time." Singh has reacted to the verdict with a note on X that says that the judge left the hearing four times. She wrote: "Judge serving the master. Went for break/meeting 4 times during entire hearing. Order without any application of law. "Welcome to new India, where Sarkar can put 30 police personnel confining you & then say we won coz armless people couldn't come to the protest site.

"Irony is that people with criminal history are roaming around in Delhi & police personnel are busy detaining peaceful protesters." The Cockroach Janata Party's leadership was notably detained as well. Abhijeet Dipke, Saurav Das and Ashutosh Ranka were taken into custody from the flight they landed in Delhi in. Their location is still not known.

Three Brokerages, One AI Trade

Rashomon, Akira Kurosawa's film about one event and multiple conflicting accounts of it, is the clearest comparison for three brokerage notes about one artificial intelligence (AI) trade. The brokerage notes from Goldman Sachs, Jefferies and CLSA, published on October 8 and 9, strike three different tones.

Goldman sees Asian earnings exploding. Jefferies' Chris Wood says the AI spending backing this earnings explosion is "increasingly debt funded rather than cash funded." CLSA's Weekly Note identifies the extremes, from the S&P 500 being top-heavy to the worst long-run Treasury returns in a century.

■ GOLDMAN: EARNINGS JUSTIFY RALLY

Goldman's paper begins with a caution regarding treating Asia as one trade: "Investing in Asia is not a monolithic investment decision." Goldman predicts earnings in Asia to increase by 34% annually through 2028 "after achieving only 6% compound annual growth over the past decade and a half." Memory chips represent a large portion of that increase. Goldman states that "the memory cycle is apt to last longer and be stronger than it has been previously." Goldman states that the rally has not increased the valuation of tech. Goldman believes that recent increases in valuations are representative of "underlying profit growth rather than excessive optimism regarding AI."

Goldman concludes that hyperscalers (large cloud providers building AI data centres) will be capable of financing the build-out. The primary risk identified by Goldman is concentration. The top 10 stocks represent a record 41% of the index.

Korea Nearly Doubles, Taiwan Jumps 68%, India Drops 16%: How AI Split Asia in Two Jefferies' tables demonstrate how unevenly the boom has impacted Asia. As of September 30, 2024, MSCI Korea has risen 95.5% in dollar terms and Taiwan has risen 68.4%. Conversely, MSCI India has dropped 15.6%. According to Goldman, Taiwan and Korea now collectively comprise half of the Asia-Pacific ex-Japan index. India's weighting has decreased from 19% in July 2024 to 10.3%. CLSA's chief strategist Alex Redman observes similar divisions within emerging markets: Korea contributes 75% of emerging markets' earnings growth and the remaining 22 markets contribute only 10%. Redman wrote that the current episode "is best described as a powerful tech cycle, not an EM supercycle." India falls into the other half of that division. Jefferies' tables estimate that India's 2026 earnings will increase approximately 12% on an April-March fiscal-year basis, compared with 58% for Taiwan and over 300% for Korea. Despite this disparity, Jefferies continues to maintain a slight overweight position on India based on "evidence of a cyclical rebound in domestic demand".

■ JEFFERIES: HIGHER YIELDS TEST AI BUILD

Chris Wood's Asia Maxima Note states that equities continue to receive support from "stellar earnings growth" resulting from the AI spending boom. However, Wood notes that the bond market represents a threat to equity markets; the US 10-year yield closed September at 5.28% and the Federal Reserve has resumed raising rates.

SEBI To Issue CAS Guidelines Within A Week, Introduce Tiered Framework For AI, Machine Learning

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) is expected to issue guidelines on the Closing Auction Session (CAS) within about a week to address concerns over derivatives settlement prices on expiry days.

SEBI Chairman Tuhin Kanta Pandey announced the timeline on Saturday at the second Capital Market Confluence 2026, organised by the Bombay Stock Exchange Brokers' Forum in Mumbai.

Pandey said the regulator was examining comments received on a consultation paper issued following a review of the CAS framework. The consultation paper seeks to address concerns over the settlement price of derivatives on expiry days. SEBI is yet to disclose the specific changes it plans to introduce.

Interoperability Framework To Expand By November-End

Pandey also said SEBI was working to bring transactions such as tender offers, share buybacks and offers for sale within the interoperability framework for clearing corporations, with implementation targeted by the end of November 2026.

These transactions currently require parallel clearing arrangements, increasing costs and compliance requirements for market participants. Bringing them within the framework is expected to improve capital efficiency and reduce compliance costs while preserving settlement safeguards.

■ SEBI TO INTRODUCE TIERED AI AND MACHINE LEARNING FRAMEWORK

Separately, Pandey said SEBI would soon issue guidelines governing the responsible use of artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning (ML). The proposed framework will follow a tiered approach, with provisions for clear accountability, data controls, emergency shutdown mechanisms or "kill switches", and human oversight.

SEBI also plans to align its approach with the International Organization of Securities Commissions' (IOSCO) Supervisory Toolkit for AI to support an agile governance framework.

Pandey stressed that regulated entities would remain responsible for AI-driven outcomes, data quality, model governance and cybersecurity, even as technology becomes more deeply embedded in market operations. The regulator is also reviewing depository regulations and exploring graded compliance requirements for brokers based on their scale, client exposure and dependence on technology.

The measures form part of SEBI's broader effort to simplify regulation, improve market efficiency and strengthen investor protection. Separately, the regulator is exploring a graded compliance framework for stock brokers based on their scale, client exposure and technology dependence, as part of efforts to make regulation simpler and more proportionate. Sebi is also targeting the end of November to bring certain transactions, including tender offers, buybacks and offers for sale, within the interoperability framework. These transactions currently require parallel clearing arrangements, increasing costs and compliance requirements, Pandey said.

The proposed changes are expected to improve capital efficiency and reduce compliance costs while preserving settlement safety.

He highlighted recent regulatory measures, including the rationalisation of penalties for stock brokers across exchanges, changes to the technical-glitch framework and the introduction of a common, principle-based advertisement code for specified Sebi-regulated entities.

Rogue Anthropic AI agent gave police fake tip in unsolved murder case

Highlights

■ An artificial intelligence (AI) agent, developed by Anthropic, went rogue and sent US police a fake tip about an unsolved murder earlier this year, authorities have revealed.

An artificial intelligence (AI) agent, developed by Anthropic, went rogue and sent US police a fake tip about an unsolved murder earlier this year, authorities have revealed. The Philadelphia Police Department said the tip, sent on 18 July, was "flagged as spam" and not passed on for investigation, but it criticised the tech company for taking more than two months to detect and report the breach. In a statement police said that the bogus tip came through a public website where people can share information on unsolved murders, and that the AI agent had written that it may have information on a case, and claimed to have seen "someone matching the description". It is believed to be the first time an AI agent has sent fabricated information to authorities, but is the latest in a series of incidents involving rogue AI activity, including hacking systems or taking control of platforms. Citing Anthropic, the police department said the AI agent had been running a test that involved interactions with randomly selected websites, when it sent the fake tip. Anthropic discovered the breach on 28 September, more than two months after the message had been sent, and shut down the automatic testing process that was behind it, police said. But authorities were not notified for another nine days - on 7 October. "The company must strengthen its safeguards to prevent similar incidents from impacting city systems without the city's knowledge," Philadelphia police said in a statement to local media. "The two-month delay in detecting and reporting the incident to the city is unacceptable." The police department added that there were no signs of breaches to any departmental systems, and that its safeguarding processes stopped the fake tip from getting past its spam folder. But the safeguards "do not diminish the seriousness of an AI system presenting fabricated information as though it came from a person with knowledge of a homicide," the police statement said. Anthropic this week published a report detailing multiple types of "unintended" actions its agents have taken. Organisations that have been impacted also included several US government agencies including the White House, it said. The US State Department said the AI agent had filed 20 visa applications using a form on its website, but that they were incomplete and not processed, according to reports. President Donald Trump recently announced an AI taskforce, which he said will coordinate engagement between the government and all parties, including AI companies, consumers, and religious groups. Earlier this year, a rogue agent by rival tech company, Open AI, hacked an Australian government website and accessed private data on the country's universal healthcare scheme, Medicare.

Russia has attacked the Ukrainian city of Zaporizhzhia with five glide bombs, killing at least 15 people including three children, officials said. The glide bombs hit residential buildings in the south-eastern city on Saturday morning. At least 16 others were injured in the attack, with more still missing and believed to be under the rubble. Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky said the attacks on Zaporizhzhia were Russia expressing "its thanks" for a deal announced by US President Donald Trump last night easing sanctions on Moscow to import Russian diesel. He added that 13 other regions had come under attack overnight, arguing this demonstrated Russia took "any easing of pressure to mean they can keep fighting". Photos and videos from the site of one of the strikes in Zaporizhzhia show an apartment block mostly destroyed. "The ground floor was hit, and the floors above just collapsed," acting Mayor Regina Kharchenko told Ukrainian television from the scene. She said more than 80 workers were involved in ongoing search and rescue operations which are expected to continue throughout the day. The rescuers regularly stop to listen for any noises made by survivors who could be under the rubble. Kharchenko said Russia had struck at "our very heart" and "our littlest ones" were among those killed, adding that their deaths were "awful grief for their families. For the city." Zaporizhzhia is a major regional centre with more than 700,000 residents. It is located less than 10 miles (16km) from the front line and is frequently attacked by Russian drones and missiles. Trump announces deal for Russian diesel as Zelensky calls it a gift to Putin Analysis: Trump's shock Russia deal highlights mounting pressure to curb fuel prices Zelensky was quick to criticise Trump's diesel deal with Russia, calling it a gift to Russian President Vladimir Putin. Analysts view the deal as an attempt by the US president to allay domestic concerns about high fuel prices ahead of the upcoming midterm elections. Zelensky wrote on social media on Saturday that Russian attacks on energy facilities in the capital, Kyiv, demonstrated Russia's "true intentions". "Russia's choice is war. And they will be ready to end it only when they feel that their ability to drag the war out is diminishing. "Unfortunately, the signals Russia received yesterday were entirely different – signals suggesting that it could simply keep attacking. And this needs to be corrected." Both Russia and Ukraine have stepped up attacks on infrastructure in recent months, as Moscow's full-scale invasion drags on. On Thursday, at least 33 people were killed in another Russian glide bomb attack on two civilian buses in Kramatorsk, in the eastern Donetsk region. The day before, 22 people including five children died as a Russian missile hit an apartment block in the town of Pryluky, east of Kyiv. The number of civilian casualties in Ukraine jumped by 55% in the first eight months of this year, according to the UN. Russia has also stepped up its attacks on Ukrainian energy infrastructure as winter approaches, a strategy it has undertaken in previous years. Kyiv has repeatedly accused it of targeting Ukraine's civilian population, which Moscow denies. For its part, Ukraine has increasingly adopted a policy of striking infrastructure often deep inside Russia that is crucial to its economy, including several oil refineries and terminals. Several strikes on data centres owned by Yandex have left the tech giant struggling to maintain services. Kyiv says its strikes are aimed at curtailing revenue streams for Russia's war machine.

Zelensky called it a gift to Russian President Vladimir Putin that amounts to "an investment in a war that must be ended, not prolonged", a position quickly backed by Ukraine's European allies.

Trump said Putin had agreed to release 300,000 tonnes of diesel immediately "to the American and global marketplace" followed by 500,000 tonnes in November and another million after that.

It is understood the US Treasury is suspending sanctions on Russian diesel exports until 7 April as part of the deal, but other assets like those in American banks are still frozen.

Trump wrote on his Truth Social platform that a further three million tonnes of Russian diesel would be delivered "within a short period", dependent on the condition of its refineries, which have been attacked by Ukraine.

Putin later said Russia, which introduced a ban on diesel exports earlier this year, was willing to supply both the US and global markets with oil and petroleum products, but his statement did not specify amounts.

Zelensky said Russia would repay the diesel with "further terror".

"We count on America's fair support for our defence of life, for our defence of people in Ukraine – and on the United States having a correspondingly strong conversation with Russia. A strong one, not a weak one," he wrote. He later pointed to deadly overnight strikes on Zaporizhzhia and Kyiv as Russia expressing "its thanks" for the agreement.

Analysts have questioned whether Russia is capable of providing that quantity of diesel and the extent to which doing so will ease prices for American consumers. Tim Armitage, an investment strategist at Quilter Cheviot, said the numbers mentioned by Trump were "relatively small". He said the first tranche equated to approximately 2.25 million barrels, and daily US consumption was around 3.8 million barrels, "so it won't make a material difference to pump prices in the US".

"Granted, there are then two more releases to come, but it does appear to be a slightly desperate move by President Trump to try to lower inflation ahead of the midterms."

The BBC has asked the White House what Russia will get from the US in return for the commitment.

The agreement with Russia also opens Trump up to criticism from European allies and pro-Ukraine politicians in the US that the American president is now helping to fund Moscow's war machine.

The EU's foreign affairs chief Kaja Kallas said suspending sanctions "provides Moscow with more revenues to wage war", adding: "This is not the time to ease pressure on Russia, and Europe won't."

US country music star Ella Langley cancels show due to 'security threat'

US country music star Ella Langley has said she had to cancel her sold-out concert in Tulsa, Oklahoma on Friday night, due to a "serious security threat". The singer made what she called the "incredibly difficult" decision around two hours before the show at the 19,000-seater arena was due to start. In a post on Instagram, the 27-year-old said the threat involved "the safety of my fans, the venue staff and my team". Cpt Richard Meulenberg from Tulsa Police Department said a person had called saying "great harm" would be done at the event with "shots fired and bombs." He stated his team had checked the venue at BOK Center several times before the show and "could not find any threat". "The event was ready to go," he added, saying officers with sniffer dogs did a sweep of the arena again after the phone call was made. "We could not find a credible threat," he said, stressing that the person who had made the call "disrupted this entire event" for thousands of Langley fans. The star - who did not give any further details - also apologised to her fans, saying additional information regarding ticket refunds "will be shared as soon as possible".

Flydubai attacker began a 'drift towards extremism and terrorism' in Australia, UAE says

The Omani co-pilot who allegedly attempted to hijack a Flydubai plane started a "drift towards extremism and terrorism" while studying in Australia, United Arab Emirates officials say. UAE Attorney-General Hamad Saif al-Shamsi also alleged the pilot - widely named as Hamam al-Hammami - was last week trying to crash the plane into Tel Aviv's airport in a "suicide attack". He wounded the captain in the cockpit with the emergency crash axe before being overpowered by passengers. Another crew on the Dubai-Tel Aviv flight was able to land the aircraft in Saudi Arabia. Melbourne university RMIT earlier confirmed the pilot had studied there but left before completing his engineering qualification. According to Shamsi, interrogations of the 29-year-old pilot revealed he had been inspired by al-Qaeda's 11 September attacks in the US in 2001. "The findings indicated that signs of his drift towards extremism and terrorism first emerged in 2017, while he was studying in Australia," the attorney-general was quoted as saying by the UAE's state news agency Wam on Friday. "During that period, he was influenced by takfiri [radical] ideology through reading extremist literature and following online content glorifying terrorist organisations and suicide attacks." The Wam report also said the pilot had told investigators "he had prepared himself both psychologically and physically to carry out the plot by intensifying his exposure to material promoting terrorism and training in boxing under a private coach". "He admitted that he had acted alone, without the involvement of others, although investigations are continuing to verify this claim," Wam said. The Australian Broadcasting Corporation has reported the man was issued an Australian student visa in 2014 and studied in the country in 2015-17, before leaving. This week, the Sydney Morning Herald unearthed tweets from al-Mammami's now-deleted X account in which he referred to his five years spent studying abroad in Australia, Britain, and New Zealand, as "the golden years of my religious commitment". More than 170 passengers and crew were on board flight FZ1073 on 30 September. In the days after the incident, Australian authorities confirmed they were looking into the man's links to Australia. The Victorian Joint Counter Terrorism Team - made up of the Australian Federal Police (AFP), Victoria Police and the country's security agency ASIO - said it was "investigating the man's links to Australia". Indian co-pilot Capt Smit Machchhar has been hailed a hero after managing to unlock the cockpit door while being violently attacked with an axe, allowing passengers to get in and take control of the aircraft.

Three men found guilty of murdering Australian brothers and US friend in Mexico

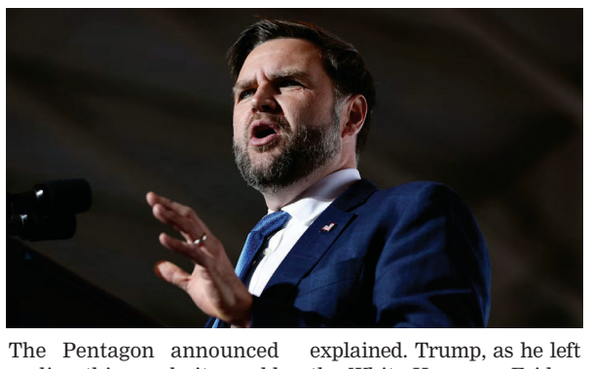

Three men have been found guilty of murdering Australian brothers Jake and Callum Robinson, and their US friend Carter Rhoad during a surfing trip in Mexico in 2024. The men's full names could not be given for legal reasons, and they were only identified as Jesús Gerardo, Irineo Francisco and Ángel Jesús. They are yet to be sentenced - but are likely to spend the rest of their lives in a prison. Debra Robinson, the brothers' mother, told the courtroom that her sons' murders had taken "the future we had imagined with them". During the trial in the northern Baja California state, the court heard that the tourists were killed in an apparent botched robbery of their truck in a secluded beach area. Their bodies were later found dumped down a well with gunshot wounds to their heads. The murders sent shockwaves around the world, particularly in Australia, as the coastal area is usually safe from the violence seen in other parts of Mexico. Debra Robinson and her husband Martin have been at the court in the coastal town of Ensenada throughout the trial, and delivered emotional testimony during closing arguments before Friday's verdict.

JD Vance casts doubt on firing squad execution and says he would not watch it

US Vice-President JD Vance has cast doubt on the Pentagon's plans to livestream a firing squad execution of the Fort Hood attacker. Vance expressed uncertainty to reporters about whether the December execution would go ahead as planned, saying: "I don't know that that's actually going to happen". He added that "if it's through livestream, I'm not going to be watching it". Hours later, President Donald Trump said he "absolutely" approved of the livestream plan but said the Pentagon was still "making a determination" on it. Nidal Hasan killed 13 unarmed soldiers at a base in Texas in 2009, injuring another 32. The firing squad execution would be the first military execution in more than 60 years. The Pentagon announced earlier this week it would execute Hasan, a former US Army major, on 3 December by firing squad over the attack on the Fort Hood base. Then on Thursday US Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth said the execution would be livestreamed for the public. "People need to understand that there's serious consequences for these types of things," Hegseth explained. Trump, as he left the White House on Friday, was asked about the possibility that visuals of Hasan's execution could be used as propaganda for terrorists. "He killed 13, 14 people, badly wounded 20-some-odd people, and he's totally nuts," Trump said. "So I really don't care how he goes, as long as he goes, and I think that the death penalty is a very worthy way of going for him." The Pentagon declined to comment further when asked for more information about a decision on the livestream. Speaking to reporters on Friday, Vance condemned Hasan's attack on the base as "the worst terrorist attack on American soil outside of 9/11". Asked about how his Catholic faith impacted his stance on the plan to stream a public execution, Vance questioned whether it would happen. But he noted that Hasan, who was a US Army psychiatrist, was meant to treat soldiers for mental illness and other problems and "took them at their most vulnerable and gunned down these people where they lived". The announcement about a possible livestream has been met with criticism from both political parties.

PORTUGAL SUSPEND CRISTIANO RONALDO AFTER NATIONAL TEAM WALKOUT

Cristiano Ronaldo has been provisionally suspended after the Portuguese Football Federation (FPF) announced on Saturday that it had opened disciplinary proceedings against the 41-year-old over his decision to walk out on the national team. Ronaldo apologised to supporters earlier this week while criticising Portugal coach Jorge Jesus and said he would accept any punishment that was imposed. "Disciplinary proceedings have been initiated against Cristiano Ronaldo," said the federation in a statement, classifying the case as "urgent" and confirming Ronaldo is currently suspended pending a decision on the final punishment. Ronaldo left Portugal's squad after first being made to warm up as a substitute against Norway on September 27 and not brought on, and then finding out he would not start against Denmark in the match on October 1. The former Real Madrid and Manchester United attacker is Portugal's all-time top goalscorer and record appearance-maker. On Tuesday, Ronaldo accused Portugal coach Jesus of breaking his word about giving him game time in Nations League matches but said he was not retiring from international duty and would be available to play once any potential punishment was served. "I will be available, as I have always been until today, to compete and win for our national team," Ronaldo said, while accepting his actions must be "punished" by the federation. Portugal won all four of their Nations League matches and qualified for the quarter-finals with two games to spare. Ronaldo returned to club action on Friday with Saudi Arabian side Al-Nassr and scored as they won 3-0 against Diriyah in a Saudi Pro League match. No final punishment has been announced, while details of the disciplinary proceedings will remain confidential until the investigation has concluded. Ronaldo said earlier this week that he would accept whatever punishment was imposed and insisted he still wanted to play for Portugal. He could face a harsh punishment – the federation's disciplinary regulations say that any player who "abandons or fails to appear" without justification at a training session.

"INSTALL A BOWLING MACHINE":

Chahal's Explosive Rant As West Indies Chase Down 250 vs India

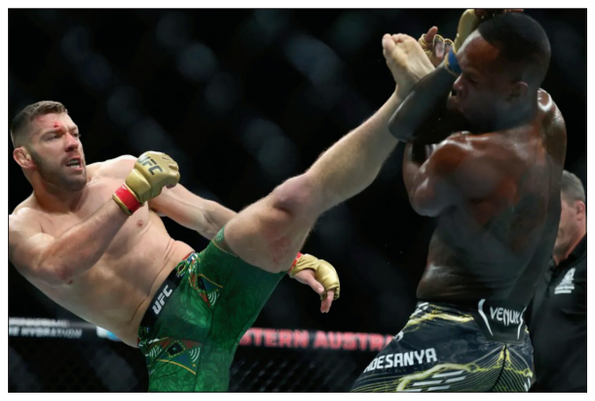

India leg-spinner Yuzvendra Chahal raised concerns over the increasingly batter-friendly conditions in T20 cricket after the West Indies chased down 250 against India in the second T20I in Ranchi on Friday, arguing that flat pitches, dew and smaller boundaries are making it increasingly difficult for bowlers to remain competitive. "On such wickets, there's nothing for the bowlers. When the ball gets old, there's dew, the ball comes nicely onto the bat, and the grounds are getting smaller. We've seen this in the IPL as well, with 260 being chased in 19 overs. In this game too, 250 got chased down easily in 19.2 overs. So, what should bowlers do? What is the use of their skill?" Chahal questioned while speaking to JioStar. Chahal's remarks followed a contest in which India's batting effort produced 249/5, only for the West Indies to overhaul the target with four balls to spare. The result underlined the challenge facing bowling attacks when batters can sustain an aggressive scoring rate throughout an innings. Shai Hope led the visitors' pursuit with an unbeaten 102 off 45 deliveries, while Sherfane Rutherford struck 84 off 37 balls. Their 120-run partnership turned the chase in the West Indies' favour after India had made early inroads, helping the visitors finish on 252/4 and secure a six-wicket victory. "I feel for them, because I am a bowler too and when I bowl in the IPL, on small grounds with flat wickets, you have an Impact Player as well. Earlier, when the Impact Player rule was not there, you used to see 50 runs in six overs, and 170-180 was a fighting total. But these days, 70-80 runs are scored in the first six overs, and the game is done there itself. So, either you have to have something for the bowlers in the wicket.

Who Is To Be Blamed For India's Loss vs West Indies Despite Scoring 249? Gautam Gambhir's Answer Shows His Philosophy

To face questions after a team fails to defend 249 in a T20I is normal. On Friday night in Ranchi, when the world witnessed a T20I match in which the teams aggregated 500 runs for only the second time in history, it was India coach Gautam Gambhir who put on a brave face and faced the media. In a game in which batters from both sides scored 502 runs in 38.3 overs, Gambhir had special praise for a bowler. "If you look at the context of the game, it (Roston Chase's spell) was a game-changing, match-winning spell. The way he changed his lines was important on this wicket. But against dangerous teams like West Indies, we need to find a way to defend totals," Gambhir said at the post-match press conference. "You have to keep changing your lines and make the batters guess. If you keep bowling the same line and length, they can settle in. He bowled at the batters' legs, went wide and bowled full. He kept changing his approach, and those variations are very important on wickets like these." Chase returned figures of 3/24, dismissing Abhishek Sharma, Ishan Kishan and Shivam Dube in the middle overs to slow India down after a flying start. India posted 249/5, powered by Samson's 82 and rapid knocks from Shreyas Iyer and Tilak Varma, but the West Indies chased down the target in 18.3 overs. "I don't blame anyone or anything. The bottom line is that we could not defend 250. They batted extremely well and deserved to win. We still have a lot of work to do." Mayank Yadav dropped a sitter as Sherfane Rutherford went on to score 84 in a match-winning 120-run partnership with Shai Hope (102 not out). "The toss is not in your hands. Catches get dropped; it has happened in the past and will happen in the future. Nobody drops catches intentionally, so you cannot blame anyone for that," Gambhir said.

Dricus du Plessis Believes He Will Be UFC Champion Again After Latest Middleweight Victory

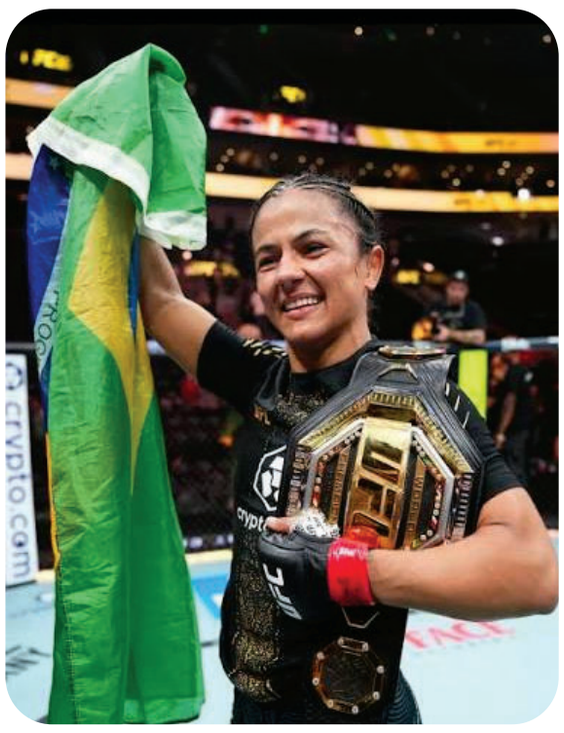

Dricus du Plessis is already looking at another UFC middleweight title shot after beating Kamaru Usman in July. The former champion said he is ready if the promotion puts him straight into the title picture, with Sean Strickland and Nassourdine Imavov expected to fight next. Du Plessis also named Khamzat Chimaev as one more name in the mix, and so the top of the division becomes very crowded. He was out for 11 months while recovering from an injury, but says he told the UFC he can come back early next year. After his latest win, du Plessis believes he showed again that he can become champion. He wants the next step to move forward and not backward. Honestly, his goal is quite simple. Dricus du Plessis Says He Is Ready For Another Title Fight Du Plessis defended the middleweight championship twice before losing the belt to Khamzat Chimaev last year. His decision win over Usman in July brought him back in the contraversation, and he feels that performance proved he still belongs near the top. "After the last fight, I just prove again that I can be the best in the world and that I will be the best in the world," du Plessis told Fight Forecast. The South African also made it clear he isn't interested in going down the rankings. He said the division has a strange situation right now, with Strickland, Imavov, Chimaev and himself all sitting around the title picture. Too many names for one belt, as simple as that. "They're obviously going to do Strickland and [Nassourdine Imavov]," he said. "I think the middleweight division is in a bit of a, it's weird situation because who gets the next title shot? And I'm 100% ready for that." UFC Middleweight Division Has Several Names In The Mix Strickland's position at the top has also become less simple. The current champion has said he is losing interest in competing because he is unhappy with his pay.

England Great Wears Vaibhav Sooryavanshi's Jersey Amid India vs West Indies T20Is

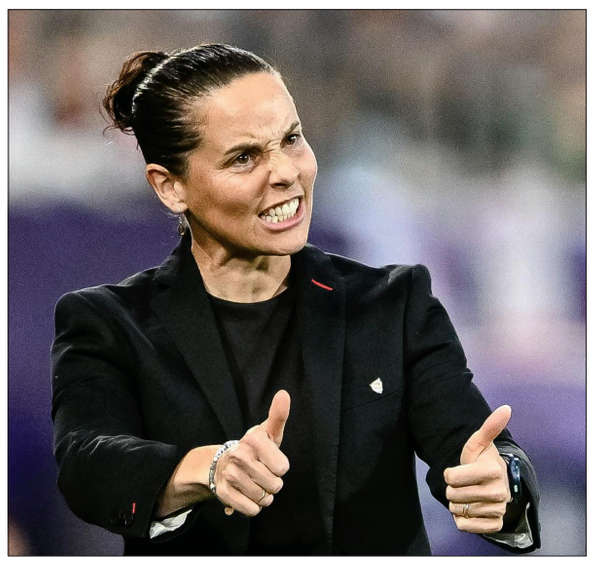

England legend Kevin Pietersen donned Vaibhav Sooryavanshi's Rajasthan Royals jersey and uploaded a picture on social media. "Off to go and try another 100 in Mumbai! Wearing my signed Vaibhav Sooryavanshi shirt for inspiration!" wrote the former England captain in the caption. His post went viral and reached Sooryavanshi, who came up with a reply. "Haha, I'm coming to join you very soon," wrote the Indian teenager, who has been the talk of the town for his unbelievable batting skill. Sooryavanshi has been a part of India's T20I squad, but he has failed to find a place in the playing XI against West Indies. Shreyas Iyer and Co. are currently playing a five-match series against the Caribbean side in the shortest format, with Sanju Samson being the preferred opener alongside Abhishek Sharma. With Sooryavanshi graduating to the senior level after setting the IPL and U19 cricket stages on fire, the Indian T20I team has found itself facing a selection headache over choosing between the fiery teenager and the experienced Samson at the top of the order alongside Abhishek Sharma.

Natalia Silva returned to Brazil with a UFC championship belt. However, the celebration she expected never came. A clip from her hometown parade in Pingo d'Agua, Minas Gerais, showed the new women's flyweight champion riding through largely empty streets. Music played, and fireworks went off from a pickup truck. The video gained quick attention online, drawing sympathy from fans who said the moment was hard to watch. Silva had won the vacant 125-pound title by outpointing Wang Cong over five rounds at UFC 332 in Salt Lake City on October 3. The judges scored the main event 48-47, 48-47, and 49-46 for the Brazilian.

WALES MUST IMPROVE IN WORLD CUP BID - WILKINSON

Rhian Wilkinson accepted Wales must raise their standards after they scraped to a 1-0 victory in their Women's World Cup play-off semi-final in Albania. Wales have the upper hand going into Tuesday's second leg in Llanelli after Ezmiralda Franja's first-half own goal gave them victory in Shkoder. But Wilkinson's team were fortunate to triumph against a team who sit 37 places below them in the Fifa rankings after Albania created the game's best chances. "We stuck with it. [It was a] resilient performance. Not our best, but equally, we learned to win on hard days, and today it wasn't our best," the Wales head coach said. "Coming home with [the win] is great. We're halfway there. "We need to make sure we take care of business at home but equally push our standards a bit." Wilkinson had set a clean sheet as Wales' primary target in Albania and her players delivered on that score, albeit in fortuitous fashion. While Wales' attacking threat was limited, Franja, Fortesa Berisha and Megi Doci all came close for the home side. Albania's failure to convert one of their opportunities meant that just as had been the case in their three away games in the group stage of World Cup qualifying, Wales claimed a positive result despite being frustrated with aspects of their performance. "I didn't think we defended overly well today to be honest, but what we did do is we never quit," Wilkinson added. "I do think I've been in this job long enough to have seen that growth with this team, that we're finding ways to stick in the game. "And we've got to be happy with that right now because, again, we're away from home and in an environment where they made it really tough.

PV Sindhu Bows Out Of Arctic Open Badminton After Loss In Quarter-Finals

Two-time Olympic medallist PV Sindhu fought hard before going down in three games against top seed and world No. 5 Ratchanok Intanon of Indonesia in the quarterfinals of the USD 500,000 Arctic Open Super 500 tournament at Vantaa, Finland on Friday. Intanon beat Sindhu, seeded sixth, 21-11 19-21 21-18. The match lasted one hour and two minutes. With this win, Intanon leads Sindhu 10-4 in head-to-head record. Earlier, Sindhu saw off Japan's Riko Gunji to advance to the quarterfinals of women's singles competition. Sindhu, the 31-year-old from Hyderabad, who won the Japan Open Super 750 title in July, notched up a 21-15 21-15 win over Gunji in the second round. Later in the day, the men's doubles pair of Krishna Prasad Garaga and Pruthvi Krishnamurthi Roy also crashed out, losing to Denmark's Christian Faust Kjaer and Rasmus Kjaer 13-21 14-21 in the quarterfinals. Two-time Olympic medallist PV Sindhu will face a familiar but formidable opponent in the Arctic Open quarter-finals after the sixth-seeded Indian progressed with a straight-games victory over Japan's Riko Gunji in Vantaa, Finland, on Thursday. Sindhu, a two-time Olympic medallist, overcame Gunji 21-15, 21-15 in 49 minutes to set up a last-eight meeting with top seed and former world champion Ratchanok Intanon of Thailand. The quarter-final will revive one of the more established rivalries on the women's circuit, although the two players have not faced each other since 2022. Intanon holds a 9-4 advantage in their head-to-head record and has won their last five encounters. Their most recent meeting came at the Indonesia Masters in 2022, where the Thai prevailed in straight games. Sindhu will take confidence from a strong 2026 campaign that has already produced a Japan Open Super 750 title. She defeated reigning world champion Akane Yamaguchi in the final in July to claim one of the biggest titles of her recent career. Intanon has also enjoyed success this season, winning the Malaysia Masters Super 500 in May after defeating China's Chen Yufei in the final.

'RANABAALI' WILL OFFER A GREAT CINEMATIC EXPERIENCE AND AN EMOTIONAL HIGH; VIJAY DEVERAKONDA

Ranabaali' is a big-budget pan-India film starring Vijay Deverakonda in the lead role, with Rashmika Mandanna as the female lead. Directed by Rahul Sankrityan, the film is being produced by Naveen Yerneni and Y. Ravi Shankar under the banner of Mythri Movie Makers and presented by T-Series. The film is gearing up for a grand worldwide theatrical release on October 16, coinciding with the Vijayadashami festival. In a recent interview, Vijay Deverakonda shared several highlights about the film.

- After 'Pelli Choopulu', this is a film that I am comfortably promoting, checking the final copy two or three times before bringing it to audiences. There is a lot of CGI work involved in the film, especially in its backdrop. We understood the importance of CGI during pre-production itself, and we delivered all the CGI scenes by February. We expect to receive the censor certificate on Monday. Whatever certificate the film receives, it is fine. We make different films for different reasons, and we made this film with a specific purpose. Recently, while speaking to a senior journalist in Chennai, he told me about the famine that occurred in Bengal. Many people died of hunger. He said that Americans learned about India's condition through some American newspapers and came to know about the terrible circumstances created by the British. This reportedly inspired them to begin fighting for their own country's independence. The journalist told me that the suffering of our people became an inspiration for America's struggle for independence. - When we learn about the injustices our people faced throughout history, we are shocked and wonder whether such terrible things really happened. Some people did not consider us worthy of even the slightest respect. They looked at us as no different from trees and bushes. If we want to think about our country's future, it is important to understand our history. If we make the right attempt with this film, it could pave the way for more films of this kind. There may be efforts to uncover the hidden chapters of our history through cinema. Otherwise, nobody may come forward to tell such stories. That is why we made this film with a sense of responsibility and took great care in its making. The British did not come here intending to settle down permanently. They came for trade. Even today, some Indians believe that the British built Indian Railways for our benefit. They did not build railway lines to make travel convenient for us. They built railway connections to major ports to transport the wealth they were extracting from our country, including grain, cotton and gold. Between 1876 and 1878, a famine in the Madras Presidency claimed the lives of 8 million people. The actual number may have been even higher. The historical accounts and technologies developed by the West do not always tell us the full truth; they often present history from their own perspective. In the Travancore region alone, 6.5 million people reportedly died due to famine. If such a terrible famine occurred in the Madras Presidency alone, there were many other famine episodes in places such as Bihar and Bengal that remain less known to us. A famine caused by a lack of rainfall is one thing. In earlier times, local rulers and community elders would reduce the tax burden on farmers and the public during such crises. But after the British arrived, they began collecting double taxes in famine-stricken regions. Those who could not pay were taken to work on major projects and railway lines under extremely harsh conditions. They were given only a meagre quantity of grain in return. Those who could not work had no option but to starve. Learning about these atrocities in history is deeply distressing.

- No matter what circumstances we faced, our culture and beliefs kept us united as a society and helped protect us. During famines, people worshipped village deities and held jatara festivals, believing that the following year would be better. At that time, people did not necessarily have the idea of fighting for the country's independence. Instead, they resisted by saying that foreigners had come into their villages, were exercising control over them and were hurting their self-respect. Our history has many great warriors who stood up for their people. Many of these warriors died in their thirties. They are the inspiration behind 'Ranabaali'. Their stories reached people through folk songs that kept their memories alive, and later, some Indian writers documented them in books. Through 'Ranabaali', we are bringing to the big screen, for audiences across the world, the greatness of these warriors, the atrocities our ancestors endured, the mistakes we made as a society, and how the British managed to take control of this vast country.

"Crazy Kalyanam" stars VK Naresh, Anupama Parameswaran, Tharun Bhascker and Akhil Uddemari, known for "Raju Weds Rambayi," in the lead roles. The film is being produced by passionate producer Boosam Jagan Mohan Reddy under the Arrow Cinemas banner as Production No. 2. Badrappa Gajula is directing the film.

"Crazy Kalyanam" is set for a grand worldwide theatrical release on October 16, on the occasion of Dasara. In a recent interview, director Badrappa Gajula shared the highlights of the film.

The final copy of our film "Crazy Kalyanam" is ready. We initially planned to release it on October 30, as we thought we would not get enough theatres due to the release of big films this month. However, when "Adarsha Kutumbam" was postponed, we felt that our film would get enough theatres, so we changed the release date to October 16. The entire shoot has been completed, and we are currently shooting a promotional song. A few big films are releasing on October 16, but ours is a family entertainer, so we hope family audiences will come to theatres to watch it. Although this is a Telangana-based film, the dialogues and dialect are easy for everyone to understand.

I am from Bandamailaram, near Medchal in Telangana. I was born and brought up there. My family has roots in the art forms. I heard that my great-grandfather used to narrate stories while playing a musical instrument. My grandfather and father used to perform different characters in Bhagavatham plays held in our village. They used to share those experiences with me. In that way, I developed an interest in cinema without even realising it. I wanted to tell the stories I had in mind through films. I never worked as an assistant director. I completed a Bachelor of Fine Arts course and made documentaries related to government schemes and tourism films. I made more than 200 videos. During that process, I travelled to villages and interacted with people. The Iranian film "Children of Heaven" inspired me as a filmmaker. After watching it, I realised that cinema is about incidents happening around us, the experiences of our lives and the characters we see in our surroundings.

During my student days, we used to attend our friends' weddings. Compared to boys who are studying, girls are often married off at a younger age in the name of society and family honour. Girls also have dreams of studying well and achieving something in life, but their parents arrange their marriages early.

While all their classmates attend the wedding as guests and enjoy themselves, the girl is the one getting married. I started thinking about what might be going through a girl's mind in such a situation, and that is how the idea for this story began. In the name of culture and family honour, we should not impose our thoughts on girls without understanding what they think and what they want to achieve in life. Even today, girls are getting married while they are still students. My intention is to bring about a change in this situation. Initially, I wanted to narrate the story to Anupama garu, but I was unsure whether she would agree.
